Some could have rationalized it as flavor text or that the actions itself is just as bad as lobotomy. Different people perceive descriptions differently, which often causes a disconnect between readers. I'm pretty sure some clueless voters that ended up getting not what they were expecting were in the fray.

I'd say that
>Take them for your own, nya.
is a variation of "it's interesting".

This one is more concerned with getting knowledge for knowledge's sake, since you can't use what Yuma learned as Chiaki in-character.
>cmon let's not be in the dark for once.

This one suggests wanting to see the karmic backlash as a reason to mindrip.
>Oh nothing, just karma whiplash~

And how are we supposed to interpret
>FINE GEEZ
or the
>Fuck it, fine. I want to know
They don't seem too preoccupied with character motivation, only player motivation to acquire knowledge they can't use when we shift back to Chiaki.

How is it out of character for someone who is in their very nature a sneaky, backstabbing, betraying, cowardly count? Yuma holds herself to a different standard. It's part of her character, we dictated that. As a result it was NOT an OOC option, it was the most in character choice we could have picked. Yuma thinking herself so selfimportant that she has the right to help Malal of all people, Yuma thinks her friendship entitles her to help her friend walk the straight and narrow even though he friend is the only one who can see the curves.

Except that isn't the case because a flashback is dependent on the characters taking part in it. If said characters had interactions/relationships with others, and we've seen how they handle things, having them suddenly break all that and act completely differently without proper explanation just doesn't work for readers who care about that sort of thing/aren't just voting for "let's see what happens when we do random things". The problem is that we do NOT know how Yuma handled her relationships. We know how she treats Haruka, Chiaki and Kyouko and that is it. She treats each of them differently and her feelings towards them in the flashback are consistent with how she is in the present,
We didn't know anything about her relationship with Cavefish, Malal, or anyone else. It is something we are building during this flashback.
Also, it doesn't exactly matter how things change here, because it is a flashback. We are in the past, meaning that whatever happens here will then fit in to develop the Yuma Chiaki knows.
Also, the explanations are given by Decu.

It's perfectly in character and your continual and outright refusal to accept that it works just fine as characterisation is part of the problem.

Nothing has changed except YOUR perception of Yuma.

You let out a sigh, considering the foreigner's crude and awfully blunt request. It's...it hurts even to try and think back on, just what you did back there at Headquarters - but it's for the sake of the mission. And from where you're standing, it looks like Alondight won't give up even if you refused her, and you don't really want to drag this out for too long.

So you do. You give her the Disney version of what you did that had Malal acting less of the cool, composed Equerry that she'd always been and more of the violently-angry hooligan that the rumor mill had always described her as before she wore the suit. Leaving out the more...unsavory of details out, making it clear that those details themselves are something that even your disgraced self would balk at revealing to another Officio.

Your third confession in the same day, you note idly as you finish. Leaving you just as empty and cold as the previous two.

"A bit vague, but I can reasonably infer from what you've left out." Alondight nods after a moment, her clawed fingers steepled in front of her face. "So after condemning Malal of the same sin - or at least a worse equivalent of it - you decide to commit it anyway, in your desperation to prove your Rank Leader's innocence. Even when you knew that such an act has very dire consequences, both physical, mental and moral."

She touches the tips of her claws together, one after another, creating a series of clicks that almost sounded insectile. A deathwatch beetle, cursing the living. "And after you confessed this to your rank leader - a brave, but stupid act, I will be honest - she declared that your doing has placed this particular mission in jeopardy, and this entire assembly in unescapable mortal peril. Am I still on track so far?"

You nod, wincing from behind your faceplate. ...Yes, she got all the details correct. Or at least, those you've been telling her earlier.

"...I see." It's here that Alondight turns to Enyo, the raven-haired Marshal having recovered from her sudden and forced feeding. "See? They're not really all that different from us, I find. Culexus do make mistakes just like us regular folk."

...What?

"Mistakes," The High Marshal turns back to you, smiling. "You've made a mistake, Chitose Yuma. Everyone makes them. Men, women, mundanes, Magical Girls...." She gestures to you with a claw-tipped hand, then to herself. "...Knights. All of us make mistakes, and when we do, it's often at our worst, our most unguarded. And yes, most of the time they have far-reaching consequences that we will regret for the days to come - but even then, mistakes are no reason to refuse a macaron when it's offered to you by a pretty girl. They certainly aren't worth brooding over."

Despite yourself, you couldn't help but laugh. ...What the hell is she saying? Wasn't she listening to a word you said? Didn't she hear what Malal was SCREAMING earlier, while she beat you up until you were choking on your own blood? Didn't she get the gravity of what you did?

Even when you should've known better. Even when Malal had never given you reason not to believe her today, the same as all the other days. You still suspected her of...THAT. You thought the worse of her, and that's why you did that THING.

Perfect. Narrative. Continuity.

Characterisation is fluid! Oh man, who the fuck would have ever guessed that!? Not only that, but characters are sometimes not what they appear to be on the surface!

Yuma is still a consistent character, just not consistent in the way that some people voted for. Your interpretation of the character is no more valid than anybody else's interpretation, and when you get outvoted, you need to accept it and move on.

"I'm not saying what you did was right, or free of blame. I certainly won't say that you're forgiven for it." Alondight frowns as she delicately picks another macaron from her bag. "But a mistake is a mistake. It's happened in the past, and to dwell upon them like how you've been doing so the entire trip is useless. Moreso than that, it's insulting to us Templars, who you've allegedly killed because of this sin of yours, which I'm very, very displeased about. I don't like being dead." She turns to Enyo again. "I don't like being dead, do I, Enyo?"

"No, High Marshal."

"Mistakes will always be made. A fact of life, and not worth agonizing over." Alondight points at you with the macaron balanced precariously between fleshmetal claw and fingertip. "What's important is how we deal with the mistakes we've made. You've already proven that you regret what you did, or at least feel remorse, and that's well and good. Perhaps that's enough for a priest to grant you forgiveness, if that's what you want." She takes a bite out of the treat, chewing thoughtfully. "It's time to ask yourself, though - what do YOU want, Chitose Yuma?"

What do you want? You echo her question. ...You're not sure.

"Not a bad answer, as far as answers go." The High Marshal smiles. "Only you can answer that, and hopefully you have enough time to find out just what. But I can hazard a guess of what you DON'T want. May I?"

...Yeah, sure. Why not.

"Pity." Alondight's smile fades. "Because that's the only thing I feel for you, staring at someone who can't even appreciate a pre-fight macaron." She tosses you her half-eaten treat, which you very nearly drop as you make to catch it. "We are about to engage the most powerful Witch that threatens all of existence, and you're sitting here MOPING. Feeling sorry for yourself."

The High Marshal's voice turns rough, losing its silken civility. "Where is the famous brutality of the Murderers that I keep hearing of so much? I expected something more than sulking, spoiled children."

What? She's...no, that's stupid. You're just--you don't want their fucking pity! You did something horrible! And with your selfish fuckup - which she seems to be so happy making light about - you've compromised this entire operation and potentially killed everyone here, along with the rest of the fucking world!

You didn't know just when in your tirade that you rose to your feet, but you find yourself here now, standing over Alondight. She follows suit slowly after, her wheels making her tower over you by a good few inches.

"Really? Have you, now?" Her voice, ice-cold, sends a chill down your spine. "Enyo, can you confirm that Walpurgisnacht has not yet occured, and that we're all not currently dead?"

A cough, and a clanking noise. "...Confirmed, High Marshal." The stoic Marshal replies. "On both counts."

"You swear upon your life?" Alondight says without looking back at the armored girl. Another clank.

"Of course, High Marshal."

...What's that supposed to mean? Of course it hasn't happened yet! But that's beside the point, Miss Malal said--

"What Malal says is pure prophecy and therefore unreliable." You blink at this, at the bald-faced absurdity of it, and make to snarl an angry-worded rebuttal when Alondight raises a claw hand. "Hear me out. The Second, as an Officio, has always taken stock with prophecies and prognostications. We value them just like any other Officio. And I am certainly not calling Miss Malal's skills into question."

Then why--

"Because it hasn't happened yet." Alondight snarls. "Prophecies can be changed. They can be denied. If we fight hard enough, if we kill many enough, then even the most accurate prediction can be thwarted, or even wiped out entirely." She crashes a clenched fist against her breastplate. "'Carve out your destiny with your own blade, for prophecy is the excuse of the weak and dead men.' The First Knight said that to the Black Shieldmaiden, just before they came to blows. Do you know of the passage?"

You shake your head. You...never read too deeply into that kind of stuff.

"A pity. Nevertheless, there it is." The High Marshal gestures to the assembled Templars. "We are still alive, we are still ready to fight, we are still willing to carve our names on the Great Archenemy's flesh so that when we banish her back into the hell from whence she came, her sisters will know fear." She claps one hand on your shoulder. "So whatever your sin is, regret it, but do not let yourself be consumed by it. Despite what Miss Malal keeps on yammering about, we do not plan on dying so ignobly - and we will ensure that you and your sisters won't, either."

This...this is new.

You're actually being made to feel better about everything by a foreigner. An outsider of the Officio, at that.

Stranger things have happened, you think, as you look down at the half-eaten macaron resting on your gloved palm. It's a green color, the shade of your own hair.

How do you react?

[]Eat the macaron. They're right. There'll be time for regret later. You should focus on redeeming yourself. And...yes, there's always a chance Malal's predictions may prove to be wrong. You just have to try hard enough.
[]Throw the macaron away. The foreigner doesn't know anything about you, or what you did. She shouldn't speak so fucking lightly.

You really need to draw a big ol' mental line between the narrative part of a quest and the game part.

One influences the other, yes, but at the end of the day as long as events are justified and consistent in narrative, the playerbase cannot be blamed for them.

In terms of story, Yuma did everything she did because she wanted to, not because voices in her head told her to do. She had a reason to do these things, even if it wasn't a good reason, and it didn't go against what we already knew of her character.

You need to understand that the players decide WHAT the characters do, but they do not decide WHY they do it, or HOW. That's why they are characters and not paper cut-outs.

You shake your head at this, before flipping up your visor with your free hand. A wry smile on your face as you feel both the train's climate control and the stare of forty knights on your exposed skin.

This...this shouldn't be working. For fuck's sake, you...you're not supposed to be cheered up even slightly by a bunch of people who you're never going to see again after this! Christ!

And yet, as you lift the macaron up to your mouth to take a bite - your teeth digging into the soft, crumbly, candy-sweet shell, at the same time that something warm and wet trickles down your cheeks, blurring your vision as you try to blink your eyes - you realize that she's right. The Templars are right.

You did something wrong. Yes. You made a horrible, awful mistake that you'll have to atone for.

And yes, Malal may hate your guts to the point that she probably won't even mind if she saw your dismembered corpse, your ruined vox replaying your screams for mercy over and over again.

But it's no reason to wallow in self-pity. No reason to curl up and die and let the world crush you in its inexorable roll towards annihilation.

There's still some right to be carved out of your failures. Some honor to be torn away from the burning wreckage that you've gotten yourself into.

Of course, that's only if you stop being such a little bitch about your mistakes and survive long enough to do so.

As you finish the macaron - the last few bits of it going down your throat as you swallow - you open your eyes to see the Templars standing up from their seats, facing you. Enyo and Alondight herself are at the head of this impromptu formation, and with a shouted command from the raven-haired, robot-limbed Marshal, all forty Knights crash their armored fists into their breastplates in a unified salute.

"So will you fight with us, Chitose Yuma? Or will you just sit here and wait for death?"

Is it bad that every time someone brings up these three-in-a-bed scenarios, I always end up just picturing Chiaki becoming ever increasingly exasperated at coming home to one or more callidus wearing her face engaged in some humiliating form or sexual play?

...You narrow your eyes at the High Marshal, before reaching up and slamming your visor back down. "What the hell are you talking about? Of course I'll fucking fight," you growl. "If we fight hard enough, if we kill enough, then we can change the future." Even Miss Malal said as much, and she was a slave to her own predictions.

"Now you look like one of the Ninth's proper bastards." Alondight grins, and it's here that she unpins what looks like a rather grandiose badge of their heraldic cross from her articulated chestplate.

"Before every Crusade - every military action we go out to undertake - the highest-ranking Templar picks someone from her squad to serve as the Emperor's Champion. It's not a commanding rank, so you can't order me or Enyo around, mind, but more of a marker for someone we believe will have a pivotal role in this Crusade. Someone to seek in the shitpit of curses and hurt feelings of war and to fight alongside, knowing that to fight alongside them is to fight with the Will of the First Knight."

She pins the magnetic clasp of the badge onto your suit, and it locks into place just beside your 'Novice' badge.

"It's a very important thing for us, so act sufficiently impressed," Alondight leans in and hisses in a stage whisper.

Not that she needed telling you, this...this is actually one of the highest honors the Second can give anyone outside their Officio, really.

"Behold, fellow Knights!" The High Marshal turns around, one clawed hand gesturing to the assembled warriors. "Behold and welcome Chitose Yuma, the Emperor's Champion of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade!"

They bang their fists against their chestplates once more, a deafening crash that rattles the train's windows.

All while completely confounding - and terrifying - the civilians unfortunate enough to be stuck in the same car as a crazy girl in a leather suit and forty others in black steel armor.

“Hold her down, please, she's going under hypervolemic shock.”

The patient thrashed and twitched on the ground, vomiting gore from a mouth already stained red, clawing at her savior as pain wracked her ruined form. The grass beneath her was already stained dark red with blood.

“Attaching two large-bore IVs. Kanae, five migs of morphine, stat.”

The surgeon's voice was the eye of this storm of death and blood. Though soft, it cut through the sound of the girl's death throes, a calm center to the dying patient and the frantic assistants.

“BP's dropping fast!”

“Blood Knight's panties, was that her pancreas? I think that was her pancreas—”

“Focus, please. She's trashing too much, we'll have to put her under. Yomi, I need ten ccs of—”

It was a pointless battle, the surgeon knew. The girl was just too far gone. Superhuman fortitude meant her wounds, which would have instantly killed a grown man twice over, merely granted her a slow, painful death. The Narthecium, a technolgical marvel as it was, was of little help here, though even with the best operating suite in existence there wasn't any hope. But she fought on nonetheless.

Poor girl, thought the surgeon, as she wrestled to insert the IV. Such bright, beautiful blue eyes, marred as they were by desperation and pain. She might have been quite pretty if her jaw hadn't been torn off and half her face reduced to mush.

Twenty seconds later, the girl let out a wet, gurgling death-rattle and at last fell still.

“...she's dead.”

A pregnant silence hung in the air.

It died with the tell-tale click of a smartphone camera.

“Haha!” cackled Kanae. “Oh man, that expression's fucking hilarious!”

“You wanna do the 'Welcome...TO THE WORLD OF TOMORROW~!' prank when she wakes up, or should I?”

“Nah, I think Yasuko did that one already.”

“Shit...”

Such disrespect, thought the surgeon. Such disregard for the dead. She might have admonished them, back when she first started her grim work. And she did, once.

They had replied, “So...what? The Incubator's just going to regenerate them in, like, an hour, anyway.” At the time, there wasn't much she could say to that. Now, she wasn't sure if she cared enough to try a rebuttal.

The surgeon stood up and began wiping her blood-soaked hands on a clean towel. “Kanae, Kinoko, please seal the body in a bag and get it to Officio headquarters immediately. Here is the Soul Gem.” She handed Kanae a small metal object in the shape of a vial—a phylactery, for the safe transport of a Soul Gem. The two assistants nodded and began lugging the corpse to a nearby van.

Such a binary thing, this job, mused the surgeon. Between inhuman fortitude, magical regeneration, and resurrection, there were few wounds suffered by Magical Girls that required skilled surgery. Either it was effectively a papercut, or nothing a bit of magic couldn't fix, or the victim in question simply got a new body. Or, of course, the girl lost her Soul Gem, and no amount of medical knowledge could save her. That meant pretty much all of her patients fell into two categories: right as rain in a few days at most, or a corpse. Almost none in between.

She'd joined the 9th Officio's Apothecarion to save lives, but the struggle to beat back death simply didn't exist in her line of work. Nonetheless, she'd made a promise, a promise unheard by any but herself, and she decided to stick with it.

The surgeon gave the blue-eyed girl one more lingering glance as Kanae and Kinoko took her body away. They carried it unceremoniously, Kanae grasping the arms and Kinoko pulling at the legs, past the rest of the girl's squad mates, who shot the body and its bearers looks of disgust. 'No wonder they call us “Corpse Takers”,' thought the surgeon.

She went about doing last minute inspections, last minute check-ups to see that all injuries were as well taken care of as they could be. When her duties were done, she walked back to her van—more akin to an ambulance than a car, what with the medical suite occupying where the passenger seats used to be. She slipped out of her gore-streaked surgeon's smock and pulled on a set of fresh ones, ones that wouldn't stain the interior of her car with the worst kind of body fluids, and disengaged her Narthecium, purifying it with a few bursts of antiseptic.

She was ready. Ready for a long shower, a hot meal, and a good night's sleep. She called over another of her assistants, asking with a tired smile to be driven back to Headquarters. A well-deserved break for a job well done.

...a 'job'. A cost-cutting measure. That's what it amounted to now, she supposed. She stared at the hands that had been wrist-deep inside a girl's torso just minutes before. She'd been sewing flesh and fighting death, she realized, not to save a life but so that an alien cat-creature could manage his resources more efficiently. It sounded like a boardroom business decision, which it was.

Where was the fire she'd had when she first started this work? She thought second chances at life were supposed to be a bit more exciting than this.

Ah, well.

She silently disengaged her power and shivered as the pain and soreness, blocked out by her magic, came flooding back in. With the pain came the fatigue, and with the fatigue came the waves of sleep.

As the car rolled its way back home, the surgeon dreamed. She dreamed of a Witch made of blurred and faded blocks of color, and she dreamed of black-pinioned wings. Her white lab coat was draped across her like a blanket.

On the shoulders of the coat was a badge. It bore the Helix sigil of the Apothecarion, alongside a title and a name:

Apothecary Secunda, Officio IX: Touno Asai

An hour later, Touno found herself in the Officio's medical wing. The Apothecarion served as the Officio's bio-medical R&D facility, but it also housed plenty of hospital beds for injured Magical Girls.

Today's patient was a certain red-haired Eversor.

“What's up, doc?” said Kyoko, her face split by a happy grin. “Heard you got back from a Witch Hunt! How'd that one go?”

Touno couldn't help but make a little smile at her patient. “The Witch Hunt itself? It was a success, from what I heard. I also heard there were minimal casualties, which is always good.”

“Eh? Oh, I was askin' about how all that shit went for -you-, doc.” Kyoko's beaming face sank into one of sympathy. “I don't envy your job, doc. It can't be easy, trying to stitch back up people you know on a daily basis...”

Giving her patient another small smile, Touno shook her head as she pulled out an orange medicine bottle. “We had one fatality, and she'll be fine with a few day's bed rest. But thank you for asking, Miss Sakura.”

Touno was in her usual outfit, now, out of her work clothes, and certainly not her Magical Girl uniform—the last time she put that one on was about a year ago. A thin violet chain bearing her Soul Gem wrapped around her waist, the precious jewel itself resting to the lower right of her belly button, just below the appendix. It adorned a simple, long-sleeved deep indigo dress that ended at the knees, hiding a tall, shapely figure that was the envy of much of the Officio—if the grabby hands in the showers were any indication—with a white shawl sitting about her shoulders like a mantle. On top of all of this was her white labcoat, indistinguishable from others of its kind save for the Apothecarion badge on the right shoulder.

They said her outfit made her look like a nun trying to cosplay as a scientist. She was never quite sure whether they said that to make fun of her or not.

Brushing aside her long purple hair, she pulled off the bottle's top and shook out a couple of pills.

“Here is your daily dose of antibiotics. You did finish your dinner, correct?”

Kyoko let out her trademark guffaw. “Of course I did! You know me, hungry as a horse!”

Touno's head tilted slightly, her warm red eyes boring into Kyoko's. “Including the salad?”

The red-haired Eversor wilted under the gaze. “I, well, uh...”

Staring intensified, mixed with a hint of disappointment. “Miss Kyoko...”

“Okay, okay!” said Kyoko. She threw her hands up in exasperation. “You know I hate beets! But the fucking hospital chef keeps making salad with beets! It's like she hates me or something!”

“Miss Kyoko, I'm not entirely sure if Chef Hashimoto is aware of your...dislike of beets. I don't think he's doing this personally.”

“Then he must be a frigging psychic or something! Either way, get that shit away from me, beets suck.”

Touno's look of disappointment deepened into a frown. “But Miss Kyoko, if you don't finish your food I can't let you take your antibiotics, and if you don't finish your antibiotics regimen I can't let you go. What would Equerry Miki think of this?”

Kyoko's face turned into one of despair. “Fuck me, really? You'd go that low? You're killing me here, doc!”

“I believe I'm doing the very opposite, Miss Kyoko.”

“Fine,” sighed Kyoko as she threw herself back into her pillows. “Give me the damn beets.”

Touno's slight smile came back again. “Thank you, Miss Kyoko. Please make sure to chew thoroughly.”

“Yes, mom.”

As Kyoko set about crunching through her salad, wincing every time her teeth sank into a beet, the doctor and the patient gave the television a look. On the screen was the daily news.

>> ☐ Corpse Master Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)13:57:13 No.31976569

'SIXTH BODY FOUND, LOCAL SERIAL KILLER SUSPECTED

'A sixth body was discovered earlier today, found brutally murdered under the Akiha Bridge. Like the previous five, the victim was a local petty criminal, previously suspected with multiple cases of sexual assault and violence against local high school girls. The gruesome way in which the victim was killed—apparently twisted and bent by possibly industrial machinery—matches the pattern of the previous victims, and has left police baffled...'

“Geez,” said Kyoko through a mouthful of lettuce. “The hell makes someone do shit like that? Actually, the hell DID shit like that?”

A grimace. Touno hoped the suspect was a Witch or a Familiar, and not another Magical Girl. She, too, wasn't sure what could drive a someone to kill a human being in such a way, and she wasn't sure if she wanted to know either.

As Kyoko finished her meal, they talked to kill the time. Most of it was Kyoko telling her doctor whatever was on her mind while Touno nodded and said “mhm” every so often.

Eventually, the topic wandered to Touno herself.

“Say, doc,” said Kyoko. “You never talk much about you. Why don't ya tell me something about yourself? Favorite movie, favorite food...” Here she made a coy smile, revealing a small garden's worth of spinach stuck between her teeth. “...any cute boys and/or girls you've been checking out...?”

Touno blinked. It took her a moment to come up with a response. “W-well, I suppose I like udon noodles. I can't say I watch movies very often, so I don't really have a favorite movie.”

Kyoko's smile grew wider. “I asked three questions, doc.”

Touno merely smiled back. “No one in particular.”

“Really?” said Kyoko, leaning forward.

“Yes, really.”

“...reaaaally?”

“Ah,” said Touno, ignoring Kyoko.”I see you've finished your salad.” She held up the antibiotics. “It's time for your daily dose, Miss Kyoko.”

“Uuuugh...”

>> ☐ Corpse Master Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)13:58:25 No.31976587

Kyoko was gulping down the pills when Touno's phone vibrated. 'Garra', read the Caller ID. She answered, and a voice like rumbling gravel greeted her.

“Asai, it's Garra. Incubator's office, stat.” Before Touno could even say hello, the line went dead.

The Incubator? Thought Touno as she gazed at her phone. Kyuubey? What could he (it?) possibly want with her? A performance review, or did she mess something up?

She glanced at Kyoko, who was muttering something about beets and medicine.

Oh well. Time to find out.

When Touno arrived at the Incubator's office, she found herself sitting in a waiting room chair. The Incubator was busy, she was told. Curious, she thought, to have someone brought to your office just to make them wait, but then she'd never quite understood Kyuubey.

So to pass the time, she fished a paper clip out of her pocket. She turned it over and around in her fingers, and twisted it. Again and again, making it bend and bend and bend and bend and bend...

Soon enough, what used to be a paper clip was now a tiny ball of bent metal.

One of her colleagues had caught her doing this, once. Touno told her that she found the act relaxing. Some people liked to punch bags to blow off steam, others liked to fuck. She, on the other hand, simply enjoyed the tactile sensation of twisting and bending things with her fingers.

Given her colleague's reaction, Touno decided to keep her hobby to herself.

She was still staring at the former paper clip when the blonde secretary chimed in. “Miss Asai, the Incubator will see you now.” Her warm-honey smile became an apologetic frown. “I'm sorry I had to keep you waiting for so long...”

Touno's answer was a small smile of her own. “Thank you Miss Mami, I didn't mind.” Waving the golden-haired celebrity goodbye, she stepped into Kyuubey's office.

>> ☐ Corpse Master Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)13:59:35 No.31976596

For someone who commanded wealth, influence, and violent force to equal a small country, the Incubator of the Ninth liked to keep his (its?) room surprisingly modest. It was well-sized, just large enough to not feel cramped, but not so large it felt unnecessarily big. A well-made oak desk bore a computer monitor and stacks of papers, sitting atop a nice red carpet adorned with generic images of flora and fauna. A set of modern-looking chairs, designed for both comfort and aesthetics, sat in front of the desk. Perhaps all of this was just to the taste of the odd little cat-alien. Or perhaps he (it?) was merely interested in paying lip service to the human concept of aesthetics.

The only thing that felt off about the office was the back wall—an entire wall devoted to a dozen, a hundred monitors, each a brick in the Incubator's substantial knowledge base. Normally, the monitors would be turned on, displaying a storm of data only the Incubator could comprehend, but at the moment they were all off. A black monolith, silently staring down at whoever Kyuubey deigned to speak to.

Sitting on an ornate chair behind the oak desk was Kyuubey.

“Ah, Asai Touno, I apologize for the delay. Last minute business, you see.”

Many Magical Girls found the Incubators to be unsettling, and Touno was no exception. With a figure that looked like the bizarre offspring of a cat and a rabbit, a mouth that always seemed to be a very slight smile, and eyes—particularly the eyes—that were blood-red, always staring, unblinking, at you, maybe studying you or maybe scheming against you...well, feeling unsettled before an Incubator was almost inevitable.

Perhaps that was their intent.

>> ☐ Corpse Master Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)14:00:44 No.31976613

“You appear to be somewhat nervous; if that is the case, I would advise you to relax, as you are most assuredly not in trouble.” At this, Touno blinked. “Rather, you've been doing quite satisfactorily. Since you'd been made Apothecary Secundus, overall patient satisfaction with treatment and bedside manner have increased noticeably, and mission-related non-permanent fatalities have lowered 2%.” Kyuubey tapped a key, no doubt reading data off his monitor.

“The latter figure, of course, does have to take into account that few non-permanent fatalities are viably treatable. Regardless, your efforts mean the heat death of this universe has been delayed by a marginal measure of time. Well done.”

Touno couldn't read Kyuubey at the best of times, and at the moment, as tired and in need of a shower and a hot meal as she was, she was uncertain whether the Incubator was being sarcastic.

“It's because she cares,” came a grunt from the side. Touno turned at the sound—she'd been unaware of the third member of the conversation until now.

Garra Valthex, Apothecary Primus of Officio IX. A rather short, dusky-skinned, brown-haired nineteen-year old from outside Japan. Called 'The Corpse Master' by the others, which Touno felt was logical—a fitting title for the mistress of the Corpse Takers.

Garra, as a saying in the Second goes, wore her wounds with a smile. Very literally, in her case. A scar at the left corner of her lips, one that she didn't or couldn't heal, left her constantly sneering at the world. Given the rest of her personality, Touno supposed that the scar saved Garra a lot of trouble.

“Pardon me, Garra Valthex?” asked Kyuubey. His (its?) head tilted -just so-, in what seemed like mimicry of human body language.

>> ☐ Corpse Master Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)14:01:57 No.31976627

“It's because she cares about the corpses,” said Garra. Touno wasn't sure if Garra was actually sneering or not. “Don't ask me why, she just does. I dunno what she sees in those things, a stiff is far more interesting to study if you ask me.”

“Now, now,” chided Kyuubey, “Asai's work has reduced the burden on my end of regenerating non-permanent fatalities. The fewer regenerations I have to perform, the more contracts I can make, and the more contracts I can make—”

“Yes, yes,” said Garra, waving off the Incubator. “In any case, she actually fucking cares.” She turned to Touno. “That's why you get to be the new Apothecary Primus.”

Wait, what.

“Dear me, Valthex, you ruined my surprise.” If there was disappointment in Kyuubey's voice, Touno was too stunned to hear it. “But what Valthex is saying true, Asai. As of this moment, you are now the Apothecary Primus of Officio IX.” Another tilt of the head. “I suppose congratulations are in order? Perhaps you'd like a party, with some cake? You should consult Mami Tomoe for the latter, she is quite adept at baking.”

It took Touno a moment to find her voice again.

“B-but Incubator Kyuubey, I...why...”

“Because,” said Garra, “I asked our all-powerful kitty here if I could retire. Pursue my real passion: autopsies.” Her scar-smile widened. “He said 'yes', and so now YOU get to be the new Corpse Master.”

Kyuubey spoke up. “To be accurate, that's not the only reason for this promotion, Asai. I would have been far more hesitant to approve of Valthex's...request if I felt that our Apothecary Secundus was not ready to step in and take over.”

Touno still wasn't entirely sure what to say. “I...thank you, Incubator,” she said as she bowed low, “For both this promotion and your trust in me. Though I am unworthy of this honor, I will do my utmost to not fail you.”

>> ☐ Corpse Master Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)14:03:14 No.31976644

“Don't be so modest now,” said Kyuubey. Was that mild admonishment she heard in his (its?) voice? “You are quite capable, you know.”

A pause.

“Oh, before I forget, there is one more reason why you have been promoted to Apothecary Primus.”

Garra's smile grew even wider.

“You get to Murderface's personal medi-bitch, Asai. How does that make you feel?”

Murderface? As in...the Warmaster? As in, Chiaki Matsuda, formerly known as Girl A?

Kyuubey admonished Garra again for spoiling the surprise, but Touno paid this no heed. Personal physician to the Warmaster? And to Chiaki Matsuda, no less?

-salvation came soaring in on black-pinioned wings-

She felt dizzy. Giddy, even. The fulfillment of a promise that should have been kept one year ago.

“That was the other reason I chose you for promotion,” said Kyuubey, returning to the matter at hand. “Given how long this Officio has gone without a Warmaster, and given how...unscrupulous our current one can be, I'd rather have the best medical expert we have ensure she does not become a permanent casualty.” After a pause, the Incubator continued.

“Meanwhile, approximately one year ago, Warmaster Matsuda—known better as 'Murderface' at the time—rescued you and your squad from Witch Selene, resulting in no permanent fatalities in what should have been a total squad annihilation. Records also show you began Apothecary training immediately after the incident, despite no indication of post-traumatic stress disorder, any other mental issues, or noticeably decrease in combat performance.” A third head tilt. “I'd imagine those two things were connected. Is this, perhaps, another dimension of human gratitude?”

After another pause, the Incubator coughed into one of its ear-hands.

>> ☐ Corpse Master Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)14:04:23 No.31976656

“I digress. In any case, yes—this is the other reason why I decided promoting you Apothecary Primus was appropriate. It is quite fitting, after all, to have the Officio's highest ranking Apothecary be its highest ranking member's personal physician. Not to mention, given your history with Matsuda I'd imagine there would be a high degree of compatibility—”

“Whereas I,” said Garra, “think Murderface choking on her own goddamn golden gun while being flayed alive would be far too quick a death for her—”

“—one that might not exist with the current, well, now former, Apothecary Primus,” said Kyuubey, heedless of Garra's interruption. “That said...I do understand if this last duty makes you uncomfortable, Asai. If so, I would be happy to leave you as Apothecary Primus, and have another Apothecary attempt to be Warmaster Matsuda's personal physician—”

“I'll do it!”

Garra and Kyuubey jumped, at both the voice and the sudden slamming of hands on the desk.

“I'll do it! I'll absolutely do it! I'll start right now if you need me to!”

Kyuubey and Garra looked at Touno, then at each other, then at Touno again. There was a fire in those soft red eyes, one that neither of them ever recalled seeing.

“Well,” said Kyuubey, “this is a pleasant surprise. I honestly expected at least a little bit of hesitation.” A fourth tilt of the cat-rabbit head. “Very well, Asai, as you seem to be...eager to begin your new duties, I will make a formal announcement shortly. The Warmaster is currently indisposed, but when she returns I will endeavor to have her meet with you. Please do your best to keep our Warmaster healthy and whole, Asai, it would be most...inefficient if I were to have to find a new one so soon.”

Kyuubey's eyes bore into Touno's for a second, but she didn't relent. The Incubator broke off and began tapping something into his (its?) keyboard.

>> ☐ Corpse Master END Onceborn 05/07/14(Wed)14:05:49 No.31976671

“Now, if are no questions, I must respond to a most inflammatory e-mail communique sent from my brother Jyuubey. Goodbye, Asai, I expect the best from you.”

Nodding dumbly, Touno Asai walked out. She ignored the scathing goodbye from her former superior. She barely acknowledged Mami's more cheerful one as she left the office and made her way to her own room.

'At last...at last, I can finally...'

A promise she'd once made, an oath she'd once sworn.

'...I can finally tell her...'

Something warm fell on her hand. Through blurry eyes, she realized they were tears.

The last time she remembered crying was one year ago, inside a Witch's barrier, in the light of orange fire-blossoms, in the shadow of black-pinioned wings.

She realized this, and smiled.

A smile that grew into warm laughter.

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/11/14(Sun)10:26:35 No.32059165

You are a Magical Girl. You're not much of one, having screwed up an illustrious career as the prodigy of a certain legendary Culexus - one who ran an entire Officio on her own, while babysitting one of the most feared monsters who ever took up the contract - by making the worst decision of your life. A decision made with fear, with anger, with confusion - with emotion. All the things that the Culexus herself had taught you to kill whenever making an important decision - moreso when someone's life was at the line.

You don't know anymore if you made the right decision or not, only that you made one, and you have to live with the consequences. The only person you ever looked up to losing all faith in you is one of those consequences. Never being able to forget how scared Girl A looked at you before you tore her mind apart for secrets is another.

If there's a good side to all of this, though...it's probably your being able to walk right into your own awaiting death sentence, knowing that Malal had always been the incorruptible heroine you'd always known her as.

Hardening your resolve, more than ever, to redeem yourself in her eyes. By fighting hard enough, by killing as many of the enemy as you can that there is no other logical outcome but victory. Death is still a possibility, a sword hanging over your head - but it's the farthest from your mind at the moment. Only a startingly-cold clarity filled you now, an icy certainty that froze the fingers of fear curling around your heart and shattered them into powder.

This must be how it is, being a Black Templar. To look certain death in the eye and still be able to march into it feeling nothing but anticipation - even a healthy eagerness at their role, at the part they're about to play.

You look down to finger the heraldic cross their High Marshal had bestowed upon you earlier, on the train, along with the title of Emperor's Champion.

...Or maybe this was how Malal felt all the time - besides during that time you made her mad enough that she nearly beat you to death, had not it been for the Black Templars running intercession.

To be so calm and collected, not emotionally dead but governed completely by the logic of what she needed to do, what needed to be done. To be pragmatic enough to be able to meet her doom with nothing more than a nod - but not too much that she'd not bat an eye at your idea of interrogation.

Either way, you're ready now. You still considered yourself a traitor, and a liar but no longer a coward. No longer simply willing to walk to the yawning jaws of death - but to go running full-out into it, weapons blazing, eager to kill, rip and tear your way through the other side.

You are Chitose Yuma, disgraced Culexus of the Ninth.

And in a handful of minutes, you'll be doing all you can to prevent the end of the world, or die trying.

"This is it?" Alondight's voice echoes throughout the dimly-lit train tunnel that you've led the Black Templars through, your group coming to a stop in front of a large, unremarkable metal door with the words KEEP OUT painted across it in formal Japanese characters. "This is the infamous Teleportation Facility that the Ninth boasts of? Something hidden so clandestinely in a subway tunnel...?"

"Only place we could fit something this huge," You reply, remembering your own questions to Malal when she first introduced it to you. "Or this experimental."

A quick glance around, and your retinal display locks on to a camouflaged panel set on the wall beside the door - whereupon you tap out a string of 20 random-seeming numbers, before pressing your entire gloved palm against it. A beep, a grind of heavy mechanized gears, a hiss of vented pressure - and the entire door splits apart, revealing even more dimly-lit darkness, but this time illuminated by small LED path lights leading deeper into it. "Helps us hide the thing better, too - whoever tries to scan for it only thinks that it's a facility tied to the train system."

"As expected of the Ninth, I suppose." Alondight huffs as she rolls forward, her strange wheel-feet whirring to keep pace with you. A complete contrast to the clanking tread of the forty other Knights marching in file behind you. "All the resources in the world to develop such technological wonders. It's almost enviable."

...Don't they have something similar to this, back at the Second's Headquarters? Something they're also developing in-house?

>> ☐ Deculture 05/11/14(Sun)10:29:54 No.32059203

"We have our own projects," Alondight starts, which Enyo seems to pre-empt with a series of completely fake coughs. "...but nothing with this kind of intent or extent. Usually, we find our efforts focused on more...martial lines." She glances towards the raven-haired Marshal with a pointed look, before turning back to you. "Anything of this extent, we'd probably have to ask the Fourth for help, and those machine-loving wastrels are greedy with their secrets."

Ah. Well, you've never really encountered the Fourth before, so--

"And it's a good job you haven't." The blonde High Marshal frowns here. "It's one thing to be protective of your Officio's secrets, but it's another thing to be so guarded of them that you isolate yourself completely from everyone else just to do so. Even our very first Inquisitor had to bend her knee to have the Fourth help us with our armor, and even I know how much that cost us. I shudder to think what kind of agreement was made after that."

You try to think of something to say here, but thankfully, you reach the facility proper before you could. Another series of pressure-sealed doors, and you lead your group into a completely white, completely illuminated and completely circular room the size of the General Assembly Hall. Throwing you and your equally black-armored companions in stark relief. A raised circular dais stands at the very center, crackling with energy.

You're not alone, either. Milling about in the room, checking their suits, their weapons and their equipment is the rest of the Culexus Rank of the Ninth - and the tall one carefully loading shells into an oversized shotgun immediately catches your eye. Cavefish, with her customized shotgun MUSTAKRAKISH. You call her over with a wave, and she immediately waves back, mag-locking her weapon behind her and running towards you. Alondight recoiling at your side, a gasp leaving her lips. Probably--

"H-huge...! That's huge!"

...Yep. Usual reaction to anyone meeting your best friend.

"Yuma-chan!" Cavefish booms from behind her monstrously-skulled helmet. "You're late! We were all on pins and needles waitin' for you!" She laughs here, her voice thankfully coming through unmodified by her vox speakers. "Thought you were gonna miss the party!"

"Wouldn't miss it for anything," You reply, and you actually mean it. Whatever happened back at Headquarters feels like an age away, even if it happened merely hours ago.

"Oh, these are the guys coming with us?" Cavefish, ever so casual even with exalted company, reaches out with a massive, gloved hand. "I'm Cavefish, and welcome to the Teleportation Facility! We'd offer snacks and tea, but with everything about to go to shit in less than half an hour, I doubt anyone'll have time to keep it down long enough to digest it! Hahaha!"

Alondight's eyes are wide and staring as she looks up at Cavefish, before turning desperately to Enyo, who seems to be awestruck enough on her own. After a moment, the High Marshal extends a clawed hand, effortfully pulling on a smile.

"You have my thanks. I am High Marshal Raleigh Alondight, and this is my Marshal, Karasawa Enyo. And no, it's fine. We had enough to eat on the...the way here." The High Marshal murmurs, giving your best friend's hand a careful, but firm, handshake. "Is everything, um, in readiness? Will this work?"

"It should!" Cavefish nods. "Well, it could send us all screaming into the veil behind reality, where both body and soul are flayed in an eternal torment, but.." She shrugs. "That's never happened before, really, in the times we've used this!"

"Oh. And...and how many times has this been used in the past?" Alondight doesn't seem all that reasurred, but she's trying to sound like it.

"In total?" Cavefish tilts her head in thought, tapping the side of her helmet. "Oh! Twice, I guess!"

"...Twice." Alondight repeats. "That's...well, I suppose--"

"TWENTY MINUTES," An automated voice suddenly rings out. "TWENTY MINUTES BEFORE WALPURGISNACHT. THIS IS YOUR TWENTY MINUTE ALARM."

"TWENTY MINUTES!" Cavefish roars, startling Alondight near off of her wheels. "Culexus of the Ninth, do your final suit and weapon checks! If you're having suit pressure problems, get it fixed before we're on-platform, no one's going to be carrying duct tape in the shithole we're teleporting into! If I hear anyone complaining about venting pressure while we're there I'll de-suit you myself!"

"..." Both Marshals glance at each other, before Enyo meekly knocks her mechanical fist against her breastplate. "I'll have our Knights do the same. If you'll excuse me."

"I'll have to lead them in prayers, too," Alondight says, wheeling after the raven-haired Marshal, seemingly caught in the urgency of it now. "Enyo! Enyo, wait for me!"

"Nice couple," Cavefish says after a moment. "They married or something?"

What? You blink at your best friend. Married? ...You don't think so. Maybe, but...

Wait, there's no need to think about that right now. You need to arm up yourself! You don't have anything on you except your service crowbar!

"Yeah, Miss Malal emptied her own personal armory out for everyone to use today," Cavefish grins as she leads you to an adjoining room - this one as brightly-lit as the first, but covered wall-to-wall with all manner of guns and melee weapons. "Said you can pick anything you like, but it's probably a good idea to stick with what you know." She gestures to the oversized gatling gun stashed at the corner. Even Cavefish would have problems carrying it, much more actually using it. "Something you can kill with really reliably."

"Spear and the usual, huh? Gotcha." There's a smile in Cavefish's voice as she starts to pick items off their racks, bustling about with the fastidiousness of a mother preparing a child's lunch. "Miss Malal said you'd be picking that, and that I should get the stuff ready beforehand, but I wanted to make sure I asked you first." She shrugs her massive spiked shoulders. "Should've known, really."

...Well, why didn't she?

Cavefish pauses here. "I'm...not exactly sure? I mean, I know Miss Malal's really accurate with her predictions and everything, but I think there's a limit to certain stuff, you know?" She turns to look at you.

"I mean, don't tell Miss Malal or anything, but I think there's some stuff that you need to just let happen, even if you know for a fact that it's going to happen the way you predict it to." She continues to put your gear together here, metal clicking and snapping and locking together in quick succession.

"Sure, you picked what she knew you would, but there was still a chance you'd ask for something else." Your best friend falls silent again, before shaking her head, and then tossing you a holstered set of double Beretta 1991s, as well as a sawed-off hunting shotgun. You clip the former onto your suit belt, and mag-lock the latter on your back, replacing your crowbar. "I'm probably not making any sense here..."

No, she's...you know what she's talking about, yeah.

Did Miss Malal tell her anything else before you got here with the Templars, anyway? Anything about you?

"Hmm?" Cavefish grunts as she moves to an equipment bench, now putting your service spear together. "Oh, yeah, she did call earlier? Something about sending you ahead with the Templars, and how she'll be catching up later. Said she had something to attend to back at Headquarters that's really urgent."

She shrugs again. "Nothing else other than that, though. In fact there's been nothing but radio silence after that. Why'd you ask?"

...

"Did you get into trouble with Miss Malal again?" Your best friend turns to face you, both oversized fists attaching what looks like a high-caliber, underslung gun attachment into a speartip the shape and size of a machete blade. "You did, didn't you? Hah! Classic Yuma-chan!"

W-well, you--

"I don't know what kind of kick you get from pushing her buttons, but boy, you definitely do it every chance you get!" Cavefish shakes her head, before going back to her work. "What was it this time? Did you tell that High Marshal chick she had wheels for feet? Because you don't just tell someone they have wheels for feet, you know - you have to go into it all delicately-like."

...

How do you react?

Hah. Well. You'll go with that, then.

"Really!" Cavefish chuckles. "Don't really blame you, though. I wanted to point it out myself as soon as I saw her, but I was too busy muting my own helmet, just in case I did." She turns to glance at you again, the hate-filled glare of the monstrous skull painted on her helm completely at odds with her jovial tone. "But seriously, what'd you and Miss Malal get into this time? Did you get into another shouting match, or--"

"What's Protocol 8?" You cut her off with a bark from your own helmet, hoping that this wouldn't be the day you'd piss Cavefish off. That'd just put the shit cherry on top of this shit sundae. "I've never heard of that protocol number before. What's the procedure on that?"

Your best friend looks at you in silence as she continues to work, before turning back to her workbench. For a few moments, there's no other sound but the sound of Cavefish putting together your spear. "It's...well, personally, I think it's a bit too dramatic and stuff?" She begins hesitantly, but forges on after a sigh.

"But basically, Protocol 8 is a rank-wide announcement of gathering all your important personal effects an' puttin' it in a standard-sized storage cube." Cavefish mimes a 12 by 12 by 12 inch-cube's dimensions with her gloved hands. "Write your details on the top so it doesn't get mixed in with someone else's, as well as the name and address of whoever you're sending it to when...you know, Burgertime happens." She shakes her head, before turning to you once more. "See? Too dramatic. S'not like it's for sure that we're never gonna come back from this, right? Don't see the point of it much."

...Wait. So Protocol 8 is basically just you packing up all your stuff so that the Officio has an easier time to send it to your next of kin when you--

"Burgertime," Cavefish reminds you. "Use Burgertime. I'm not...not at peace enough with the concept to talk about it like that."

...Fine, when Burgertime happens?

"I guess? I can see how it's important, though, but yeah, why take out an entire Protocol number for it, right?" The taller Culexus turns towards you fully now, a fully-assembled spear in her hands. It's easily as tall as you, but in Cavefish's grip, it looks more like a toy than anything else. She twists the handle a few times, making sure it's locked properly, before tossing it to you. "Slipped you three extra mags for the gun attachment, by the way. Should be in the ammo compartment."

You catch the spear easily. ...It's heavier than it looks, but it's solid. Lethal. Blade looks pretty sharp, too.

Well, so long as it's not something crazy, you suppose. It does make sense, a bit. A neat little way to tell any surviving relatives of the perished Magical Girl that another Sparkle's been extinguished. Brought more questions than closure, especially for families of runaways or exiles.

It's here, then, that you realize you never got to pack YOUR belongings. You were too busy running Malal's errands to...!

"Oh, don't worry, I got you covered there." Cavefish's audible smile is back. "Did it myself, don't worry." A moment's hesitation. "Uh, I didn't really know which address to use, though, so I just used Miss Malal's quarters. That alright?"

You blink at your best friend, before nodding.

Yeah. Yeah, that's fine, you tell her.

Wouldn't have it any other way.

"TEN MINUTES." The automated voice booms, and the both of you look at each other, now. Each one fully armed, armored and ready to go.

"Always hated that alarm," Cavefish grumbles. "Too freakin' loud. Anyway, let's go, Yuma-chan. Before the Shirley Temples start griping."

...Black Templars, she means.

"Oh, I know what they're called," Your best friend guffaws. "Just missing the drink, is all. Would've been nice to have one last drink before everything goes to poop."

Ah. Well. Yeah, you agree.

A drink before all of this nonsense would've been great.

Yeah, probably. Thread has been pretty empty today.
Although, I have to wonder -- What exactly can happen between here and the end of the flashback? With the way Decu keeps on saying that this thread will be the end of the flashback, I don't think we're going to actually see the Walpurgisnacht fight and whatever goes wrong with Kharn. Because I think those two would need at least 8 threads to be told properly, being optimistic.

As the both of you make your way back towards the main teleportation chamber, you hear the sound of muted cheering and encouragement greet you. You blink at this, and realize that someone had activated the wall-screens to display visual Officio comms.

In one section, an entire street in the heart of an evacuated New York is clogged full of Magical Girls milling about, some of them ducking under bus stops and building foyers to get out of the rain - others simply toughing it out, getting soaked, and even making selfies with their friends. One particular obnoxious-looking girl with fluffy pink hair, her frilly striped costume also following that loathsome color scheme, seems intent on taking selfies with practically everyone she comes across.

Another section shows pretty much the same preparatory chaos in another part of the world, amounting up to five sections all in all. China. Egypt. What looks to be a part of the South Pole, based on just how freaking icy and snowed-on everything looks.

But one section in particular seems to have caught the rapt attention of the Black Templars, all of them watching with an intensity you didn't know possible. You blink at this - it's not like it's showing anything remarkable, besides a large number of Magical Girls talking and sharing what looks like small packed lunches in a deserted part of Australia. It's also here that you spot a familiar pair in the foreground - Sayaka and Kyoko, with the latter feeding the former from an instant noodles cup. The blue-haired Eversor trying very hard not to look very embarrassed, or self-conscious.

Well, at least they got there safely. You feel a pang of guilt here, before turning to Alondight, who's watching the feed with a clawed hand covering her agape mouth. Complete wonderment and awe in her features.

How do you react?

"Anything wrong, High Marshal?" You ask Alondight as you turn back to her. She seeing anything extra-heretical on the Australia video feed? Sure, you can guess how people living in a confirmed Death Continent is sorta heretical, but--

"What?" Alondight blinks at you after a moment, as if registering your presence only just now. "O-oh. Um, Yuma, not...not particularly." She looks back at the feed, eyes wide, wider than how they'd been when she looked upon Cavefish for the first time. "I...I realize this isn't the time, but are you familiar with the blue-haired girl there, on the screen? Frolicking with the one with red hair?" She points with a claw, and you don't have to use your retinal display to tell that she's pointing at Sayaka.

...Well, you're not sure about 'frolicking', but...that's Miki Sayaka, you tell her. Second-in-command of the Ninth's Eversor Rank, serving underneath the current Eversor Rank Leader Kirika Kure.

"Miki Sayaka...?" Alondight murmurs the name with an almost religious reverence, making you blink from behind your faceplate. It's here, then, that you hear Enyo cough behind you. "High Marshal, I realize you spend the most time by the First Knight's Coffin, moreso than Miss Arturia, but just her having blue hair and a sword by her side doesn't--"

Enyo's voice trails off into a gasp, and you frown at this. Doesn't what? What does only having blue hair and a sword NOT signify? These foreigners--

"A cape," The blonde High Marshal murmurs, and you turn back towards the screen to see Sayaka unfurling her cape with one hand, before drawing it over one shoulder. "A cape as white as snow, as incorrupt as justice, as pure as divine hatred." Alondight glares at the equally-astonished Marshal. "Is it just my imagination AGAIN, Karasawa? Or is that not three for three?"

A cape? Three for three? What are these foreigners talking about?!

>> ☐ Deculture 05/11/14(Sun)14:46:51 No.32063203

>>32063142

Instead of replying, Enyo falls to one knee, her armor clanking with the sudden movement. The move is quickly and dutifully replicated by the thirty other knights whispering to themselves, mailed fists touching the center of their breastplate-encased chests.

...Alright, it's literally five minutes before Walpurgisnacht, and these foreigners are starting to scare you more than the oncoming storm of despair and hatred.

"It's a portent," Alondight murmurs, shaking her head, still in quiet disbelief - and you blink here to see tears welling up in her eyes. "The First Knight sends us a portent to comfort us in the coming darkness. Right here, right now, we were meant to see her in the flesh, if not in our visions."

...The First Knight? Miki Sayaka? That's...that's ridiculous!

You glance back at the screen to see the blue-haired Eversor frown at the camera, flipping it off before dragging Kyoko out of frame.

Miki Sayaka's far and away the least religious person you know. Orderly, yes, a stickler for rules, yes, but religious...?

"It matters not who she is, just that it was arranged that we catch sight of her here. Now. Of all places, of all times." Enyo says from her kneeling position. "This is a portent from the First Knight - I'd stake my life on it."

A portent of what?

"Good fortune," Both Enyo and Alondight grin at each other, relief and eagerness mixed in equal measure. "A complete and overwhelming victory."

Enyo stands up, just as High Marshal Alondight begins barking out last-minute instructions - for both the Culexus and the Black Templars. Instructions that apparently she and Malal came up with.

Forty knights, Twenty Culexus, not counting Malal or the two Black Templar Officers. Each Culexus flanked and protected by two Black Templars. You will be protected by both Enyo and Alondight yourself.

Against all the shit that will be doing their level best to kill anything else that tries to approach the cocoon housing Walpurgisnacht.

"We'll be teleporting right into the thick of things," Cavefish explains. "As close to the Witch's Cocoon as it is possible. We'll be forming a ring of black armor and ceramite around it, for the maximum chance of success. Don't wait for orders - as soon as you find your footing, keep moving forward. Don't stop for anything, just move forward until you reach the cocoon, and then destroy it with everything we've got."

...Sounds simple enough.

"We've only got the one shot at this, mind," Alondight's delivery seems like it should be grim, if outright cruel, but apparently seeing Miki Sayaka flip the camera off really lifted her spirits. "The First Knight's watching from her coffin, so let's not muck about and get this done proper, alright?"

Cheers erupt, from both the Culexus and the Black Templars. Alondight raises her hand for quiet, and it's immediately granted.

"Let me stress that. Let's get this done proper." Her tone now is less jovial. "When Miss Cavefish said don't stop for anything, DON'T STOP FOR ANYTHING." She looks at her Knights, and then the Culexus in turn. "Knights, your objective is to protect the Culexus assigned to you. Culexus, your objective is to get to the cocoon and help your assigned Knights destroy the embryonic Witch with your powers. Everything else is secondary and can be ignored. Keep moving forward. Understood?"

More cheers, more fists banging into chestplates. Alondight nods, satisfied, before nodding at Cavefish.

Two minutes. Everyone is dividing into their teams, one Culexus, two Black Templars. Each trio standing at the edge of the platform, ringing the center and surrounding each other.

"Miss Malal's not answering," Cavefish suddenly voxes you. "I've been trying to hail her ever since the five-minute alarm. No dice. She said she was going to be back just in time for teleportation."

...Shit. Did Cavefish try the Incubator's Office, at least? Have someone patch her through to her cellphone, or something...

Cavefish shakes her head. "Nah, no dice there either. She didn't really say if she was going to be like, really late or not, and you know how she is with that kind of rule..."

Yeah. Malal always notifies ahead if she's going to be late for anything.

"What do we do?" Cavefish asks, just as the clock starts winding down to its final seconds. You blink at your best friend, before frowning. "Hey, you're the person she spends the most time with, and she never said anything about being late!"

"Is there a problem?" Alondight looks at you, then back at Cavefish. "You two have been silently nodding with each other for a while. Are you really that much in agreement?"

...Well. Looks like you'll have to make another snap decision, now.

[]Teleport as soon as the timer runs out. Malal can catch up when she gets here - but you're hoping she wouldn't be able to. Besides, she always did say 'punctuality always matters' or some shit like that, right?
[]Wait for Malal to come in, and then teleport. Doesn't matter if you're a bit late for Walpurgisnacht so long as she's there with you.
[]Try to pulse contact with Malal yourself.

At this point, this would seem like the most IC option. If Yuma goes without Malal and dies defeating WN, then she finds redemption in death, and her vision of Malal dying does not come true.

"ONE MINUTE TO WALPURGISNACHT. THIS IS YOUR ONE MINUTE WARNING."

...Really down to the wire this time, eh? You shake your head here, before turning to Cavefish and then tapping at your vox speaker with one padded finger, then at your temple. Your best friend seems to look at you with a certain amount of hesitation, before nodding and giving you a thumbs up.

Alright. Pulsing Malal as she is now is going to be really fucking rough. Not only are you going to try and re-establish mental contact with a mind you just shoved a traumatic memory into earlier - which opens you up to a reflex backlash kind of deal that may just knock you flat on your ass - but you may just be interrupting something very serious and very delicate, if she's being kept away from the biggest Witch Hunt ever. Which of course would piss her off more than she already are at you.

Still, you have to try.

Taking a deep breath, you pulse a message to her.

+ Miss Malal...? Miss Malal, this is Yuma, we're about to teleport, should we proceed as planned or await your arrival? Please confirm. +

The clock ticks down to thirty seconds, and still no reply. Just silence.

Twenty-five.

Twenty--

+ KHARN IS GONE +

Three words. Three simple words, flung out of nowhere, pulsed with enough fear and desperation that it is an ugly, jagged thing when it stabs into your mind. You taste your own blood flooding up your mouth again and you grit your teeth as you force it back down along with the sympathetic panic rising in your chest.

What's worse is that you couldn't stop it from spreading out from the rest of the Culexus. Each of them cry out in unison, some of their knees buckling, others having to be supported by their Black Templar companions. All of them looking towards you as you tried your best not to scream out loud.

+ KHARN IS GONE SHE'S HEADING THERE INCUBATOR'S TELEPORTER COULDN'T STOP HER WALPURGISNACHT YUMA GO PLEASE GO PLEASE KHARN IS GONE +

Malal. Earlier spitting hatred and fire at you, now screaming her death screams, begging for mercy.

Ten seconds. Five. Four.

"GO," You roar at your group. "GO! JUST FUCKING GO ALREADY!"

"YOU HEARD HER!" Alondight screams, just as the illumination inside the room goes blindingly bright, the circular platform underneath you vibrating, shaking, quaking almost. The smell of ozone filling your nostrils as the sound of a thousand throats screaming in pain fills your ears. "IT'S TIME! THE FIRST KNIGHT BE WITH US ALL!"

A thunderclap, an explosion of light, and the sensation of falling through the floor, through the world, without moving at all--

One.

Zero.

--And the last thing you hear before the world bursts apart into madness is the soft, silky-smooth giggle of a goddess driven absolutely insane with grief, with greed...

So who is the goddess. Pinky or Homucifer?

If its the latter (which would fit better), then the idea that Homucifer might have somehow used Yumas mind contact with Chiaki to get a hold on Yuma might actually have validity to it.

It occurs to me that the only time Chiaki has seen Homucifer, was during the seeing. And Yuma was in the room at the time. If thats the route Deculture wants to take, it would fit quite nicely.

Possible, but using Chiaki (or Girl A) would fit better. Homucifer and Chiaki/Girl A are essentially the same soul, so it would make sense that Homucifer could easily slip through Girl A into Yuma. Especially with Girl A's mind in tatters

There is also the fact that the mindrape was not supposed to last long. Instead, Yuma spent hours doing it and has no idea why it lasted so long.

That would fit a lot better and bring real consequences for the act. Yuma mindraped Girl A, so karma decided to be a bitch and have Homucifer mindrape Yuma right back.

Oh, probably a couple of months ago. If Wendy's played it, she probably thought Nakajima whipped something up to make fun of her with. But that whole idea opens up a can of worms about whether fictional media characters are drawn from exists in the world and that starts banging on the fourth wall. >Though it's possible people would see magical girls, admire them, and produce content about them, I guess.
With the whole shebang of the magical girls of the ninth actually being LISTED on their webiste being true (as confirmed by Kyuubey back when everyone wanted to murder NECO and Decu had to find an excuse why that is not a good idea) I wonder if there is a wiki listing all known magical girls and if there's some sort of otaku subculture dedicated to worshipping them.

I guess primarily I ship ~~Wendy x Midori, with a strong possibility of Chiaki~~.

Aside from that I'd go Mumi x Wendy but in a sort of unhealthy one-sided way. Or Ruri, in an equally unhealthy one-sided way.
Midori goes well with Annie May or Dorothy, or a group of faceless men. Or Ruri, in an equally unhealthy one-sided way.
Annie goes well with ~~Mary~~.
Amber, pass. Although Emma-chan makes for a good answer.
NECO I've started shipping with Enishi and I don't regret it. Or Chiaki, on a much further chance. Or Ruri, in an equally unhealthy one-sided way. But all of those are basically substitutes for Kaneda for her for a long time.
There's also Lily (loli-cannibal) and someone from the Tenth that hasn't shown up at all, and won't until Midorifag writes more.
I also ship ~~Freon x Arturia.~~
And Raleigh x Hornet from Daytona USA. Enyo makes a good waifu for her, though.

Also ~~Iori x Takane~~.

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/12/14(Mon)08:33:28 No.32079236

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just teleported yourself into hell.

No, that's not some colorful description, or creative turn of phrase. Even if you've never been religious - your own upbringing giving you no reason to believe in a forgiving, benevolent entity in the sky - you're familiar with how some beliefs describe that which awaited sinners in the afterlife.

A realm of fire and brimstone, of a crimson sky mottled with black, tumorous clouds.

A blasted wasteland of scorched earth, covered in powdered bone and blackened flesh.

And the skulls. Cairns of them. Hills, mountains of them. Bleached, picked clean of flesh, all of them grinning, all of them crying scarlet tears as the cancerous clouds above drowned everything with a slashing rainfall of blood.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/12/14(Mon)08:34:11 No.32079240

>>32079236

And at the very center of it all - sitting on a massive, towering, spiked bronze throne - you see something that should not be. Something that had been a Magical Girl, but twisted, perverted, torn apart and blasphemed into something else.

A giant monster of scarred, blood-cracked fleshmetal blades, claws, wings and fire.

Armor - spiked and terrible - covers most of its frame, with each spike on its shoulders impaling a rattling skull from jaw to scalp.

Its limbs - instruments of bladed torture and death, much like how it lived life as a Magical Girl, are now rendered in much more terrifying form, the once-black fleshmeal now veined and threaded with glowing, molten bronze.

Its wings - where there had been none before - are huge, veined leathery pinions, folded behind it and brutally thorned at the tips.

Its face - the only thing recognizable from its twisted form - grins with a forest of razor-sharp teeth blackly charged with death, an obscenely-long tongue the color of turned meat slapping against its lips as it cackles in monstrous glee. Relishing the promise of imminent slaughter as its impossibly-corrupt, impossibly-black eyes shine with an animalistic cruelty and hunger.

This is not the grinning, upside-down Witch that heralded the End of All Things that you were expecting. Nor is this hell the crumbling, building-filled, post-apocalyptic battleground you'd braced yourself for, with shadow-clones of Magical Girls that had been and will be trying their level best to kill you in droves.

This is something worse.

You are Chitose Yuma, Disgraced Culexus of the Ninth, and you're about to save the world.

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 05/12/14(Mon)08:35:30 No.32079253

>>32079240

When you first came to after the teleportation, you thought you'd died. Nothing but darkness stretched out around you, nothing but silence filled your ears no matter how hard you tried to listen.

It's only when your suit finally caught up with you, your retinal display coming alive, beginning to frantically cycle filters and visual scrubbers to give you a clearer picture - that you realized just where you are. Where you are, and what you're supposed to kill to prevent the entire world from meeting its premature end.

You saw the hellscape. You saw the skulls. And you saw - in her most terrifying form, taller than a building, sitting in a throne bigger than a stadium - hell given form. War given form.

Kharn Valnikov. The Warmaster of the Ninth Officio Assassinorum. A gigantic double-bladed chainaxe, brilliant gold, resting across her lap, propped up by her throne's armrests. A skyscraper-sized, serrated black blade gripped by the handle with a clawed fist, its entire length burning with golden god-runes.

You also saw things. Things that could never have been the product of a Magical Girl's despair. Things with brass skin and diseased oil for blood; spindly, spined creations clutching blades that dripped broken souls. Daemon-breeds, winged and unwinged, clawed or possessing hands that were grotesquely simian, unarmoured or clad in plate of bone, gold, brass and bronze.

You also heard the screaming, of course. You couldn't miss that. Not even with your helmet's sound dampeners turned up all the way.

Screaming. Nothing but screaming. Outside your own helmet, inside your own mind, even leaving your own lips. A jarring cascade of a thousand screaming throats singing a song of pain and despair all at the same time, drowning out all sound, drowning out all other senses.

And you had all but mere seconds to take all of this in before you realized something else.

You are all alone. Knee-deep in the slashing rain of foul ichor, blood fragments and trashing daemonkind, impotently gripping a spear you're trying very hard to remember how to use - you are well and truly alone.

Something...something must have happened. You were supposed to be teleported into a ring formation with everyone else. But something went wrong, and you're all alone.

What do you do?

You grip the spear in your hands hard enough to make the metal creak between your fingers - and it's here that you break into a run. Forcing your own limbs, your own body to move, despite sanity dictating that you drop down, curl up and wait for the death you so richly deserved.

Each sluggish, painful step splashing blood and bone fragments everywhere, creating noise that you desperately pray would not be heard over Kharn's thunderous cackling, would not be noticed by the shrieking throng of daemons littering this hellscape.

The first place of safety - or what could at least pass a temporary, ethereal shadow of it in this kind of place - is behind a row of ruined stone pillars, each one sundered to what looks like half of the height it used to stand.

The blood sloshing continuously against their bases having painted a permanent rusty tattoo on their alabaster surfaces, bits of bone and teeth embedded on their otherwise smooth surfaces where the blood might have smashed the odd floating skull into them.

You drop behind them, not caring that you're submerging yourself in waist-deep arterial crimson, not caring that you're slowly feeling it soak deep into your suit.

You crash a fist against the side of your helmet to clear your retinal display of static, before blearily blink-clicking your codec to scan and cycle for all available frequencies in a four-second interval.

Someone...someone has to have made it here too, right? Even taking into consideration how unreliable teleportation could be, even if the worst possible scenario happened - someone else should have been able to make it here.

With a small, pitiful beep, your codec system begins to scan - and even before it could start counting down before it skips to the next frequency, a clear transmission immediately comes on.

Only it's not something you ever wanted to hear.

"P-please, no, please don't let me die like this--Blessed Lady, please, I can't die here, I promised--"

"--Get up! GET UP! A KNIGHT DOES NOT JUST LAY DOWN AND DIE! For fuck's sake, I trained you myself, and I'll kill you myself if you don't get back into this fight--"

"I-I'm going home, I'm dreaming, this is a nightmare, if I close my eyes I'll be in my room a-and my mom will be there and I'll apologize for running away--n-no! NO! GET AWAY FROM ME--"

Screaming. More screaming from the vox. But instead of the wordless, thoughtless shrieking from earlier - this was much worse. As if some sadistic Culexus was ripping thoughts from those about to die, emotions translated into perfect spoken form, and broadcasted over the codec. Pleas for help, for mercy, for courage. Prayers. Litanies of Intercession, of Pity, of Hatred.

But most of all, death screams.

Somewhere in this inferno, the rest of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade was dying without you.

You swallow painfully, drily, and make to stop your codec system from scanning when it locks on to one particularly-strong one.

"PENDRAGON!" It's High Marshal Alondight, screaming profanities into the vox. "PENDRAGON, YOU FUCKING COWARD, BACK IN FORMATION! PICK UP YOUR SWORD AND GET BACK IN FORMATION, OR I WILL BRING YOU BACK TO YOUR SISTERS IN A COFFIN!"

You immediately connect to her frequency - rather, you brute-force it, ignoring the harsh whine of feedback and the rasp of static as the connection is established. Alondight finally responds after a moment later, her voice chilly and brittle with forced calm.

"This is the High Marshal. If this is a survivor hoping to re-establish contact with the rest of the Crusade, state your name, rank, and the name of my favorite pastry and we'll link up with you at once. If this is one of the daemons who had impersonated one of my own Knights earlier, only to cut off Enyo's remaining flesh-arm when she reached out for you - know that I will have your skull for a fucking pisspot before this day ends."

You very nearly sob your answer, but you at least manage to get it out - making sure to repeat the last requirement clearly, lest they mistake it for something else. Trying your hardest to ignore the implications of the High Marshal's cautious greeting.

"Y-Yuma...? You're still alive?" All the frost and barely-kept rage from Alondight's voice vanishes in that instant. "We...we thought you were dead. We thought we'd lost you--"

No! No, you're still here! You're all alone, but you're still here!

"I hear you, I...yes, thank the First Knight, our Emperor's Champion is still with us." There's a beeping sound, and your retinal display notifies you that someone from the west had locked onto your frequency. "I have a lock on your position. We should be there momentarily. Are you in suitable cover?"

Y-yes. Yes, barely.

"Sit tight until we arrive. Ten minutes at the most." It's here, then, that Alondight chuckles, both relief and fatigue making her sound feeble. Infirm. "I...I have a hard time convincing myself you're still alive. But you are no illusion, no deceiver. We'll carve out a victory from this yet, even if the blood price has been too much to bear."

...Wait. That's...why is she speaking like it's been a while, already? It's only been minutes since you teleported here!

Silence, except for the thunderous cackling of the blood-crazed monster enthroned on a spiked amalgamation of hate and bronze.

"N-no, Yuma. It hasn't." The High Marshal's voice shakes a bit. "We've been fighting for two hours in this hell. When the teleportation smoke cleared, we...we were all scattered. The formation was broken before it could even be formed."

She pauses here to take a shuddering breath. "And she was ready for us. Her, her champions, and her horde. It...it was a massacre, Yuma, and we had prayed you had died before they started killing us." A hollow, cold laughter leaves her lips, replayed perfectly by the vox. "As it turns out, the First Knight denies granting prayers if it means dying a painless death."

No. No, that's not...

Two hours. It's...no, it's impossible.

though I got to be honest.

"P-please, no, please don't let me die like this--Blessed Lady, please, I can't die here, I promised--"

"--Get up! GET UP! A KNIGHT DOES NOT JUST LAY DOWN AND DIE! For fuck's sake, I trained you myself, and I'll kill you myself if you don't get back into this fight--"

"I-I'm going home, I'm dreaming, this is a nightmare, if I close my eyes I'll be in my room a-and my mom will be there and I'll apologize for running away--n-no! NO! GET AWAY FROM ME--"

These lines disturbed me

I find this somewhat curious actually.

I mean Yuma mindraped Girl A. As in Murderface/Chiaki. We also know that the entity speaking to Yuma is Homucifer.

So does Homucifer still consider Chiaki a part of herself to the point where she wants revenge for what happened. I thought Homucifer had become a totally separate entity (even if one born from Homura) and that she hated Chiaki.

So why did she take two hours like this from Yuma, when it was Girl A that was violated? Should she not be congratulating Yuma for ripping Girl A's mind apart? Whats up with that?

So why would Homucifer care that Yuma mindraped Girl A? Care enough to want revenge of sorts? I don't get it.

The first vote was tied, and I think in the second vote mindrape narely won with 1 vote.

Or maybe the shitstorm was just a few very vocal people? Who knows? 4chan's an anonymous board, the only way to know for sure is to have a moderator go through there checking for samefags, and somehow I don't get the feeling that they'd do that. And the only way to certainly prevent shit like this in the future would be to move this quest to a non-anonymous forum. Are you sure you'd want that? [s](I would.) [/s]

I seem to recall Yuma justifying it via Haruka. That is to say, Haruka convinced Yuma that mindrape was not the wrong thing to do, and so Yuma thought Malal would agree with Haruka and understand/accept.

Ofcourse Yuma did not know that Girl A was an incarnation of Homura and absolutely vital to pretty much everything.

Cannot really say that it was off-character either. Stupid probably, but given all the stress and horror and all, Yuma being stupid is perfectly in-character and understandable.

You grip your spear tighter to your suit's breastplate as you force yourself to calm down. To calm down, to kill your emotions, and think things through in a logical way. To better aid your decision-making process and to be of actual use to someone else. Because otherwise, you're just going to be another useless cunt in a suit, someone who might just as well lie down and die.

One thing at a time, you murmur to yourself, breathing slow and breathing deep. Tackle obstacles and issues one by one, not all at once. Ignore the temptation of hysteria, no matter the amount of promised catharsis. Panic and fear are dangerous indulgences that should be saved for later, in friendlier territory.

...Heh. Listen to yourself. Malal's prodigy, recounting the very first lessons you learned, while sitting ass-deep in blood and skulls. Two hours into the end of the fucking world.

After a few moments, something resembling normalcy bleeds back into your frenzied, panicked mind, and you're able to at least reply to Alondight without stuttering or stumbling over yourself. In fact, when you speak, it almost...sounds like Malal. At least, how calm she usually sounds even when things are going completely batshit insane.

It's here that you ask her all the questions you can come up with without sounding like a panicked child. How many of the Crusade survived, and how many of those can still fight? What kind of attack plan does Alondight have in mind, and if she does, what are its chances of success, and if there are any alternatives to it?

But most importantly - is Cavefish, that big dumb idiot, still alive?

"Twenty-five of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade are still alive, Yuma." Alondight replies. "Twenty of my knights, although I wager I can only rely on nineteen to fight with any real courage. As for your sisters, I...I am sorry to say that we found only five of you still alive. The rest were either slain, devoured, or turned. You make the sixth we've found."

She pauses here to clear her throat. "And yes, we do have a plan, but as you heard earlier, our enemies may be listening in, so I'll fill you in when we've linked back up." Despite the sobriety of the situation, however, you hear a note of glee in her voice.

"As for the last question, well--"

"YUMA-CHAN!" Cavefish's voice, wracked by static and torn by signal flux, nevertheless booms its familiar, cringingly-loud way into your helmet's in-build speakers, making your ears ring with feedback. "

Yuma-chan, you're still okay! I, I thought you were a goner for sure, a-and when I found Miss Alondight I cried for ten minutes straight because they weren't with you and they were supposed to, and--"

You find yourself laughing at this. Laughing, while tears of relief drip wetly down your cheeks, making your retinal display blur.

Silly, dumb Cavefish, your best friend who drove Malal crazy with her innocent honesty and somewhat simple way of thinking.

Idiot Cavefish, who still thought of you as her best friend even if this - all this - is all your fault.

You manage to tell her to calm down long enough for you to get a word in edgewise. It seems that she was also lost during the teleportation - but unlike you, she followed her own advice, and kept moving forward.

Forward - where your enemies are, and where your friends will be and where you'll do the most good. Always forward.

Following that old adage led her to the remaining Black Templars, with Mustakrakish already out of ammo and was now seeing use as a heavy bludgeon.

"That...that thing at the center, Yuma-chan," Cavefish asks. "Is...is that really Miss Kharn? Is that the Warmaster?"

Ah, I hate Prisoner's Dilemmas like this. And the only reason it exists is because the quest is on 4chan. But, of course, if you moved it to another forum, you probably would lose a fair deal of the fan base, along with the ability to toe the line of NSFW as much. I mean, I wouldn't mind that that much, but... ugh.

Oh I understand clearly but when this has been mentioned repeated for roughly 50 threads ago or more, and reminded that occasionally and seeing the memorial of the magical girls on a wall.

That should give you a hint of how shitty the situation it was.

Nothing we can do will change that since this is a flashback.

Also those girls dying was a way to show how bad the situation was. To feel emotionally invested in nameless grunts in which we have heard a long time ago and told repeated that a lot of them died, makes it hard to connect with them.

True. Erebus's love was expressed in undying devotion and blind loyalty. Once again, Erebus wasn't really evil herself. She did what she believed to be true and never questioned it. Essentially, the only reason she's painted as the bad guy is because she Arhiman was crazy. Had the 3rd Warmaster not taken up the golden staff, Erebus would be a perfectly good-aligned character.

Really? That thing? The Warmaster? You find yourself chuckling despite yourself, despite your situation, your subdued laughter an unfortunate mirror to the thunderous cackling that the giant monster in the center of this hellscape is busying itself with. What makes Cavefish think that?

"Well, er...everything?" Cavefish blinks. "The...the stuff on its arms and legs? The really long, gross-looking tongue?"

Huh. You'll grant her those, but even with them considered...it doesn't really look as ugly as the Warmaster you know and hate. Yeah, definitely not as ugly as her. Not by far.

"What? But...but she..." Your best friend starts to protest, trailing off into silence a moment later. And stays silent for a moment more. And another moment.

"HAH!" She finally guffaws, laughing long and hard as she finally catches up with you. "You got me there, Yuma-chan! I walked right into that one!"

Yes. Yes she did.

"Heehee..oh, man, I needed that." Cavefish lets out a long, contented sigh, much like how one would after a big, nourishing meal. "A-anyway, whoever it is...Yuma-chan, we just have to kill it and then everyone's saved, right?"

That's the idea. Kill it by whatever means possible. And after that, everything'll go back to normal, and then, maybe, you'll all get to go home.

Speaking of which, did Malal...?

"Still nothing on that front," The other Culexus sighs. "Tried to hail her the entire two hours we've been fighting and searching for survivors. Even tried getting through to Headquarters - nothing. Either comms are down there, or we can't send anything outside of..." She pauses here, as if trying to search for the word to use. "Wherever this is."

Right. Guess...you're all by yourselves on this one, then.

"We don't need Miss Malal to take that thing out." Cavefish scoffs. "You watch, Yuma-chan. High Marshal's got a plan, and it's a good one. We'll just have to make sure it works, and if it does, we'll be eating at Hanegawa's before the day's through!"

Well, she sounds confident. If that's the case, then it's definitely going to work, right?

"Yep! Definitely!" Cavefish cheers. "Just trust me, Yuma-chan!"

...Yeah. Of course.

True to her word, Alondight reaches you in no less than five minutes - with what little remained of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade trailing behind her. You were about to greet the High Marshal with a salute of your own, raising your blood-dyed glove up to your helmet - until something six feet tall and dressed in the same Culexus leather as you barreled into your side, lifted you off your feet, and hugged you into a crushing embrace.

"Let's not get too carried away, now," Alondight chides gently, but even with you trying your level best to get Cavefish to put you down, you can tell that the High Marshal is pleased. Pleased about reuniting you with your best friend and what's left of your rank, maybe? You hope so, at least. But more likely, she's probably relieved that they found you still being you, without having turned, or eaten, or anything like that.

Doesn't really change things, as far as you're concerned. A rescue's a rescue. And they did try and find you for two hours, fighting all the while. No matter the ulterior motive of that, only the result matters.

After convincing Cavefish that you're not going to die or fall apart the moment she lets go, it's here that you see what those two hours had cost Alondight and everyone else. The Templars' armor, for one, previously polished and covered with purity seals and prayer wards - as well as a tabard emblazoned with their heraldic cross - are now scorched, scored and scratched to hell and back.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/12/14(Mon)12:53:22 No.32082083

>>32082073

None of their seals remained, only the evidence that they were there in the first place.

Some of the Knights were already missing limbs, or sporting grievous injuries that they did their best to ignore, allowing them to heal naturally instead. Enyo was one of the unlucky ones - her remaining flesh arm was cut off on the shoulder, armor and everything. She left the grisly wound uncovered, however, instead of covering it with her cape, or something else to block the sight of it.

What remained of your rank, well...Cavefish doesn't seem to look the worst for wear, besides a few new scuff marks on her helmet and chestplate. The other four seemed relatively untouched as well, and talking with them revealed that they'd been the Culexus that the teleportation worked favorably for, spitting them into this hellscape within spitting distance of the Black Templars.

You shook their hands, learned their names. Thanked them for their survival and mettle, and promised that you'll do what you can to see all of you coming back home. If not alive, then at least posthumously.

"Very noble." Alondight offers you a wan smile, just as you return to her. "Although, if I may say so myself, making promises like that..." She shakes her head. "Well, it's none of my concern, I'm sure, and nothing worth dwelling on." She claps both fleshmetal hands. "Come, we have things to discuss before that thing decides to stand up off its grand toilet and wipe its arse with the world."

You nod. Yes. The plan, specifically.

"Yes. The plan." Alondight nods. "It's a relatively simple plan, all told." She points towards the Witch at the center. "Considering who that actually is, I believe we can exploit the weaknesses it had in life to murder it here, quickly and efficiently." The grin curling her lips cannot be described by anything else but predatory. "Kharn has always cherished one last grand swordfight before her death. I say we give her one."

[3/4]

>>32082083

What. You're going to challenge THAT to a one-on-one? Is she INSANE?

"Clinically, but you don't see me bragging about it," Alondight scoffs. "No, our plan is made up of equal parts cunning and brutality. Enyo? Please help me with some of the terms, I may not know their Japanese equivalent."

And so she explains her plan, and...well, she's right. It's a brutally cunning plan.

Basically, the remains of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade splits in two, with one group sporting only two Culexus and Mordred Pendragon. The other group is made up of the rest.

A two-pronged attack, the first coming directly at front, and at speed, as loud as they possibly can - and the other from behind, using all cover and stealth as possible in order to maneuver in for a backstab.

Alondight, Enyo, and the rest of the Knights, upon a signal, will charge Walpurgisnacht head-on, giving Kharn the last fatal challenge she so desired for in life. Mordred - hidden and protected by the Culexus - will then set up her most strongest skill, a skill passed down from Pendragon to Pendragon - and banish Walpurgisnacht for good.

"She's a bit skittish when it comes to actual combat, but Pendragon has a good sword arm, and a good skill." Alondight grins. "The Sword of Promised Victory. It's rumored that all Pendragon daughters can do it, with the youngest always bestowed with the most powerful version, as it is." It's here that she nods at you. "We just need her to be hidden and protected from the Neverborn until she can pull it off. That's where the two Culexus comes in."

Ah. Well, it does sound like a good plan. You can easily see Kharn falling for it, but...well. It's not exactly Kharn up in that throne, isn't it?

As much as I like Alondight, and as much as I want to be part of the distraction team and make Kharn aware of her tongue, the full tank o' magic argument is pretty convincing.

Everyone, you deserve an apology, I was really planning on finishing the arc tonight but I'm being called early to work tomorrow, so I'll have to cut this one short. I really want to get this arc done, but it looks like we'll have to wait. So I'll just run again as soon as I can this week - hopefully my schedule lightens up then - and then we can get on with the main story past this flashback.

Thank you for your participation, and I'm sorry for all these delays. I hope to see you again for the finale next thread.

Question:
To what extent can TNO/Homucifer influence the world? Can she just do what she wants at will, or is she limited in some way? Does she require humans to do her will? Or special circumstances? Etc?

For example, did the fact that Yuma "connected" with Girl A's mind give Homucifer extra influence that let her interfere with Yumas teleport and steal the two hours? Or could she have screwed the teleport even if Yuma had not mindraped Girl A, if Homucifer had wanted to?

Why is it that (according to Dildoes) Homucifer cannot directly appear/influence Chiaki?

That's a pretty big spoiler, but I would agree that she's somewhat limited. She is a really vengeful person, though, and can mess with time.

I'm beyond sick of people pointing fingers and making the same two nonpoints over and over. The decision happened, no amount of yelling at anons for being worse than hitler or accusations of samefagging will change it, and I personally think Decu thrives when he gets to be unsettling in his writing, so as a reader, it was a win to me.

Asking me is basically begging for a biased answer. I'm looking forward to Wendy and Amber entering the main quest and at least one of them sticking around, if not both. I'd actually like to see other writeup MCs appear at least briefly.

Also Ruri.

I would also, in less vain terms, love to see Midori in situations where she won't just hero worship sempai moeblob all over the place. I would also like to see more Midori-centric writeups to showcase these things a bit more easily without Chiaki there.

but MGNQ's Mami frankly feels a lot more like Carrot than she does any other version of Mami Tomoe. I've actually been thinking of doing a writeup with that idea. I like Midori when she was competent and more aggressive, but I also like Midori when she's being awkward and shy. Also when she's being needy and when she doesn't know how to handle Misaka's tantrums. When she took the lead at the date, and when we dragged her to the kitchen. Also when she threw a tantrum over having to cook for Kharn and apologized a few minutes later. Or when she freaked out and couldn't believe that Chiaki accepted her date proposal.

She's a very vibrant and lively character through and through, and I really enjoy reading her and Chiaki together

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/19/14(Mon)08:37:03 No.32218269

You glance at the four other remaining Culexus of your rank. While you're not particularly close to them - or at least, as close to them as you are with Cavefish - you've trained and worked enough with them to know that they're just as competent as any Culexus trained by Malal herself.

They'd been in the same trainee batch as you, and while you went your seperate ways as soon as you donned the hardsuit you'd be wearing for most of your pitifully-short career, you have no doubt that Team Alondight will be served just as well even without your presence.

...Maybe even better, if you're not there to fuck things up for them. You've been on a roll with that.

>>32218269

"Team Mordred, then." Alondight grins after you tell her of your decision, with Cavefish whooping in celebration. "Yes, I realize she doesn't exactly inspire confidence, but she is a Black Templar, besides a Pendragon. She deserves to wear the cross and the armor as much as any of us - perhaps even more so."

She shrugs her pauldroned shoulders. "If she strays or falters, simply remind her of her vows, and how she'll be shaming the Pendragon name for centuries. If you like, slap her around a bit for emphasis, that usually does the trick."

"...Reminding her of her duty should be enough," Enyo cuts in after a moment, glancing sidelong at Alondight, who simply pouts. "The Princess is no coward, nor is she weak. This is simply a matter of inexperience--"

"Enyo's just saying that because she oversaw Pendragon's training personally." The High Marshal smirks. "What did you call her? The Second Coming of Swordmaster Paladin Victoria? Which, if memory serves me correctly, betrayed her vows to go gallivanting with--"

"Miss Victoria's legend remains intact despite her unfortunate and ill-advised decision," Enyo glares at Alondight. "I have no doubt the Princess will keep true to her vows as duty demands." She clenches her one remaining fist in a snarl of protesting servos, before crashing it against her dented breastplate in a dismissive salute. "High Marshal. Miss Yuma."

"...Ngh. My fault. I shouldn't have done that." Alondight grimaces as all three of you watch the raven-haired Marshal stomp off to where Mordred is being attended to. "It's just...well, nevermind. This kind of place, it really brings out the worst out of you, huh?"

Really? You didn't notice. It's not like you're all trapped in a bloody, skull-infested hell with the sky on fire, and the cackling, embodiment of rage and despair lounging in a throne at the very middle.

"Hah! It's almost like Malal's right here with us, instead of...wherever she is at the moment." The High Marshal chuckles. "In any case, if you have any questions, ask them right now, as I'm afraid all the talking we'll be doing later is either praying for a quick death or cursing the Archenemy to a hell we're already in. Otherwise, go to Enyo and get ready, Emperor's Champion. We make to rid the world of Walpurgisnacht, and the Ninth Officio's Warmaster."

No more questions, you tell her. You've done enough talking to last you the rest of your lifetime - or what's left of it.

Alondight's smile fades for a moment. "...Look, accepting the inevitable is all well and good, and gallows humor is good for the soul about to be flayed by a thousand demons throughout eternity - but sometimes even a bit of optimism is warranted in this situation, you realize?" Her blood-smeared face lights up in yet another grin, before she pats your shoulder with a cruelly-clawed hand. "Go with the First Knight's will, Emperor's Champion. Our hope lies with you, Miss Cavefish, and Mordred's ability to hold her sword up even if she can't hold her piss in."

...Really? She's going to say that, right after she told you to be optimistic? It's like she's actively trying to be annoying, now.

"Gets right into your skin, doesn't it? Like fleshmetal claws?" Alondight cackles, before waving you off with those clawed hands of hers. "Go on, Miss Yuma. We'll make something out of this debacle yet."

And so you do, but not after Cavefish rushing forward and giving the diminutive High Marshal a bear hug of her own, lifting her off her wheels and into the air. It's only until after she started shrieking and flailing that you and your best friend finally make for Enyo - and of course, Mordred, the rather disgraced knight herself looking up sullenly at your approach. The defeated, quitely-despairing look on her face something you've grown quite familiar with in the last few hours of your life.

"Miss Yuma. Miss Cavefish." Enyo nods curtly as you come to a stop in the midst of ragged, wounded Templars. "You are ready for this endeavor? Did the High Marshal make your duties clear?"

You nod. She couldn't have made it any clearer. And yes, you're ready. Cavefish - well, she's Cavefish. And even with her vox muted, you can tell she's giggling every time she's being addressed as 'Miss'.

"Very well. Vivian, please give Miss Yuma and Miss Cavefish any ammunition we can spare, and rations that the heat hasn't spoiled already." A white-haired - and strangely, white-armored - Knight stands up from her kneeling position beside Mordred, nodding. "Princess? Your vanguard is here."

Silence, as Mordred simply stares at you, her piercing green eyes seemingly trying to bore a hole through your visor. Not making a move to rise from the small cairn of skulls she'd planted her armored ass onto.

"Princess." Enyo says the ridiculously-dainty title with as much venom as it is humanly possible to cram into such a polite speaking voice.

No answer, still.

"Mordred Pendragon--"

"I heard you, Marshal," The blonde knight spits, her voice dead and hollow. "I'm not deaf. And I'm not blind, either - I see my vanguard, or a mockery of one. It seems Miss Alondight is really determined to kill me off - sending me on a suicide mission with a gorilla and a child in....in gimp suits!"

She's no longer hugging her sword to her chest, now holding it across her lap - but her hands are still shaking. "Does she really think this is going to work? Or has she eaten so much of her macaroons that they've replaced what's left of her functioning brain?"

"This is the High Marshal's plan, and we are to follow it." Enyo growls. "And for the last time, they're macarons. Now stand up and prepare to move out with them, we don't have much time--"

"Don't...don't think you can talk like that to me, Marshal. Not now. Not here." Mordred matches the one-armed Marshal growl for growl, venom for venom, but everyone hears the tremor in her voice, the brittleness on the edge of breaking. "You." She points an armored finger at you, eyes wide. "You're the one that jeopardized this entire mission, aren't you? We all heard it. We all heard Miss Malal denounce you on the vox, it's all your fault--"

"Princess--"

"--not only that, you show up conveniently uninjured, TWO hours after we started dying--"

"PRINCESS."

"--and still you show your face, still wearing the cross of the Emperor's Champion?" Mordred had risen to her feet at the middle of her tirade, unsheathing her sword and pointing it at you with a shaky flourish. "The High Marshal may have been quick to disregard Miss Malal's judgment but I am not! She may have been quick to reward you with that cross but I deem you unfit for it!"

...Oh boy. This is gonna be soooo fun.

[]This isn't the time. You have Walpurgisnacht to kill. Can she be sanctimoniously hypocritical until AFTER you're all dead?

You shake your helmeted head here, before pushing the point of the blade away from your face with a single finger. Is this really the time? Seriously? During the end of the fucking world, she's going to get sanctimonious on you now?

Can't she wait until after you're all dead, or something? You'd be happy to listen to her complaints, then, you say as you cross your arms over your own breastplate. Either way, you didn't take her for someone so eager to drag her family name into the mud, making a giant fuss like this.

"You--" Mordred all but shrieks in fury, moving to charge - but even before she could get her sword clear enough to hack your head off your shoulders, even before you could blink-click a targeting reticule over Mordred and force her to empty her stomach out into the river of blood everyone is standing ass-deep in - Cavefish had already moved, grabbing the hysterical Knight in a bear hug, much like she did with you and the High Marshal. With her arms pinned firmly to her side and lifted up into the air, all she can do is shriek, scream and kick - things that your best friend is good at ignoring, and enduring.

"UNHAND ME, YOU BUFFOON! Y-YOU LEATHER GORILLA! LET ME DOWN, RIGHT THIS INSTANT, OR MY SISTER WILL HEAR OF THIS--"

"I think," Cavefish booms, over Mordred's shrieked cursing. "...she just needs a hug! A really big one!"

"LET ME GO, I SAID! I AM A HIGH-RANKING MEMBER OF THE BLACK TEMPLARS, AND I DEMAND YOU TO--" CRACK. "O-OWW!"

"Or a spanking!" Your best friend continues, now having thrown Mordred over her shoulder, and using the oversized, iron length of Mustakrakish as a whipping rod for the Princess' armored posterior.

She gives the struggling Pendragon another smack, eliciting another cry of pain - but less cursing, this time. "It's working! Yuma-chan, it's working!"

...Goddamit, Cavefish! You can't just spank a Princess like that! Now you'll have to apologize to Enyo and the rest of the Knights, for humiliating one of their members here!

You turn to the Marshal, a half-hearted apology on your lips, before you realize that she - along with the rest of the Templars - are actually smiling as they watch. Some looking on with amusement, others with satisfaction.

"We...never really disciplined her after Miss Erebus left us, haven't we?" One of the knights murmur, the rest nodding in agreement.

"Now that it's here, it's kind of the first thing you'd think about, dealing with spoiled brats? Except we never even thought of it with her." Murmurs another, scratching armored fingers across a scarred cheek. "Funny, that."

You blink at this conversation, before shaking your head again. ...Foreigners.

After a few more moments of seeing Cavefish make merry on Mordred's plate-armored bottom - the Pendragon finally growing limp and quiet on your best friend's shoulder - it's here that Enyo turns to you. "As amusing as that was, I am sure that the High Marshal would like us to get moving soon. Do you have everything you require, Miss Yuma?"

...They've already given you enough, it looks like. Cavefish has enough spare rounds for Mustakrakish that she could fire that loud, blasted thing for days on end, and the supplies should prove handy in case you ever get the taste of blood out of your mouth.

"I see. Then you have everything you need." Enyo nods, before glancing back at Alondight, who seems to be performing a few practice swings with her oversized gladius. "Um. I realize this isn't the time, but may I ask you a small favor? You have granted us many boons already, to be sure, besides being the Emperor's Champion in this Crusade and bringing composure back to the Princess. If you feel that my asking is excessive enough, then I will speak of it no more."

[]Refuse. You're all going to die anyway, and you don't exactly have a great track record for granting requests at the moment.

You look up at the fervent expression on Enyo's face - the most emotion she'd displayed ever since you met her. While your kneejerk reaction here is to refuse - what good's another favor going to do her, when everyone is going to fucking die? - you also realize the other side of that argument.

What's so bad about granting another favor? Yes, you may well be heading towards a complete wipeout here, but if you could at least help someone like Enyo feel a bit better about the entire thing, then what's the harm? It's no skin off your nose. And besides, what's another chance at disappointing someone else other than Malal?

So you nod at the Marshal. Sure, you can do her a solid. What's she need?

"It concerns the High Marshal." Enyo leans down a bit closer to you, her armor's tortured servo joints hissing as she does so. "Once this is all over, and should you survive along with the High Marshal - can you tell her that I'd always admired her for her..." It's here that the Templar's own bloodstained cheeks go red. "Um, well, her--"

Her wheels? You volunteer, trying to keep your face straight behind your helmet's faceplate.

"...No, but close." Enyo shakes her head. "Tell her I've always admired her body, and how she fights as a warrior. I've also grown to admire her childish, petty personality and her unreasonable temper - as well as her abominable taste for sweets and her dreadful habit of procrastination."

She reaches out to grasp your hand. "Please, it is important that she knows. I admit that I should have confessed my feelings much, much earlier, but..." A sigh of deep, longing regret leaves her lips, and you wonder if the Marshal is actually just as simple and honest as Cavefish is, or totally straight up fucking with you.

I still wonder why people actualy assume that the guys in the Deagle are the same as the guys in the mirror.

In the barrier we had:
>Moemura
>Murderface
>BlackrockHomu
>Ribbonhomu

In the Mirrors we have:
>Moemura who was infatuated with Sayaka not Madoka
>BlackRockHomu
>Hardened Timetraveler Homura
>Empty space

Clearly they are not the same as the ones Midori encountered in the barrier.

The fourth Mirror is empty because ~~we are Homucifer and Homucifer sealed herself inside of Chiaki because of reasons.~~

Remember the voice Yuma heard before she dropped out of teleportation, remember what the voice said and why we lost two hours in the warp. ~~Its because yuma pissed off Homucifer hiding deep inside Girl A.~~

~~The twist is that we are Magical Girl Satan. We are quite literally worse than Hitler.~~

You look up at Enyo for a long while, before blinking behind your visor and then pointing at Alondight. You...alright, you personally think it's really cute, and you'll deliver her final message even if you have to do it from beyond the grave - but why can't Enyo tell Alondight herself, right NOW? She's barely five meters away, and it'll take no more than five seconds! Ten if she elaborates!

Enyo looks wretched here. "It may look that simple, and if it truly was, then I'd have done it myself." She shakes her head. "But I fear that it is not the case at all. If I confess my feelings to the High Marshal now, she would be distracted from her main duties as High Marshal. She would be distracted from commanding, from fighting - from surviving."

She pauses here to look back at Alondight, and you follow her gaze to see the blonde carefully scratching her ass with the tip of a claw. "See? Utterly focused. I dare not even speak to her for too long, else I say something that sets her on the path to ruin."

...Jesus. Fine. Fine, you'll do it. You think her reasoning's bullshit, but you'll do it.

Enyo's eyes go wide here. "Really? Truly? Miss Yuma, I am in debt to you--"

ON the condition that if she survives, too, then she tells Alondight herself.

"..." Enyo blinks at this, before nodding after a few short moments. She squeezes your hand again with her one remaining own. "Very well. If I do survive, then I release you from your bond and perform the boon myself. This I swear on this Crusade and on my life."

Christ, she didn't need to resort to something like th at. A pinky promise would've done fine.

But sure, whatever. That's settled. ...Can you go now?

The raven-haired Marshal of the Black Templar nods, smiling. "March with courage and honor, Chitose Yuma, Emperor's Champion of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade." She bangs her one remaining fist against her chest plate, performing that oft-repeated salute. "Goodbye, and thank you for accepting this lowly Knight's unreasonable dying wish."

...Yeah. Fine.

For fuck's sake, are all Black Templars this melodramatic? Because--

A bellowing roar - a sudden crushing gust of wind - the sound of giant leathery wings flapping - and both you and Enyo turn just in time to see a behemoth made out of hate and fire and rage drop down from the sky and onto the ground with a force comparable to an earthquake. A literal tidal wave of blood and skulls washing outward from the point of impact, sloshing against your thighs, soaking capes and coating armor. The daemon's massive cloven feet crushing everything they land on - skull, rock, armor, flesh, bone, Black Templar...and Culexus.

One of the four that you've left with Alondight leaves her mortis-cry ringing in your ears as you feel her snap out of the silent communion that all nearby Culexus naturally share with each other. Her empty helmet - the only thing left intact in her murder - bounces away from the rest of her ruined, crushed form to roll across the blood-soaked earth and stop at your feet.

No, it's not empty.

It's not empty at all.

One look and you can still see the wax-yellow cross section of a larynx, the pinked ivory white of the spinal column here, and--

"Go," Enyo snarls, now pushing you away, pushing you hard enough that you all but crash into Cavefish. "We'll deal with this! Go to your designated zone and await further orders! The High Marshal will contact you by vox when everything is ready!"

But--

[2/3]

>> ☐ Deculture 05/19/14(Mon)12:58:09 No.32221076

>>32221060

"GO!" The Marshal turns away from you without a word, her mechanical arm shifting, gears crunching, servos snarling - and it's here that two long, brutally-toothed chainsaw blades slash out of her wrist, each one following the line of her lower arm. Each one snarling loud enough to overwhelm the hungry growlings of the daemon itself. "Knights of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade, CHARGE!"

You could only watch as Enyo - and the rest of the remaining Black Templars - charge at the beast that had dropped in unannounced, their blades out and their bloodthirst up. It's only after Cavefish starts to pull you away that you find yourself able to move, then turn, then follow her as your best friend breaks into a run (with the Princess still being carried over one shoulder). You run, you keep running, and you don't look back. Not even when Mordred herself started to cry.

This is your bed, you murmur to yourself breathlessly. You made it, now you have to sleep in it.

After what felt like an eternity of running - although your helmet's chronometer only registered ten minutes since the daemon popped up - the two of you finally come to a stop, underneath the still-burning sky, and behind what looks like a broken-down monument of some winged goddess with a sick smile.

It's here that you finally look back - and you can only make out what looks like some sort of giant shadow flicking this way and that in the distance, with smaller shadows leaping up on it and making tiny flashbulb explosions erupt on their bigger, nastier prey.

"Only a bit more left to go until our designated zone," Cavefish remarks, and you glance towards the throne in the middle of this hell. ...She's correct. A bit more of a walk and you'd be right behind the throne. Although, you'll definitely have to stealth it up at this part of the trip.

"My...my sisters..." A helpless, mewling sound suddenly comes out of nowhere, and it takes you and Cavefish a few minutes to realize that it's coming from Mordred. "My sisters never said it would be like this. They...they told me this would all be so...heroic. They told me I'd be a hero." She shakes her head. "They never said anything about seeing your comrades get torn apart and eaten and killed by things that shouldn't be..."

Is that what she's looking for? Heroism? You shake your head as both you and Cavefish now begin to stalk forward a bit more carefully among the skulls and the blood and the ruins, weapons gripped in free hands while focusing on attracting the least bit of attention possible.

Technically, isn't what you're doing right now heroic? Everyone in this crusade is going to die saving the entire world. That's around forty or fifty lives given to save billions. What can possibly be more heroic than that?

"N-not this kind...!" Mordred struggles feebly against Cavefish's grip. "We are the Black Templars! We are the blade of the Blessed Lady, the physical manifestation of the First Knight's justice! We're not..." She chokes back a sob. "We're supposed to all come home safely! Wounded, perhaps, but not...not DEAD! Not killed without being given to even draw their sword, or slaughtered wholesale like cattle, reduced to nothing more than meat and carrion to be fought over by horned, winged abominations!"

Both you and Cavefish glance at each other, and you shrug. Well, this is reality, you tell her. Heroes will always be baptized in the blood of their friends and foes alike. Heroic tales and sagas usually leave the bit about the friends out, unless they're going for a revenge sequel with bigger CGI budgets.

"..." Mordred is silent for a few moments, before she finally speaks. When she does, all the fire and hatred is drained out of her voice, leaving behind a disconsolate, disturbed tone.

"Please, let me down. I won't...I'll follow you. I'll follow the plan. Just please, let me stand and fight on my own two feet, instead of being carried like an invalid not worthy of trust."

Cavefish looks to you for approval, and you quickly give it. Soon, Mordred is walking between the both of you, shielded from sight by your overlapping Culexus fields.

Her sword in her hands, although she couldn't be less combat ready than she tried, with the tip of the sword sinking into the blood pool sloshing around your ankles and tracing a furrow as she walked.

...Not really confidence-inspiring indeed. Still, this is what you've got to work with.

You clear your throat, before deciding to get to the meat of all this. Namely, this Sword of Promised Victory you're supposed to help Mordred pull off. How does it work, and how fast can she charge it?

Mordred seems to consider the question carefully, before nodding. "It...it is a technique passed down from contracted Pendragon to Pendragon. A way for us to harness the blessing given to us by the Blessed Lady and the First Knight to devastating effect." She lifts up her bloodstained sword into the air, gazing into its mirror-like surface. "The ultimate killing technique. Or so my sisters are quick to boast." This makes her smile, if only slightly.

She places an armored hand on the blade. "By focusing and channeling myself through the sword in my hand, I accrue enough energy to release it in a killing wave of light and destruction. It travels in a straight line, and knows no friend or foe or Witch, only that it destroys. When I charge it fully and unleash it, it would be...prudent for you two to stay behind me."

...That sounds good. Hopefully, it should be enough to take Kharn out permanently, and end this living nightmare.

How fast can she charge it, then? Or, loosely translated - how long do you have to tank the inevitable incoming swarm before she can pull off this Sword thing?

"Um..." It's here that Mordred goes crimson. "Five...five minutes. I am training to get it down to a more respectable level, but that is the best I can manage, owing to the situation at hand." She lowers her head, contrite, or maybe embarrassed. You're putting money on the latter, anyway.

\Five minutes. That's...not bad at all. It's not the thirty-second wait you were asking for, but waiting five minutes more until the world is saved has a bit of a ring to it.

What happens after the five minutes?

"Everything in the path of my blade is dead." Mordred says simply. "Even an abomination like Kharn."

Sounds like a party, then. With luck, it'll actually work and help clean up the mess you started.

After a few more minutes of stalking - and wondering if you'll ever be able to apologize to Malal properly for everything you've done - Team Mordred finally reaches its designated zone, a quarter kilometer away from the back of the Kharn-thing's throne. You notify Team Alondight through the vox that you've arrived - and the High Marshal herself responds, albeit breathlessly.

"Good. We'll be ready in five minutes, Miss Yuma. When you hear us roar, signal Mordred and she'll know what to do." A moment's static. "Please protect her until she can use the Sword of the Promised Victory, and when she does, hold her safe. We will come for you then, as quickly as we can." A click, and the High Marshal's connection severs itself - preventing you from calling her a liar.

Despite how everyone's been trying to be upbeat, this is the kind of mission where everyone dies.

The only rescue operation that's going to happen is to figure out which bits go in which bodybag, and then which bodybag goes into which coffin.

"This is it, isn't it?" Cavefish murmurs beside you. For once, not sounding like she's hopped up on sugar, or about to hug someone to death. "We're not going to come back after this, are we, Yuma-chan?"

How do you respond?

[]No, we're not. But look on the bright side - at the very least, we'll leave as corpses, and not as cigarette ash in a suit.
[]We just need to make sure Pendragon does her job. If it all goes to plan, then we'll be back slurping cheap ramen back at Hanegawa's before you know it.

oh god this quest will literally burn when that happens.
it also doesn't help most of the normal madoka cast seems to each have a golden weapon.
we know of ours, then mami has one, sayakas weird rocket sword thing may also be one because the way she talked about it could be a lie, and i don't know bout kyouko, especially since there hasn't been all that much backstory with her all this quest.
then ods are highly likely oriko has a bunch of them, while being possessed by ahriman who may be trying to find a way to use them to res herself.
and who knows from there.

I don't think Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie would've taken as much damage as it from the chainaxes during our sparring match if it were a Golden Weapon. Plus, Sayaka turned down a Golden Weapon in her 8th Officio flashback, which went to Kirika instead.

Kyouko's the most normal in this universe out of the PMMM cast, I doubt she has a Golden Weapon. Plus, she painted her spear gold after we got the DEagle, and we chewed her out about Golden Weapons when we found out.

What's this, now? You're supposed to be the seriously-annoying miseryguts of this outfit. You grin at Cavefish from behind your faceplate and punch her on her arm - or just below her elbow, because that's what you can reach without going on tiptoe. Is she trying to make you redundant, or something?

"What?" Cavefish blinks, before shaking her head. "O-of course not. It's just...y'know..."

You shake your head, and punch her again. It'll be fine, you tell her. You just need to make sure Pendragon does her job, and there's no easier task for a Culexus than to stand around looking important while the other ranks do the heavy lifting. And if everything goes to plan, then the both of you'll be back slurping cheap ramen at Hanegawa's before the either of you know it.

Your best friend giggles here. "Fine, fine. Geez, you try to be serious for once in your life!" She shakes her helmeted head, before tugging on the straps of her steel-studded gloves. "...It'll hurt, though, right? Like, really bad?"

You glance at Mordred, whose eyes are already closed as she mouths some incantation, amber witch-lightning crackling around and along the length of her sword.

Yeah. You're pretty sure it will, you tell Cavefish. It'll hurt a lot.

And it's here that you finally step in close to her and give your best friend a hug.

"I'll miss you, Cavefish," You murmur into a private vox channel with her, letting your real voice seep through unmodified. You feel her stiffen at this, then hear her choke out a sob of her own.

"...I'll miss you too, Yuma-chan."

The call came moments later, heralded by the roar of the loudest, angriest motorcycle engine in the world - which is then also followed by the sound of a giant demonic Witch rising off her throne and walking confidently forward on bladed feet.

Her two massive weapons coming alive in her hands - a black blade with golden god-runes down its length, and a motorized chainaxe the side of a skyscraper.

The call came moments later, heralded by the roar of the loudest, angriest motorcycle engine in the world - which is then also followed by the sound of a giant demonic Witch rising off her throne and walking confidently forward on bladed feet. Her two massive weapons coming alive in her hands - a black blade with golden god-runes down its length, and a motorized chainaxe the side of a skyscraper.

"Now." Just one word. One word, uttered with such hate, with such fervor, and with such desperation. Growled from the throat of the High Marshal herself, moments after screaming a challenge to the Warmaster of the Ninth Officio.

And so Mordred began to accrue lethality, or so she put it. The Sword of Promised Victory. ETA five minutes. Five minutes too long to gather energy into a sword just so she can fling it out in a burning, searing beam.

And at the same time, both you and Cavefish disengaged the limiters of your suits - enabling full, focused output, ready to disintegrate anything about to attack with a focused blast of anti-magic. Malal's Gift.

You couldn't see the battle very well. With the bulk of the party charging Kharn directly at the front, your line of sight is pretty much blocked by Kharne herself, even if it wasn't already consumed by the throne. But you could see just how hard Alondight and her knights are fighting. And how hard they're losing.

It's a slaughter, even you can see that. Despite her size - despite the new bulk of her frame, and her ungainly limbs - Kharn still moved like the killer she was before she witched out, and then some.

She used to toy with her prey - gave them a sporting chance, locking blades with them, parrying, even blocking. She liked to make them think they had a fighting chance, before utterly destroying them.

This Kharn was not as benevolent.

This Kharn cut out the middleman, so to speak.

Literature would always speak of a monster or a legendary pugilist slaying men like insects - but to kill a pest, a small portion of will is expended. One must focus on the task at hand or else look the fool. Not so with this Kharn - she killed as easily as wiping sweat from her brow, or a beggar gathering up coins back into his hovel after a day's panhandling. Each stroke of her blade, or her axe, you saw Magical Girls die, flying into the air as either broken ragdolls or jagged pieces scattered by the wind.

"KNIGHTS! KNIGHTS, HOLD FORMATION! DO NOT--" Alondight's voice, already hoarse from too much cursing and shouting, tries to rally what's left of her Templars forward, while keeping on the defense. At the same time, you hear Enyo's twinned chainsaw blades crash against something irrevocably metal, the whirring teeth trying its best to bite but failing.

You hear - besides the cursing and the gunfire and the rumble of chainswords being slowly ruined beyond use - a strange noise.

A deep, rasping noise from a monster's throat, even as the lower torso of a still-armored Black Templar slides down its gullet. Certainly not borne of the swallowing action, nor a byproduct of digestion. And it doesn't sound like it's trying to say something other than--

No. no, it's laughing.

It's being murdered by Alondight's team with everything they have - and yet it's laughing and killing with the same breath.

Laughing as it continues to kill everyone who's doing their best to stop it.

And then - suddenly - it turns around. On its spiked, tower-like heels, it turns to look at the bright, brilliant lance of energy thrusting upward to the ruined heavens, beginning where Mordred's blade ended.

Licking its lips with its ghastly long tongue, before raising its own black blade in mockery and in challenge.

No. NO.

"ABORT!" Alondight screams. "YUMA, GET OUT OF THERE, SHE'S GOING TO KILL YOU--"

Despite the renewed assault on its back to try and get its attention once more - despite Alondight and Enyo screaming at you from the vox to move, to relocate, to grab Mordred and run - you choose to stay. Even as Kharn begins to bring down the black blade on top of your position - you choose to stay.

You only have time to pulse one word to Cavefish.

+ SHIELD +

The telekine shield of both your combined strength flashes into existence around and above all three of you in the span of one heartbeat - and immediately disappears as it's shattered by the falling black blade. The feedback of its hilariously quick destruction lancing through your bodies, your minds, making eyes and noses run free blood down your faces. But you don't care. Neither does Cavefish. Even when both your suits are now singing in alarmed notes, your retinal display flashing warnings you don't have the time nor the capacity to heed.

+ SHIELD + You pulse again. The black blade falls once more. And this time, Cavefish falls to her knees, the power lines of her suit flickering, then failing.

+ YUMA + Cavefish's pulse is weak, frail, faint. + YUMA IT HURTS I CAN'T SEE +

+ SHIELD + You roar through your connection with her this time, and your best friend - already dying, or already dead, you have no idea which - staggers back to her feet, her suit flickering live again.

At the third impact, Cavefish collapses - and doesn't get back up.

Just as your retinal display - scrambled as it is - declares that Mordred's five minutes are done.

"MORDRED!" You scream, risking a moment to turn back at the girl. "KILL IT! KILL--"

Your voice dies in your throat as you see Mordred take a step back, then another. Her eyes focused not on you, but on the approaching witch.

[1/2]

She drops her sword - the accrued energy fizzling out immediately - and runs. As fast as her legs could carry her.

You're left stunned as you watch the only remaining hope of humanity turn tail, screaming for her sisters, screaming for her mother.

+ yuma + Cavefish's glove scrabbles against the side of your boot. + yuma i'm sorry please i can't see i'm scared help me +

You turn again, and see the black blade once more about to fall. If it does, it would kill you and Cavefish both.

For a moment, you find yourself wanting to laugh.

The blade falls--

He's the king of heros, and quite literally the architypical ancient hero. Part god with amazing weapons and equipment. Most if not all heros after are patterned on his myths and all their weapons are derived from his prototypes.

His limitation is his class. He has the raw stats to be a saber, but he doesn't "practice swordsmanship" to allow him into that class, prefering to bombard battle fields.

You catch the blade.

Not with your hands, but with the strength your contract gave you. What your wish gave you.

Locking that grievous, immense sword immobile with a surge of desperate focus, keeping it trembling in the air above you, above Cavefish.

Over the sound of your own ragged heartbeat - you give it everything you have left. With your hands raised, you slowly curl them into fists, pouring body and soul into your suit, which in turn turned into into force that clutched that blade and prevented it from falling. Your hands - they won't close completely. They just won't.

>You're killing yourself with this. This focused depletion of life force, channeled into energy. Then again, you're already dead - so what does it really matter in the end?

Gritting your bloodied teeth behind your faceplate, you roar a wordless cry into the vox. Defying everything. Your shame. Your defeat. Your disgrace. Your death.

And the black blade cracks.

The sound echoes throughout the entire hellscape, as stark and alien as a laugh in the middle of a funeral. Even Kharn herself, twisted beyond corruption, huffs a breath in disbelief.

You find yourself laughing again, and it's here that you close your hands, finally clenching them into fists.

The black blade SHATTERS in an explosion of cursed black bronze, its pieces blasting across the battlefield, killing those in its path no matter their allegiance. Several of these shards slash and gouge into Kharn herself, lodging into her flesh. She roars - a beastly roar interlaced with a scream of suffering, a sound you never want to hear outside a nightmare ever again.

Numb with pain, with blood filling your mouth, you fall down on your knees and collapse next to Cavefish's corpse. Her hand frozen as it reaches out for you, her helmet angled to look directly into your visor.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 05/25/14(Sun)08:36:02 No.32349227

"Wake up, Yuma. I haven't got all day."

The voice jolts you awake. It's a familiar voice, one equally laced with patience and urgency. The kind that belongs to someone that's got her docket filled for DAYS, but is forcing herself to be polite, to be considerate. A delicate balancing act, made all the more precarious by the rough edge to her words, afforded by an accent of someone much more used to the countryside than the city.

You don't open your eyes, though. Even with the voice itself commanding immediate obedience, an innate authority in its unrefined slang - you find yourself unable to pull your eyelids apart, as if they'd been gummed together by something. Grit, maybe. Or dried blood. You're not sure what. You're not sure you even care.

"Yuma? Do I have to start kicking to get you to fucking wake up? Because I'll do it, even with these shoes. I swear I fucking will."

Because you know who the voice belongs to. Whether it's mangled to non-intelligibility by an Anima Speculum's vox-speaker, or growled through gritted teeth in frustrated rage, you'll never mistake that voice to belong to anyone else but her.

Malal. The mentor you've always looked up to. The friend you've failed.

>> ☐ Deculture 05/25/14(Sun)08:36:27 No.32349230

>>32349227

You finally open your eyes - and see her standing over you. Helmetless. Suitless. Wearing a long white dress with a cleavage window that looked absolutely hilarious on her, simply for the fact that it was the one thing you'd never have imagined her to wear.

Even a clown outfit would fit her better.

You'd have laughed, if your throat didn't feel like it was permanently blocked up by bile and blood.

"M-Miss Malal," You manage to croak out anyway, realizing that you too are helmetless only after you've breathed the words. You pull yourself up to a sitting position a moment later, just as Malal moves to a chair beside you, gathering up her dress and cursing underneath her breath with every step. ...She's also wearing high heels. What the hell? What the hell is this, some costume party?

...And she's glowing, too. Not like being backlit by clever lighting effects, but...glowing from the inside. Luminous.

"Wish it was," Malal growls, just as she plants her ass onto the chair, and letting the rest of her cumbersome white gown drape itself around her. "Fucking thing, I don't even know how I get to move in this kind of outfit, much less shoot a goddamn evil sun out of the sky." She grabs a handful of skirt and pulls it up, revealing an inner lining that's...well, seemingly made out of space. "Look at this. LOOK at this. I'm fucking flashing the entire universe. My panties are being seen by the fucking solar system. It's the upskirt to end all upskirts."

Well, it's not...it's not really that bad, it's kind of pretty--

"I knew you'd say that." Malal sighs, before patting her knees with prettily-gloved hands. "Anyway, we don't have much time to chitchat, so let me cut to the chase."

She looks at you with piercing amber eyes. "We fucked up, Yuma. That could've gone through a whole lot better, but..." She shrugs. "That's just how it happened."
...

How do you respond?

[]I...I'm sorry.
[]I wasn't thinking. I just...I wanted to prove to myself you weren't the monster I thought you were.

Actually, there's a reasonable amount of doubt about that.

Paticuarly Malal, considering her parallels with Chiaki.

Which isn't to say that they're not both parts of their respective wholes. But It seems safe to say that the "mortal" incarnations of the various witches are still free to be their own people.

You're...you're sorry. It's...you just wanted to find out the truth.

N-no. No, that's...that's not true. You weren't even interested in the truth.

You just wanted to prove to yourself that Malal wasn't the monster you thought she was.

Malal looks at you stonily, before turning away - and then, apropos of completely nothing, starts to laugh. Her shoulders, very nearly bared by her dress, quivering as she does so. She slaps a gloved hand over her mouth a second later, muffling herself.

"Ghgk. S-sorry. I'm..." She starts to giggle, her long pink hair rippling down her shoulders and back in luxurious waves. Malal, your Rank Leader, is actually giggling. Like a real girl and shit. "I know this particular scene should be really serious, like, super serious and shit, but I just...I just can't." After a few moments, she finally manages to calm down enough to wipe at her eyes with silk-encased fingers. A chuckle or two escaping her lips as she does so.

"Christ." Malal finally says, putting her hands down and slapping her knees again, as she once more looks up at you from h er seat. "Here I was being really fucking proud that I've taken every single variable into consideration, every detail taken into account - but I go ahead and miss the one single detail I shouldn't have. The one under my fucking nose."

She gestures at you with a hand that seems much too dainty, much too fragile-looking to be able to break ribs and bone behind ruggedized Culexus hardsuits. "I didn't account for someone like you being...well, being too much like me."

She giggles again. "I trained you too fucking well that it actually worked against me. That's...that's something to think about."

She did? Granted, it's been a while, but you're pretty sure 'being a hypocritical idiot 101' wasn't part of her lesson plan.

The pink-haired girl in the white dress snorts here. "I'm not talking about that. It's more of...thinking for yourself. Doing what needs to be done, rather than what someone with a higher rank tells you to do. Bucking orders when you see that they're not making too much sense, or could even jeopardize everything."

Malal shakes her head. "I trained you to think for yourself, Yuma, and not just follow some idiot with a hat or a cooler-looking helmet. Of course, I'd have preferred that you did it in the pursuit of truth and everything, but I'm grading you on your actions, not on your intent. That said..."

She closes her eyes as she takes a deep breath, as if bracing herself for pain. "...it doesn't exactly make everything we've done here right. Or worthy of forgiveness."

"Still, what's done is done. The die's cast, the cards are dealt, yadda yadda yadda, we'll know if the stupidly-intricate Rube Goldberg machine that we've just kicked into activation actually works in a couple of years' time." Malal dusts both her hands, as if patting them clean of the matter entirely. "Now there's nothing else to do BUT wait, and that's always the hardest part."

...

How do you respond?

Did...did her plan really ask for this much death? You find yourself asking after a few moments of being stunned into sheer, shell-shocked silence. Did it really need the lives of all your friends - your only friends - for it to work? To get kicked into gear?

Did it need The Black Templars? Did it need Cavefish?

Because if it did, then it's not a plan at all.

It's some kind of barbaric ritual sacrifice, made to appease some bloodthirsty god that isn't even real.

Plans, no matter what they're for, shouldn't even consider people dying for it to work.

The familiarly-annoying sting of tears pricking your eyes manages to blur your vision slightly, but not enough that you failed to see the flash of guilt flicker across Malal's face.

"Don't you think I know that?" The pink-haired girl murmurs, looking down at her gloved hands on her ruffle-infested lap, her fingers picking imaginary lint out of the pristine white silk. "Because I do, and I've tried everything to limit just how many people needed dying for my plan to work." It's here that she looks up at you, tears welling up in her own amber eyes.

"Do you know that the original draft asked for the entire fucking Ninth to be put on the chopping block? Every single one. You, me, Kyoko, Sayaka, Mami...everyone. Not just us." She shakes her head. "And even with all of those, it still wasn't a 100% guarantee that it'd work. It was just the...the easiest and the most convenient version, as far as these things tend to be easy and convenient."

She angrily scrubs the back of her gloved hand across her eyes. "The final draft - the one I had to do some last-minute editing on, thanks to you - confined the potential friendly body count to about a hundred, more or less. From two thousand lives to less than a hundred, but not after a metric fuckton of legwork, paperwork, and dealing with psychopaths who'd sooner cut your kidneys out and eat it with a side of fries and ketchup."

Like Kharn?

"Worse." Malal chuckles. "But yeah. If you're asking if I regret it, I do. If you're asking if I feel anything for planning the deaths of twenty girls - twenty of the kindest and most selfless girls I know, despite life taking a massive dump on them from day one - I do feel something, and it's never stopped hurting from the moment I considered it." She lowers her head, and holds a hand over her heart. "It hurts a lot more now, after the fact. I don't think it'll ever stop hurting, even after...well, you know."

"You're probably waiting for me to say about how the plan's worth it, right?" It's here that Malal looks up at you. "About how it's so huge that a hundred lives isn't worth hesitating over when the rest of the entire universe is at stake?" She sniffs loudly, before wiping at her nose with a sleeve.

"I don't disagree with you, mind. A plan to save the world...people dying should never come to it. If you have to justify your actions with that, then..." She shrugs. "You're no worse than the monster you're trying to save the world from."

Then why? Why did she do it--

"Because I've accepted becoming a monster the moment I had my contract draft, Yuma." Malal smiles weakly, here. "I'm fine with being one if it means saving everyone else. I'll bear any sin I have to if it means making things right."

Silence, and it's here that black feathers suddenly begin falling from the featureless sky, to land on Malal's feet, on her pristine white dress. Feathers large enough that they seem to be from some bird of prey.

"I guess that answers your second question too, huh?" She says, still smiling despite the tears now flowing freely down her cheeks. "Not much of a role model now, am I?"

Sup MGNQ. I'm actually running a photo shoot today so I'm popping in on occasion when I have the odd free moment. Managed to color in more of best girl in the last week sometime though.

If I can, I'll try to post an example of the kind of gear Neco would use for her usual shenanigans like say, attempting to take up skirts of our war master.

This is a bit irrelevant, but I've started to hate NECO a bit less recently. Probably has something to do with the fact that I read The Truth (a Discworld novel) recently, seeing the relationship between investigating journalist and psuedo-noir hero from the other direction. Of course, NECO hasn't been nearly as helpful to anyone as William de Worde was.

You step forward, brushing away the black feathers from her hair, from her dress. Even if more and more of them began to fall, seemingly trying to cover Malal in an entire pile of them.

She has to tell you about the plan, you plead with her. She has to tell you how you can help her. How to help her, period. You can't help her carry her burden if she insists on keeping you in the dark.

"I can't," Malal is crying blood now, twin streaks of crimson inking permanent trails down her cheeks as she continues to sob. Her teeth sharpening into points with every word she mumbles out, cutting her lips, cutting her tongue, making sweet-smelling crimson trickle down her chin as well. "That's the problem - if I tell you, then SHE'LL find out, and she'll ruin everything! I can't tell you, I can't tell Mami, I can't tell Kharn, I can't tell anyone else -- can't you see that, Yuma-chan? No one can help!"

For fuck's sake, she has to stop treating you like a child! You won't screw up again! She needs to tell you, even if just a little bit, even if it's just what to do -- something for you to set your actions by, to tell you that you're doing the right thing! PLEASE!

With the wind howling now, and the black feathers falling so thick and fast that it's practically forming a palpable, material darkness trying to block out all sight - it's here that Malal seems to make a decision, just as her eyes suddenly flicker from bright amber to a fathomless, pitiless black.

"L-Look...look after Girl A." Her smooth, calm voice turns ragged, uneven, wheezing. "Protect Girl A. S-save...Girl...A." She grabs at your padded arms desperately, and you bite back a scream as claws stab right through your hardsuit's material, into flesh, into bone. "Promisssee...me, Yuma-chan. Promise me you'll...see her through...to the end."

>> ☐ Deculture 05/25/14(Sun)12:43:17 No.32351732

>>32351724

You will. Y-you...you promise you will.

What's...what's happening to her? What's going on?

"Can't...hold on much longer. Not...meant to stay on this long." Malal drunkenly steps back, her bloodied dress made even more grisly as she vomits a mouthful of blood down her front, just as a hole seems to rip itself right in the center of her chest. Revealing blackened flesh underneath and a clear lack of a beating heart. "I'm...ngh...I have to go. Remember, you promised--"

Yes! You promised! You'll take care of Girl A!

"G-good. That's...good." Malal sighs, just as she sinks to her knees, grunting as two skeletal wings stringed with tendons and gore rips its way out from her back, the falling feathers adhering to them. "H-heh. I...didn't think it'd hurt this much...b-but at least you're waking up now."

...What? Waking...up?

"S-sorry." The pink-haired girl manages to breathe just before pitching forward, falling face-first into the feather-blanketed ground. She heaves a few more breaths, each one shallower than the last, before finally lying still.

+ Sorry...about Cavefish. Sorry about...everyone. +

And with a deafening scream, the storm of black feathers turns into a hurricane, blinding you completely and utterly.

"Yuma?...Yuma, wake up! WAKE UP!"

And for the second time, you do. Immediately reaching up with both hands to slap away the one trying to pull your helmet off of your head, even with your suit's pressure seals still active.

Your eyes - gummed up with grit and dried blood - snap open after a few tries, your vision strangely blurry and dim but not enough that you don't catch the bright red warning prompts flooding your retinal display. Warning you about things like 'critical suit damage' and 'terminal brain embolism imminent' and 'life signs failing'. Stuff you don't particularly care about at the moment.

You blink-click them all away, ignoring them all to focus on your rescuer.

It's Enyo. The stump of her severed arm bleeding anew, and her mask a swollen mask of blood and pain.

"Yuma? Yuma, you're up. Thank the First Knight, the Blessed Lady, and all her servants." Enyo, visibly relieved, hauls you from the cairn of blood-soaked skulls and snow you seem to have been buried underneath. "Are you hurt? Do you have any wounds that need to be taken care of right away?" Before you can answer, though, it's here that the raven-haired Karasawa turns to roar at a few other Knights picking through the snow and skulls away from you, among the black-clad bodies of the fallen. "APOTHECARY! SOMEONE GET ME AN APOTHECARY, I FOUND THE EMPEROR'S CHAMPION!"

How do you respond?

Thematically it would seem to make more sense for Homu to have torn it out at some point.

The raven feathers would seem to point to corruption of some kind, and not nessicarily be indicative of Homu.

Yuma is totally one of Homu's. She's totally messed up inside. She's not the same kind of orderly thinker that Malal was. What she does have is the same kind of laser guided focus that made Homu go nuts trying to protect Madoka.

Yes. The "average" range would be from Malal height to Mami height. Mami would actually be just on the borderline of being actually considered "tall". Maybe tall enough to call attention, but not enough for anyone to remark "God, she's tall". Midori and Sayaka, on the other hand, are at a range where people would definitely notice and comment "That's a tall girl"

You're fine, you manage to lie with a level voice, despite the fact that the grey fog in your eyes doesn't seem to go away no matter how many times you blink, or that you feel like puking your guts out with every breath sawing in and out of your bruised lungs. Can she just not shout, actually? And where's the High Marshal? You still need to keep your promise. Still need to tell her how Enyo wants to fuck her.

"E-eh? I, er, I mean..." Enyo blinks at you, trailing off into an uncertain and embarrassed silence - and for a moment you realize that if it weren't for the mask of dried blood covering her forehead and cheeks, you'd have seen the Marshal blush. Then again, she IS already red, so that's probably moot, too.

"...It's alright, Miss Yuma." The one-armed Knight finally manages to find her tongue once more. "The High Marshal is recuperating in the temporary apothecarion your Incubator has generously provided us in this time of need, and...well..." She glances around furtively. "I've decided that I will tell her myself, once she's recovered fully from her injuries. Better that she hears it from me personally, now that we both survived the unsurviveable together." The raven-haired Karasawa gives you a wan smile, before offering her mechanical hand. "I thank you nonetheless for the attempt."

Right. Fine. Whatever. You slap her hand away, making to pull yourself back up to your own feet by your own horsepower. It's...it's not like you cared anyway. Freakin'...freakin' lesbians.

You shake your head, tasting your own blood in your mouth, the sight of a pink-haired girl being drowned in black feathers flashing in front of you again and again and again.

It's here that you remember a name. A name you're supposed to remember. A name you're supposed to care about, moreso now in this time, in this place. Something that has to do with caves, fish, and a whole lot of muscles. Not a lot of brains, but a lot of muscles--

You stop in your tracks, and whirl back towards Enyo. The motion threatening to flood your vision with crimson mist, making the bile rise dangerously high in your throat.

Cavefish. CAVEFISH. Where is she? WHERE'S YOUR BEST FRIEND?

She should be alive, she should be safe, after you broke the black blade back when everything was going to shit--

"You did. You broke the black blade." Enyo nods, and it's here that she unclips something from behind her. A Culexus helmet, sized for someone tall and large, with the resin-cast of a giant great white shark's jaw welded onto it. Gray brittle dust coating the padded insides, adhering to where blood had dried upon it.

No. NO. She shouldn't be...she shouldn't--

Not Cavefish. Not your best friend, who only wanted second helpings of breakfast and working up a sweat in the gym during early mornings.

"We found her corpse only a few meters away from where we found you," The Knight explains in low, respectful tones. "We tried to revive her, but as soon as we got her Anima Speculum off, she dissolved into nothing but ash inside her suit." She coughs, here. "We had our own staff analyze her recorded biometrics afterwards, and it seems that at one point during the melee, she was completely and totally drained of her magic, in the span of no less than five seconds. Something drained her of her strength and will and used it for their own purposes."

What? How? None of the daemons couldn't have done that, Kharn couldn't have, so--

NO. YOU COULDN'T HAVE--YOU WERE ONLY TRYING TO STOP KHARN--

"It's only a theory," Enyo tries to calm you, her one mechanical hand clamping down on your shoulder. "We...we don't know if you did drain her of her magic to stop the Betrayer's blade. What we do know is that no one else, not even Malal herself, could have done it unassisted." She forces a smile, here. "Perhaps...perhaps Miss Yuma is more powerful than she thinks she is. Maybe Malal did choose a worthy prodigy and replacement."

That's...no. You don't want to think about that right now. It's...too horrible to even consider.

You shake your head again, clutching Cavefish's bloodied, dented helmet to your chest.

...Also, Betrayer? They're calling Kharn the Betrayer, now?

"It seems only fitting," The Marshal replies, the sterness in her voice returning. "She did betray us. You, Miss Malal, The Second, and the Ninth." She shakes her head. "If it weren't for your Incubator asking us to find her and give her back intact, I would have challenged her to single combat, right here, right now." Enyo turns to spit a glob of bloody spit into the snow. "Although, with her in such a state, I doubt that would be satisfying as it would be."

...Why? What's happened to Kharn?

Enyo turns to point, and you follow her line of sight.. In the very center of the bloodied, skull-covered snowy clearing, is what looks like a bloodied, emaciated-looking Kharn. Naked except for the heavy snow coat thrown about on her shoulders. Crying. Holding a limp, still-helmeted corpse to her, shrieking Malal's name. Pleading for her not to leave her.

"Mourning." Enyo's voice is hollow, cold.

How do you react?

Not to mention that Kharn did not witch out of personal failure. Yuma knows that the unknown group who stabbed Kharns soulgem with that unknown knife caused Kharn to witch out artificially.

They are the ones to blame for this, not Kharn. Its interesting that Yuma apparently never bothers to inform anyone that Kharn was forced into this so-called "betrayal".

You decide to leave Kharn alone. It's...you want to punch her off of Malal's corpse, you want to make her suffer, you want her to feel responsible for what she did.

Something tells you that she's doing a well enough job of that all by herself, however.

"How...how did Malal die?" You manage to ask Enyo as you turn towards her, Cavefish's helmet still cradled to your chest. "How did...Kharn, did she--"

"Miss Malal appeared just as you broke the black blade." The one-armed Knight nods. "She stood in front of Walpurgisnacht and killed it with a single arrow from her blindingly-bright bow. The beast toppled to the ground, dead. Miss Malal joined her a moment later, with a smile on her face." She gestures to Kharn with an expression approaching disgust. "What you see is what is left. The Betrayer, and the remains of our slain friends."

And Mordred? You can't help but see Enyo flinch as you say the name. Where's Mordred?

"Escaped." The raven-haired Marshal says after a moment. "Unfortunately, the Princess is intimately-attuned to her armor, as is every Black Templar, and thus knows how to evade our conventional tracking methods. Regardless, we have already sent out teams to retrieve, to see that she answer for her...transgressions."

It's here that she looks at you with clear regret and pain. "...We have failed you, Chitose Yuma, and in behalf of the Second Officio, I apologize." Enyo lowers herself to one knee, her armor's servo joints protesting at the gesture of humble submission.

"Not only did we fail you as a comrade, but also as an Emperor's Champion. We are shamed and disgraced by the stain of cowardice." She unsheathes her sword from her side, and offers it to you, handle first. "We owe you a debt of honor, Chitose Yuma, and we will not rest until we have redeemed ourselves."

You look down at the one-armed knight holding out her sword to you, kneeling in the snow and blood and skulls, and slowly nod.

Y-yeah. Yeah, you'll...accept. There may come a time when you need to call on their help once more, after all.

Enyo looks up at you, her bloodied face brightening in a smile, before she bows once more. "You...you do our bereaved Officio a boon today, Miss Yuma. On behalf of the Black Templars and the Second Officio, I thank you. We will not fail you again."

The days meld themselves into a blur past that point.

You remember being herded into the temporary hospital Kyuubey's had constructed near Ground Zero, and hearing how he plans on building a facility right at that very same spot.

You remember Kharn fighting tooth and nail as she is seperated from Malal's corpse, and how you only felt cold when you saw your Rank Leader's lifeless frame being carried into the mortuary, along with the rest of those who perished during Walpurgisnacht. Some were cremated, others were shipped off into coffins, to be buried in their desired hometowns. Cavefish - or what was left of her - was respectfully gathered into an urn and buried in the Officio graveyard, with her portrait placed in the Hall of Anamnesis.

Finally, you remember getting home. Back to headquarters.

You ignore Kyoko's fortieth call to your cellphone, along with Sayaka's twentieth enraged voicemail.

You ignore Kyuubey's summons to his office, Mami calling upon you for a social visit.

You even ignore Haruka's invitation for tea.

You remember, as you opened the door to your room - falling to your knees and crying as loud and as hard as you can as you see what awaited your arrival.

Twenty small boxes, all in all, piled neatly on top of your bed. Each one labelled carefully with a girl's first name and last name, each one addressed to this building, to this floor, to this room, to YOU.

And one of them bearing a very familiar name, with a picture of you and a taller, darker-skinned girl grinning at the camera with your helmet visors raised.

You won, you tell yourself. You saved the world from Walpurgisnacht, and you survived.

But with all your friends gone, you're...not sure it's worth saving at all anymore.

“Tell me, my dear, what's the most important thing for a Magical Girl?”

“Is it...is it strength? Strength of the body?”

A smile, a shake of the head. “Not quite.”

“Is it will? The will to succeed no matter the obstacle?”

The smile grew wider. “Closer.”

Pause. “Then...faith. Faith and trust in your comrades.”

Another shake of the head. “No. It's iron.” A pair of hands, warm like a mother's, reached over to my head and began brushing my hair. “Inner iron. It's the ability to bear whatever blows life hurls at you, without flinching, without giving in, without letting go.” She planted a light kiss on my forehead.

“Everything else comes from that.”

Hunting rogue Magical Girls is hard work. Harder when you're the first response squad sent in to contain and eliminate the traitor, with minimal intel and shoddy planning. Hardest of all when your target is a dear friend who everyone used to love and look up to.

But someone has to do this thankless duty.

“Status?”

“Deceased.”

“Soul Gem?”

Wordlessly, she stuck out a gloved hand towards me, palm outstretched. Sitting there was a small pile of glittering gold and green shards.

“...I see.”

We were Squad Ferrum, proud Eversors all: once five, now four. We'd been out on patrol when we got word that the traitor had butchered an entire coffee shop filled with innocent people. Our job was to find and contain the traitor as soon as possible—she was one of our best, and if she got away there would be many more civilian casualties to come.

The rest of my squad brought forth Redeyes, or what was left of her. I knelt down to survey the damage.

The traitor had sawn her in half, from right shoulder to left hip, but not before a rifle wound to the right knee had taken off her leg...poor girl. Given the ragged meat and rough-hewn bones, she wasn't cut quickly, either, though the screams she broadcast through the vox had already attested to that. Lying there on the concrete rooftop on some who-the-fuck-knows building in the city's heart, her blood reflecting the light of the full moon, Redeyes wasn't the pigtailed, ruthless, yet somehow hapless killer I'd commanded for three months. Now, she was just a piece of meat bleeding out onto the floor. I bit back a sigh.

I saw a glint light: moisture around the eye sockets: Redeyes had been crying when she died. As I reached out to close the brown eyes that stared into nothing, I recalled the time she'd promised to never cry again. She wanted to grow out of the mocking callsign we'd given her—Redeyes, because she was such a crybaby.

That was Squad Ferrum for you. We put aside our real names and took up callsigns in their stead: new names reflecting our weaknesses, to remind ourselves of the flaws that we had to overcome. Mine was Ironskull, supposedly because I was stubborn to a fault and never smiled.

A voice to my right hissed, “That bitch. That cunt, that shitsucker, that motherless fucking bitch, she'll bleed and scream for this I fucking swear it on the motherfucking Lady...”

That was Blacktongue. You can see why we call her that.

I glanced at Blacktongue. The tall girl's mattock, a pick-like weapon wrought with flowery designs etched in ebony and blue, twitched in her shaking fist. Her whole body trembled with barely-contained rage.

“We'll find the traitor, Blacktongue.” I rose and clapped my hand on her shoulder. “I promise you that. Now focus.” A stiff nod was my reply.

I scanned the three remaining squadmates under my command:

Doghair, because of her obsession with her hair and her vanity. Leadfoot, because she ran like a fat man lugging a hundred-pound rucksack. Blacktongue I already explained. They stood there, some of them trembling with hatred, others stiff with shock.

“Squad Ferrum,” I said, my voice an emotionless monotone, “we move.” I nodded at a splash of blood on the concrete—not Redeyes', for once, but our target's. The fruit of Redeyes' sacrifice. She could have run away when she'd stumbled upon the traitor during our sweep of the area—we told her as much—but she chose to engage, to keep the traitor from slipping away. She didn't have a chance, we told her. She'd need backup.

“There isn't enough time!” she'd squeaked. “She'll get away by the time you get here! I'll engage the traitor and try at least draw some blood. I can do that at least, right?” We told her that she probably couldn't even do that.

“I can,” she'd said. “Trust me.”

We'd never heard such conviction from Redeyes before. Such will, such determination. So we put our faith in the youngest of us and the least of us. And in the last moments of her life, even as the traitor she'd once loved carved her like butcher's meat, she did not fail us. With the splatter of blood, and Blacktongue's magic, we could track the traitor.

As Squad Ferrum moved out, I glanced back at the corpse.

Her name was Alice Lim, callsign Redeyes. She liked movies, cola, and MM x MM fanfiction, and had a tendency to cry at the drop of a hat. She told me once that I was the best squad leader she'd ever had—not that she'd had very many—and I'd sworn to her to one day make her the greatest Magical Girl in the Officio.

She was the first to fall.

Next to die was Blacktongue. She was our best tracker, which the traitor knew, so logically she was taken out first.

We were on the street, moving from cover to cover, heading towards the abandoned building we knew the traitor was hiding in. She was technically an Eversor, but she wielded firearms like a Vindicare and set traps like a Callidus; that meant we couldn't take things easy, even at a distance.

In hindsight, taking the alleyways would have been safer, but we were on a time crunch—we couldn't let the traitor get away, and the alleyways were slower than the main roads. If we take too long, we thought, the traitor would simply snipe us and then slip away. Better to storm her quickly.

The sniper round came without warning, and took out Blacktongue's left leg at the knee cap, sending the severed limb spinning through the air. The traitor always did have a thing for kneecaps.

The air filled with the sound of Blacktongue's stream of curses as we each dove headfirst into cover. I tried to grab Blacktongue and drag her to safety, but a second shot grazed the tip of my fingers, making me flinch.

I swallowed hard. I knew the traitor, and I knew that second shot wasn't a miss. It was a warning. The traitor could have shot out the Soul Gem on my right wrist, ended it right there. But she didn't—she was toying with me. With a heavy heart, I scurried back into cover. Blacktongue was now the bait, I told myself, and going for her was playing right into the traitor's hands.

I repeated those words over and over as Blacktongue's cursing turned into wails, each sniper's round taking off a new limb.

“Squad Leader!” screamed Doghair. “For fuck's sake, we have to help her!”

“Squad Leader!”

“Stay. In. Cover.”

“But she's—”

“I gave you an order,” I said, fighting to keep my own voice steady.

>> ☐ From Whence Cometh Iron? Part 1 Onceborn 05/25/14(Sun)15:15:52 No.32354088

“You bitch!” Doghair made to leap at me. Leadfoot held her tight, whispering words of comfort and keeping Doghair still with her massive bulk. “You fucking bitch! She's your friend! Go and help her, goddamn it!”

I was about to reprimand her when a voice came in on the vox.

“S-shut the fuck up, Doghair, you colossal pussy.”

It was Blacktongue. I don't know how she did it, but she through sheer force of will she was conscious and speaking. Barely.

“Eversor p-pain-management tricks,” she managed to pant out, sweat plastering her long red hair to her face. “Didn't you listen in c-c-class, you cockmongler?” So you say, but you're barely holding on as it is. “Shut the fuck up and listen. T-take out your sidearm, and shoot the s...smoke grenade on my left hip.”

I hesitated. “The bullet will overpenetrate and hit you.”

“Fuck me,” said Blacktongue, “now we've got a s-second colossal pussy. Look you bitch-ass idiot, I'm fucking dead already, so hurry the fuck up and—AAAARGH!” Blacktongue cried out as yet another sniper bullet slammed into her, this time her shoulder.

“FUCKING DO IT!” screamed Blacktongue, spitting bile to clear her throat. “She'll go for my Soul Gem next, then you! Now shoot the fucking the smoke grenade, you cunt!”

I drew my sidearm. Doghair was still begging me to get Blacktongue to cover. Blacktongue dissolved into another stream of barely-understandable oaths and screams and wails.

I added my own curse into the deluge. Fuck this mission. Fuck our duty. Fuck the fact the traitor just had to have Vindicare training and was a wicked shot with an old Dragunov. I knew the traitor could handle a gun, but not like this.

I took aim at the smoke grenade at Blacktongue's hip. Her twitching and convulsions meant it was hard to get a bead; my own shaking arm didn't help, either.

-“Hey, let's grab a beer after we punch out! On me, of course.”-

Blacktongue's favorite words, always said with that cocksure, shit-eating grin. It was times like those when she became the raucous party girl she really was. I'd reluctantly take her up on that offer, then follow her around, make sure she wouldn't get absolutely shit-faced. I never really liked drinking myself, but someone had to look out for her. And I made absolutely certain she never found out I had fun too.

Why was I remembering this now?

I steadied my aim and pulled the trigger. With a BANG, the grenade spewed pink smoke that instantly engulfed the area, obscuring the traitor from us, and us from the traitor. We took the opportunity to scatter and try to reach the traitor's hideout through back alleys, keeping in vox contact to coordinate our movements.

There was an image burned into my mind as I sped through the alleyways. It was a bullet, a round fired from a Dragunov, slamming into the gold-and-red Soul Gem that Blacktongue always wore on her left earring. It had struck home the same instant I detonated the smoke grenade.

Her name was Eirwen Banes, callsign Blacktongue. She liked good booze, hanging out with friends, and sports of all kinds, and she swore like a sailor. When off-duty, I considered her one of my closest friends.

She was the second to fall.

As I am STRIDING down the halls of the Sixth, it must be known that today... Today is a GLORIOUS day in the land down under! I, Heather Crunch, have been tasked with illuminating the newest recruits that have been vetted by the warmaster! It may be the week's end, but for these fledgling magical girls, it is a NEW BEGINNING! And also a PIZZA PARTY, for I am feeling -particularly- MAGNANIMOUS today!

Arms swinging, back straight, head held high, blood -burning-, I am on my way to shape these new kids to be the BEST they can BE!

Ha! I LOVE my job!

"You smile any wider and your head will fall right off, Crazy Crunch."

A smug voice speaks out of thin air! Have I gone mad? Nay, it's just -that- person up to her usual shtick. Not enough to break my stride!

"And a good afternoon to you too, Madge," comes my sternly worded reply. These words are stern. Stern words to express my sternness at how difficult this apparition can be. CRUEL, MOCKING LAUGHTER gives way to the appearance of a wicked grin and red eyes (lacking the same spark as mine, of course) floating in midair, before the rest of the magical girl follows suit. In her sharply tailored vest and skirt, Madge looks every bit the watch-wearing dildo, save for the tattoos on her exposed arms. And the snake bracelet. And the cape, the cape's pretty sweet.

She's okay. A stick in the mud, but one with a good sense of humor at least.

"On the way to bother someone else with your hyperactive nosiness?" she sneers, walking ahead and matching my pace step for step. "Or maybe to cause thousands in property damage to your own Officio?" It's like a little game of snarking off, where the first one out loses. Well I'm not out yet!

"What I was -going- to do was grab some pizza and beer for the newest squad before putting them through their paces, seeing what they can do. Congratulatory gestures before breaking them in." I emphasize such congratulatory gestures with congratulatory gesticulation.

"Or breaking them apart," Madge responds dryly. "So you're putting bad ideas into the heads of the impressionable new recruits while they're drunk. Wonderful. At least getting them tattoos isn't the worst thing you can do." Which is true, considering everybody and their mother seems to have them down here to keep score. I have to make do with collecting weapons from the fallen, which you can't really show off.

But hold on, something is amiss! "Aren't you supposed to be overseas on our opportunistic orations involving the Eighth?" I inquire inquisitively.

Madge spins around and smirks, SMIRKS at me for my misstep in our conversational tango, before she issues a correction : "It's the Seventh, and that was yesterday. You need to get your schedule in order."

Grrr. "That's your schedule, Madge, not mine."

"You should know my schedule anyway. Try reading the things that are handed to you instead of passing them off to whoever's nearest at the moment."

She's putting on airs again, but I don't really have a response for that other than a resigned, "Yes, Your Majesty." Maybe the papers have her real name listed on them.

"Damn straight. ANYWAY," she goes on, "the goodwill talks went fine, despite -somebody- telling them our customary greeting is sniffing arses, and getting my title wrong." That's the quickest I've seen her go from smug to irritated in all the time I've seen her. "Damn near every Callidus from every other Officio I've met calls me an Eversor. ...I can tell you, I've never been an Eversor once in my career. I'm not dumb as shit-"

"Haha!" I exclaim, stopping in my tracks as a revelation strikes me like the fist of an angry god! "Rejoice, Madge, for your monologue has given me divine inspiration to enact a MONUMENTAL CHANGE in my person!"

"You're going to stop pretending you're a stage performer?" Nice try Madge but THERE IS NO STOPPING THE CRUNCH TRAIN WHEN IT'S CRUNCH TIME! CHOO CHOO!

Now strike a pose. Strike a different pose!

"My weapon," I bellow out loud enough for them to hear all the way back in Japan, "My glorious, passionate weapon, and now I have a name for it." Strike another different pose! And shout "The Eversword!"

Madge is flabbergasted, as expected. "Ever... Sword?"

Gotcha! "All the time! Do you ever sword?" I say with the biggest grin I can manage.

"Oh for..." The Callidus rank leader buries her face in both hands, no doubt unable to look upon the laughing face of TRIUMPH! Which is my face, MY VISAGE OF VICTORY!

Time sure flies, I thought the kitchen was a bit further off, but the smell of food and heat wafts through the double doors on my left. Either that or I'm still getting used to this place. I've only been here once before. "Well that was fun, but I have to stick to -my- schedule doing -my- scheduled things at a time -I- scheduled." I head in backwards, waving goodbye to the flustered Madge. "Ciao for now!" And turn back to complete darkness.

Why is it pitch black in here? And why does it smell like paint? I squint in the darkness, which even my burning spirit fails to dispel, and grope the wall behind me for a light switch. It goes on with a "click" and I'm confronted by paint cans and cleaning solvents in a small, cramped space. Huh?

"Why, Crunch," comes Madge's voice from outside, who I imagine has a very ugly look on her face right now, "How come you ran into that broom closet? You're already in your ridiculous costume."

You've gone too far, Madge! I burst out of the closet in a fighting pose and roar, "It's a fanTAStic costume you... You... Okay, you got me. That one was pretty good." I don't normally like Callidus tricks, but in retrospect it does make me laugh. "Gosh, I don't know WHAT came over me. I must have gotten LOST or something."

"Yeah, you want to go down the right hall for the kitchen," she says, jerking her thumb in that direction.

"Very well, then." Before I go, I remove my hat and do my best curtsey before my most worthy opponent. "Farewell, Your Majesty."

"Catch ya later, Crazy Crunch," she salutes, heading in the opposite direction.

As Madge indicated, the kitchen waits down the aforementioned hall. As I set my amazing hat back where it belongs, I know my destination by the scent of melted cheese wafting through the double doors. Then, kicking open the entrance dramatically, I scan the stainless steel stovetops and find NOTHING approaching what I asked for. Instead, cleverly hidden in plain sight near the entrance is ONE pizza-sized container, ONE ten gallon-ish keg of the good stuff, and ONE sealed container of what I am sure is death adder venom for extra kick. I'm... Not sure where the cooks went BUT IT DOESN'T MATTER because I have to make it to the other side of the building in five minutes or less!

Which means hefting the keg in one hand, holding the box in the other, and carrying the poison in my mouth. Then breaking into a FULL RUN down the corridors. Streaking past the utility closet. Past the gym. Past the sauna. Past the weapon rooms. Past the Spider Room - no time to check in on Slam. Weaving around the people who are just TOO DAMN SLOW, and vaulting over obstructions! There would have been some close calls had I not had the foresight to bind the box with sticky tape. I will NOT drop my payload, and I will NOT be late!

There it is up ahead! The lounge designated as the meeting place is a just a few steps away, but the clock is ticking down. Time may not be on my side, BUT HEATHER CRUNCH CAN TAKE ANY ENEMY! At the last second, I dramatically dive through the doorway, tape weaving around everything to keep it from falling, and... MADE IT! I have conquered time itself to teach the new blood all about magical girling!

Putting the precious payload down on the ground, and spitting out the canister, I swiftly survey the serene surroundings to spot my students. The lounge is mostly empty, save for enough cushions to stack to the moon - I should start on that when I have more free time. And sitting in the middle of the room, eyes concealed beneath a hood, is a figure cloaked in black from head to toe that fails to fully hide its... Horns? Small bat-like wings flap on her back, so she might be part bat. Her arms are covered in bandages, sloppily so. And she's gripping a wicked looking scythe as though letting go would cause her to plummet to her death. She hasn't said a thing all this time, staring intensely at the ground.

"Salutations!" I greet exuberantly before I launch my queries, "I was told that there would be at least four of you. Is everyone else late?"

The robe turns to look at me, face too dark to make out. It's not even that dark in here. "No," it replies, gruff, grim, and resolute. "There's only me. Ever since that day, it's always been just me. My only companions are pain, and the hatred that sustains me on the dark path I walk : to avenge my parents."

...Seriously?

"Enough with your charade!" I demand, "I can hear your co-conspirators sniggering back there!" They probably thought they concealed themselves well, but my finely honed senses picked up them doing their best to muffle their laughter. NOT GOOD ENOUGH TO FOOL HEATHER CRUNCH!

The robed girl sighs and pulls back her hood, revealing the horns to be a set of ears. "I told you this was a bloody stupid idea," she growls, her tone of voice completely different from before. Robe girl relaxes her posture as she throws off the cowl to reveal a far more typical uniform, including a jacket. Which means those aren't real ears. It's just an ear-shaped hood. Ha, I was right again!

"It woulda worked if you coulda kept your mouth shut!" scolds another voice from about twenty feet to my left, behind a big pile of pillows. The outwitted novices assemble before me in a line before standing at attention. I count three cats, and one bat trying to look like a cat. Which is... Close enough. SOMEBODY owes me a hundred dollars for that bet! Which means I am one hundred dollars closer to financing my dream!

But now's not the time for that. Now is the time to be -professional-.

I clear my throat loudly before I begin pacing in front of the newly assembled group. "As magical girls," I explain, voice booming, hands clasped tightly behind my back, "it is our task, our sworn duty, to hunt down those who have fallen to corruption! But to do so, you must be ready, ready for anything, at any time, from anywhere! You must be keen, strong, and cunning! Keen enough to find villainy wherever it lurks! Strong enough to smite such evils! And cunning enough to outwit otherwise overwhelming odds and emerge on top!"

I go on like this for a few more minutes, saying whatever comes to mind. About our mission. About how hard we must train every day. About our loyalties. About working together. By the end, they're looking at me in complete awe. It is a good feeling.

Time to finish this. I spin around to face them again, getting up in their faces as I bellow out, "Is that clear?"

Four arms go up in a salute. "Aye aye, Cap'n!" they reply in unison.

...Russ, what have you told them? I feel myself breaking into a grin. No! Keep a straight face! Don't lose out to the urge to laugh! Do not break! Suppress it! SUPPRESS IT NOW!

...HELL YES! Even my own emotions are no match for Heather Crunch!

"Enough formalities! Now we get to the fun stuff!" I return to the cargo I hauled in earlier, sliding the box across the floor. Bat opens up the box to reveal a most fitting treat : a deep dish, stuffed crust pizza, topped with bits of bacon and crushed glass. And some Carlton Dry plus death adder venom to wash it down. Perfect for making them tough on the –inside- as well as on the –outside-, as I explain to them. They are apprehensive at first, moreso after seeing me spear the food with my trusty golden chopsticks to eat it, but after seeing my greatness indulge itself without dropping dead, they too found it to their liking.

There's some jolly carousing done between all of us - I let them get some shots in on me and rated their hits as "acceptable" – and every last scrap, every last drop, all of it is soon CONSUMED by our ravenous hunger! It is then I get to the -true- reason that they are here.

"Now, does everybody have their kits?"

Four heads nod along in response. The kits in question, likely kept in their inventories, hold many tools necessary to a magical girl's continued survival. A spare grief seed, a first aid kit, and a portable barbecue pit. Because hunger is always watching, waiting, ready to STRIKE while your guard is down! NEVER let the hunger win! Beat it with food until it relents!

"Your task then is to go out and hunt down something for the kitchens to use," I explain, pacing in front of them. "Something that you must subdue with your own hands! And then make it back before midnight."

"Then why'd you go and get us all pissed?" queries Cat #2, DARING to question my generosity.

"Remember, you WON'T always be in peak physical and mental condition in battle. But you MUST persevere, is that clear?"

Four hands stand back and salute. "Aye aye, Capn'n!"

"EXCELLENT! Of course, this is -completely optional-, so if you're SCAREDY CATS, you don't have to follow me outside!"

I turn away from the group and march back down the halls, toward one of the rear entrances. I kick that open and expose myself to the sun and the elements, trekking for an entire mile before I stop and turn around. All four of the new recruits followed me here. I can SEE the fire in their eyes as they seek to prove themselves!

Bless their hearts.

I circle around them, bellowing out preparations for what is to follow. "What comes next requires that you suck in your guts and grit your teeth."

My instructions being followed to the letter, I will my weapon, my Eversword, into my hands. Winding my arms back, I howl my next command:

"…and BRACE FOR IMPACT!"

Before any questions could be asked, before anybody could turn their heads, but after adequate bracing could be made, the broad part of my Eversword CRASHES into their unprotected backs. I hear my name repeated several times by their bones as all four hopefuls are sent screaming skyward!

"DIIIIIIISSSSMISSED!" I call after them as they become a twinkle on the horizon. I've got a fair amount of time before they get back – I'm sure they'll get back, I believe in them – that I need to kill. Slinging my Eversword over my back and wiping the blood from my coat, I decide to jog the rest of the way back – I've been neglecting the fitness of my legs. And that is a –weakness- that could be exploited by an enemy. I'll have to double, if not triple, my required running for the day, starting right now.

NOBODY EXPLOITS CRUNCH!

And so I do my runs. Fifteen miles becomes twenty. Soon the sun has set from the sky, and the stars are coming out. It’s time for my nightly ritual– counting out the stars in the sky, and then telling them to their star-faces that I BURN MORE INTENSELY THAN THEM, HAHA!

I hope those recruits made it back. They've still got a few minutes to go, but time marches on RELENTLESSLY in its efforts to trample their dreams.

Before I do any of that, I have to check on Slam. Surely after overcoming such a trial, her latent abilities will have come to-

"YOU HAVE A PHONE CALL! YOU HAVE A PHONE CALL! YOU-"

THAT would be my phone. I fetch the handy device from my pocket and put it up to my ear. "Hello?"

"...Hey, Cap'n." That's Berry's voice.

"I was JUST heading in to meet with-"

"Yeah, about that?" Grrr, she cut me off. "Gonna need ya to come up to the roof. Right now."

"What happened?"

Berry sighs loudly and ominously replies, "Yer gonna wanna see this for yerself," before the call ends. Whatever it is, it sounds serious and demands I make it there post-haste!

Breaking into a full run, I reach the officio building and kick open the doors once more. The halls are mostly empty at this hour, which means nothing can stop me. Up the flights of stairs, leaping up two at a time. Then three. Four. Faster, faster faster!

At the apex of my ascent, I throw the door to the roof open, and am greeted by a most grisly spectacle. The planter boxes have been upturned. Furniture has been hurled about. And everything is covered in rose petals and dirt.

I cup my hands around my mouth and holler, "Hey Berry! What is the meaning of this?"

No answer. There's no way she didn't hear me! I walk out a few steps and make to try again, before realizing I've stepped in something sticky. Looking down, I find some kind of white film clinging to my boot. No, not film, a web. And now that I look closer, there's webbing EVERYWHERE.

Echoing across the rooftop, a low voice threatens me. "Eversor Rank Leader Heather Crunch," it hisses, "we need to have a little chat."

“Atomic power!”

Snow fell gently out of the windows of the 86th Floor of the Empire State Building. It was a cold December morning that a Doctor of the SSO and the head of a Security Company were discussing alternative energy.

“Atomic power.”

Doctor Clark Savage slammed his hand on the bright blueprint on his desk, grinning. “Atomic power!”

>>=[| Researcher and Agent of the Strategic Services Office |]=<<

Doctor Savage stood straight, crossing his muscular arms as he began explaining the concept to the very disinterested girl sitting at the desk. “Of course, Atomic power. That is way of the future! What you have here is an unlimited energy, not bound by magic or anything the Incubators may have, no. This is purely man’s creation, this is his destiny. And all within a microscopic particle invisible to the naked eye.

“Monk, Renny, and Long Tom have been working on this for years. It is a miniaturized device which focuses the power of the atom, into clean, sustainable energy. Unlike coal, oil, or diesel which dominate the power industry, nuclear power is limited only by our imagination and our willingness. And our first prototype of this device is in my personal rigid airship and it is what powers it.”

The girl nodded. “Uh huh.”

“And the key thinking here young miss is that, even despite those who would be abuse this power, the knowledge to build these devices is left only to the righteous and the good willed. Even I don’t know how this device works beyond how to turn it on and off,” said Doctor Savage as he sat in his big leather chair. The girl was a bit jealous, that chair looked comfy.

The girl nodded again. “So, when will it be ready? You know, so I can… buy it.”

“Buy it?” Doctor Savage busted into hearty laughter at that. “Oh, goodness, you aren’t buying this thing! I understand you run a Security Company, and that’s fine and all, but this design is not for sale. Quite the contrary, when all the kinks are worked out and we can find a way to mass produce this design, I plan on making it available to all. And I understand that once all people attain this amount of power, we might as well end all war as we know it. Think about it, would a nation really go to war if he knew the other could end it at just the touch of a button?”

The girl glared at him, her arms crossed.

Doctor Savage’s smile faded a bit as he folded his hands together and rested them on his desk. “Ah, I can see you feel like I’ve wasted your time, Miss Deladrier. I apologize, but that’s the reality of the situation.”

>>=[| JEANINE DELADRIER |]=<<
>>=[| Head of Siren Security Company and Magical Girl Siren |]=<<

Deladrier sighed. “Doctor Savage, I understand you like bragging about your so-called breakthroughs, but my time is precious. I came here to see it, and I would like to see it now.”

“Really?” Deladrier leaned forward in her seat.

“Really. I believe Operator #5 has taken possession of it for now, for studying purposes.” Doctor Savage took a file out of a shelf, then quickly flipped through .

“Great!” Deladrier threw her arms in the air, and then let them flop at her side. “So I come all the way from France just to hear that the one thing I need to make my company a bit more powerful, is in the hands of some paranoid basement dweller!”

Doctor Savage nodded. “That’s so. I do deeply apologize again. If it were anything else, I’d definitely would see what I can do considering the services you provided the SSO but this is different, Miss Deladrier."

With a click, the door opened up. Doctor Savage and Deladrier looked to see the new arrivals. Walking into the room was a pair of security guards, escorting in three girls and a Messenger of Magic. "Ah, you've arrived!" said Doctor Savage as he stood up and walked around the desk.

Deladrier glared at Sumire as Liberty quickly walked over to hug Doctor Savage. As they began catching up, Deladrier said, "Ah, Sumire. I see you're still working for the SSO. That's a real surprise."

Sumire crossed her arms, giving Deladrier the mean eyes right back at her. After a few seconds, Sumire said in her most nasally childish voice, "Nani sore?"

Deladrier stood up, her eye twitching. "Oi, don't you try fooling me with your godawful language, chienne. I can swear in my native tongue just as much as you can!" She jabbed Sumire in the chest with her index finger.

The third Magical Girl forced herself in between, smiling nervously. "Now, guys. We don't need to argue or fight. Sumire, Jeanine's been a valuable help to the SSO and she's a good friend to us as well!" She smiled at Jeanine, a bit bashfully. "It's nice to see you again!"

Deladrier nodded, looking down at her. A minute passed, in which the girl's smile faded as Deladrier's expression turned to one of confusion. "Who are you again?"

Sumire started a fit of giggles as the girl shouted, "Rana Scott! Magical Girl Bomber! We've worked together before!"

>>=[| RANA SCOTT |]=<<
>>=[| Magical Girl Bomber |]=<<

"Oh, je suis desolee. My sincerest apologies, Rana," said Deladrier as she placed her hand on Rana's shoulder. "I forgot about you."

Rana crossed her arms, pouting. "Everyone does!"

"Right, right, sit down," said Doctor Savage. "Everyone, make yourselves comfy. Chris, it's good to see you again, truly it is." He sat down, grinning at her. "How are things on your end?"

Christine and the girls found chairs to sit down in as she said, "Same business, Doctor Savage. We've actually recently recovered an artifact for the SSO called a Grief Seed." Kirby leapt onto the desk, landing to a sitting position silently. Christine looked at him, narrowing her eyes, and then looked curiously at Doctor Savage. "You wouldn't happen to know what that is, right?"

Doctor Savage scratched his chin, his grin gone and replaced with a heavy frown. He glanced down at Kirby and then back at Christine. "Christine, I will be honest with you. Grief Seeds are a uh… anomaly of sorts. They aren't particularly in my area of expertise so to speak."

Sumire crossed her arms, rolling her eyes as she said, "What isn't in your area of expertise."

"You know, don't you, Doctor Savage?" said Christine.

"I do." He leant forward on the desk, looking Christine straight in the eye as he said, "My issue is that I do not believe you, Sumire, Rana, or even Miss Deladrier here are… ready for the information that would come with such a reveal."

The room was quiet for a moment. Everyone glanced at each other, nervously.

Sumire said, "Most of us have been Magical Girls under Kirby's contract for years. How come we can't know?"

Kirby said, "Because the information is irrelevant and unnecessary." He looked over at Doctor Savage. "Have you told them yet?"

"Oh right." Doctor Savage motioned over to a newspaper on top of a filing cabinet, to which Kirby galloped off the desk to retrieve it. Christine and Sumire looked at each other, skeptical. Then, Doctor Savage said, "Christine, you follow the news lately?"

"No." Christine was handed the newspaper by Kirby. The headline hit her and her fellow Magical Girls like a freight liner.

HITLER DISAVOWS MAGISCH KORPS, DECLARES THEM TERRORISTS

Doctor Savage nodded. “Came in yesterday. There have been reports of the Magisch Korps targeting various researchers, scientists, and other great minds regardless of nationality. Just last week, Engelhardt was spotted in China and is suspect in the murder of Doctor Hiraku Sato. Sato was a biochemist looking into something called power threads.”

Rana’s eyes widened. “Power threads?”

“They go by various names. Germans call them Lebenfaser, Japanese call them Seimei Sen’i. It’s a very mysterious sort of organism that manifests itself as a fiber of sorts. Parasitic, but when sewn right, the user is granted immense power.” Doctor Savage looked down at Kirby. “I assume our good friend here doesn’t know anything about this?”

Kirby shook his head. “They are what you may refer to as a wildcard. We do not possess enough information on power threads at current. But this is irrelevant, the Magisch Korps is hunting down researchers for some unknown purpose.”

Christine nodded. “Right. That was last week right?” She snapped her finger, looking concerned at Doctor Savage. “Are you sure you’re not a target, Doctor Savage?”

Doctor Savage chuckled at that. “What makes you say that?”

“Well…” Rana twiddled with her fingers. “Doctor Savage, you’re a very prominent inventor and researcher in so many fields. I mean, you’re bigger than Howard Hughes! You helped perfect rigid airship technology, and the Atlantropa project certainly wouldn’t have succeeded without your intellect.”

Kirby looked up at Doctor Savage. “Agreed. Perhaps you should go underground until it blows over, Doctor Savage.”

Christine’s ears perked up, and she quickly stood to look at the door. Before anyone could ask, the door burst open. Security guards. “Sir!” One of them ran up to Doctor Savage, a Tommy Gun in hand. “There are men on the street outside, gasmasks, armbands with the Magisch Korps emblem. We need to get you some place safe!”

“Speak of the devil!” Doctor Savage jumped out of his chair and started opened up his drawer to reveal a little detonator. “Quickly, to my elevator then, I’ve already rigged the office with enough firebombs to-“

Thump.

Everyone looked up.

Thump.

“The hell is that?” said one of the guards.

Christine gasped. She grabbed Doctor Savage’s arm. “We need to leave now!” she yelled.

The window shattered into a million pieces. Everyone hit the floor, covering themselves. Christine stood, looking to see their all-too familiar assailant.

>>=[| THE STORM ACE |]=<<

He cocked his gun, the same 30mm cannon he wielded at Skull Island. All the guards stood and pointed their guns at him. “Freeze! Drop the gun! Hands in the air!” they all screamed at him. The Storm Ace looked around, quiet, and then simply dropped the gun on the desk with a loud thud. He reached for the sky.

“Uh, big mistake,” said Sumire as she stood. “He doesn’t need the gun.”

Before he could react by attempting to fight the Storm Ace, Doctor Savage was dragged back into the hallway by Rana and Christine. Sumire, Deladrier, Kirby, and two guards quickly followed, shutting the door behind him. The fifteen guards remaining cocked their guns and again yelled for the Storm Ace’s surrender.

The group ran down the hallway to the elevator. Deladrier quickly pressed the call button, and they all turned to the office as the sounds of screams and gunfire started. They could hear bones breaking, spines snapping, and blood being splattered as they stood by the elevator.

“Stay behind me,” said Christine as she shielded Doctor Savage with her body. Doctor Savage grunted affirmatively.

Then the screams stopped.

Deladrier quickly started hammering the call button.

The door exploded. Savage hit the detonator, releasing a great burst of flame as his works were incinerated. The Storm Ace jumped out, his arm on fire and covered in blood. He burst forth at a sprint towards them.

“Not on my watch!” yelled Rana. She jumped forward, transforming in mid-air.

>>=[| MAGICAL GIRL BOMBER! |]=<<

She brought up her dual M1921 Thompsons. The guns blasted, the ammunition smacking the Storm Ace and buckling him to a stop. He knelt, raising his arms to absorb the fire.

Then the guns stopped, with a thud and a powerful silence.

Sumire yelled, “That’s my cue! He’s mine!”

>>=[| MAGICAL GIRL LIGHTNING! |]=<<

Lightning sped away from the group right at him, naginata held high. The Storm Ace’s response was to stand and clothesline her. She didn’t even hit the ground before he grabbed her neck and tossed her right back at the elevator doors with a thud.

Deladrier looked down at her. “Yours, huh?”

“Shut up!” Lightning said. The doors dinged open, and the group quickly stuffed themselves inside.

>>32354555
The Storm Ace dusted some .45 ACP poking into his sleeve, then began running at the elevator.

Deladrier was last to enter, and she turned and braced herself on the doors. She took a deep breath.

>>=[| MAGICAL GIRL SIREN! |]=<<

Siren screamed. The wallpaper shredded off the walls, the floor tiles snapped and shattered, the very air shook and distorted. The Storm Ace slowed as his armor buckled and weakened until the very ceiling came down on top of him, burying him under rubble and steel girders. Siren quickly backed up and let the doors close and the elevator descend.

“Jeez,” said Lightning to a heavily panting Siren. “I’d hate to see what you’re like in bed.” Siren simply glared at her, her fists balled up and resting on her dual pair of short axes.

Doctor Savage said, “Well, Miss Deladrier, Rana, Sumire, I must say thank you for stopping him.”

Christine said, “If that is the Storm Ace, all we’ve done is slow him down.”

The elevator slowed to a halt as it reached ground level. With a ding, the doors slid open and the group ran out towards the front entrance. Security guards regrouped with them from various parts of the lobby as they made their way out. Christine said, “We’ll get you up into hiding, Doctor Savage then we can-“

They stepped outside, only to find throngs of screaming people running from a platoon of gasmasked soldiers wearing the Magisch Korps emblem on armbands or their collars. Gegenmagischtruppen mostly, and even a few Storm Elites. Christine’s ears perked up, and she brought the group back to avoid a rain of shattering glass and debris. Down came the Storm Ace, a three point landing which shattered the ground beneath him.

He brought up his massive cannon, and the rest of the Magisch Korps troopers brought their guns up as well.

Christine brought herself up to the front of the group.

Their shells, bullets, and particles bounced and cracked off Liberty's shields. After a solid minute, their guns ran dry, and they dropped them to draw stunprods, machetes, and riot shields.

"Siren!" yelled Liberty. Siren leapt out from the group and steadied herself. She took a huge breath and wailed as loud she could.

The ground shook and cracked. Windows shattered and broke. Car tires popped and exploded. The troopers all buckled, gripping their heads and screaming in pain as the sound of her scream pierced their ears. The ones who weren't deafened had their bones shattered by the sonic waves. The ones who didn't have their bones shattered had their heads explode.

All except for the Storm Ace, who braced himself on the ground. His armor was dented and shattered from the previous attempt. But slowly, he advanced step by step. The very air trembled as Siren roared at him with all her might. Debris slammed into him as he got closer and closer.

"This ain't working!" yelled Bomber.

Doctor Savage said, "We'll take the flea run!"

"The what!?" screamed Lightning. She didn't get any clarification as Liberty, Bomber, Kirby, and Doctor Savage ran inside. Lightning grabbed Siren by the collar, stopping her scream as she dragged inside. They ran back inside the building, the guards quickly coming to lock and barricade the door behind them. Doctor Savage led them down the lobby and towards the front desk.

Lightning said, "I know you might want to admire that décor, but you realize that Big McLargeHuge is right behind us?" The guards braced the door as the Storm Ace attempted to force himself through.

Doctor Savage quickly hit a button under the desk. The desk split in two then slid out to reveal a hidden staircase right underneath.

Siren said, "You have a secret tunnel under the Empire State Building?"

"Well," Doctor Savage shrugged at that. "Technically, under all of New York. You have to be prepared for these things." He quickly headed down the steps, Liberty and Kirby following. Siren follows suit, as did Bomber. Lightning looked down, a bit reluctant, then the doors burst open. The guards all shot and fired at the Storm Ace before being tossed and thrown aside.

Lightning quickly ran down the stairs.

The stairs ran like a spiral and the steps were steep like a tower in a castle. Doctor Savage kept a flashlight up to help pierce the darkness and light the way.

"Kirby," said Liberty. "Listen, maybe this would be a good time to enlighten us about Grief Seeds or whatever we're missing out on?"

Kirby, whom was sitting on Doctor Savage's shoulder simply said, "You think being chased by a madman who hunts Magical Girls in a dark tunnel is a good time for that."

Lightning yelled, "Forget it! It's not like you're going to get anything out of Kirby! You remember the Atlantis thing?"

"How could I forget," said Liberty, as if wanting to forget that.

The group paused as they heard stone grinding and rending above them. Bomber said, "We have to go faster!" The group immediately went faster down the steps and down towards the steel door. Doc Savage quickly pulled a loose stone out next to it and shoved his hand into the hole.

“What are you doing!?” yelled Siren.

“It’s biolocked,” said Doctor Savage. He smiled, looking back at Siren. “Made it myself!” The door slid open, letting everyone past. Lightning and Siren quickly shoved the door closed behind themselves. Liberty looked to see a sleek subway car sitting on the rails. This was probably part of the new subway lines being built in New York. “Everyone in!” yelled Doctor Savage as he opened the car up.

Everyone piled into the car. At the same time, the Storm Ace tore the steel door open and forced himself through. Doctor Savage quickly hit the close doors button, and the doors began sliding shut. Seeing this, the Storm Ace ran to the car as it began moving forward. He tore right through the doors, knocking Siren on her butt.

Doctor Savage stuck to the controls as the Magical Girls began engaging the Storm Ace in proper close quarters combat. The car sped through the line, rocking as the Storm Ace punched, kicked, or occasionally bumped his head into the ceiling. The Magical Girls meanwhile were struggling to get an angle on him in the tight space of the tram.

“I got him!” Lightning burst from the front of the car to the back where the Storm Ace stood. She thrust her naginata. The Storm Ace slapped it aside and headbutted her. She flew backwards right into the other Magical Girls, striking them down like bowling pins.

Siren, who was lying down underneath Lightning, said, “Got him, huh?”

The Storm Ace stepped forward, looking down on them. But then, Doctor Savage called out, “Hey!” The Storm Ace looked up at Doctor Savage, wielding an amazingly large gun with an amazingly large barrel. “Say hello to my latest invention.”

The gun roared and buckled in Doctor Savage’s grip. The Storm Ace was forced back to the very end of the tram as .75 Caliber rocket-propelled bullets exploded against his body. His blood started painting the walls as his back made contact with the rear of the car.

“Holy cow!” screams Bomber as she held her hands on her ears. “That’s loud!”

The gun clicked as it ran dry. Liberty stood up and huffed. It was time. She knelt down and began spinning her shields up, running them white hot. They whined as Liberty powered them up. She charged for the coup de grace.

>>=[| FINISHING MOVE |]=<<
>>=[| THE LIBERTY BASH |]=<<

The Storm Ace exploded out the back, flying right into the tracks limply. Every bone in his body was broken. The car raced along, its lighting now burst and shot, only managing to speed along by sheer force of will and Doctor Savage’s own invention. Lightning stood next to a panting Liberty.

“Whoo,” Lightning crossed her arms, smirking. “Nice one, Libby.”

Liberty hunched over, her hands on her knees as she caught her breath. “Thanks.”

The flea run had taken the group to a non-descript little warehouse on the Hudson river. There, Liberty, Lightning, Bomber, and Siren were being debriefed by Doctor Savage, Kirby, and Operator #5.

Or rather, Operator #5 through a TV screen where his face couldn’t be seen due to the poor lighting in his office.

>>=[| OPERATOR #5 |]=<<
>>=[| Officer of the Strategic Services Offices and head of the Magical Girl Division |]=<<

The most that could be seen of Operator #5 was his skull ring as he rested his head on his hand, listening to every detail of Liberty’s thorough explanation of the events leading to their escape. “Right,” he said. The most Liberty could make out from his identity was his rather faint but noticeable southern accent, probably Appalachian. “And I assume Doctor Savage and Kirby are safe?”

Liberty nodded, looking over down the warehouse filled with cars, boats, planes, everything Doctor Savage needed. Bomber yelled, “Amazing! There’s so much- Is that a Rolls-Royce Phantom III? Oh! And that one’s a Chrysler Airstream! Oh, wow!” Lightning and Siren walked behind her as she ran down the line.

Lightning sighed. “She found the tanks.”

Doctor Savage carried a suitcase full of essentials, Kirby on his shoulders as he followed along. “Indeed, I still have your Panzer IV D2 with the anti-magic gun on it.”

“Amazing!” said Bomber. Then she looked over, and immediately she squealed with Christmas joy. “A Phantom Corsair! You- You have a Phantom Corsair! Oh my god, it’s a Phantom Corsair! You have a Phantom Corsair ohmygodohmygodohmygod!” She skipped over to the incredibly streamlined, sleek, black car, squeaking with delight.

Liberty placed her hands on her hips, then looked back at the screen. “Doctor Savage is going to go into hiding, you know where, right?”

“Of course.” Operator #5 leant back, kicking his feet up onto his desk and clasping his hands together in his lap. “I won’t say where in case the Magisch Korps has our codes but he’ll be out of danger until we secure our fronts.”

“Speaking of which, sir,” Liberty frowned a bit. “I was wondering, about Grief Seeds, what exactly are they? What they do?”

At that, Operator #5 was silent.

“Are you not going to tell me?” said Liberty.

“It is classified information,” said Operator #5. “I know you may feel entitled to it knowing your record with the SSO but… Liberty-“

“I already asked Kirby and Doctor Savage, they didn’t give me an answer,” she said. “Engelhardt seems to know what they are, why can’t I?”

“We keep the information on a need-to-know basis. It’s irrelevant to you considering your line of work and who you work with. Siren was contracted by Kirby, Lightning was also contracted by Kirby as was Bomber. Kirby’s been an invaluable aide to the SSO and he knows when information should be withheld.” He gestured lazily with his hands. “This information is to be withheld.”

“But sir-“

Liberty remained silent. Withholding information, that was something she hadn’t seen since the early days of her career. But what made this so secret? Not even Doctor Savage would tell her, and he’s practically her replacement father. But regardless, she nodded slowly.

“Good luck, we’ll call if you are needed,” said Operator #5. The screen clicked to static.

“And this thing, like I said, I had it prepared in the eventuality something would follow me into the flea run!” he said as he held up his gigantic gun to the curious girls. “Fires large caliber rocket-assisted explosive bullets. It’s a prototype mind you, but I feel like it’s the way of the future! I call it, the Rocket Rifle!”

Siren harrumphed at that. “It’ll take ages for something like that to catch on.”

Liberty walked over, rubbing her wrists and shaking out her shoulders. “Right, we got to get moving. Doctor Savage, I assume you and Kirby will be retreating to the Fortress of Solitude?”

“Of course!” said Doctor Savage as he put on a fedora. “We’ll be-“

“Wait.” Lightning looked in disbelief between Liberty and Doctor Savage. “Fortress of what?”

“Fortress of Solitude!” Doctor Savage grinned as he stood straight and waved his arm. “It’s my personal research station near the Arctic Circle! I build there, I rest there, and I retreat there when I need solace!”

Siren and Lightning looked at each other, dumbstruck. Bomber meanwhile was ecstatic. “Can I come with you!?”

“Actually,” said Liberty. “I need you and Lightning to come with me. Siren, could you make sure Doctor Savage reaches the Fortress of Solitude safely?”

Siren nodded. “I’ll guard him with my life.” With that, Doctor Savage hugged Liberty goodbye. He left with Siren and Kirby in one of his cars, the Phantom Corsair to be precise. Bomber groaned, saddened. Liberty knew how much she wanted to ride in that one of a kind vehicle.

Liberty smiled, patting Lightning on the shoulder as she led her and Bomber over to another car. “Lightning, Bomber. We are going to do something we haven’t done in a very long while.” Lightning and Bomber paused in step. Bomber looked a bit confused, quickly adjusting her glasses. Lightning knew however, and she grinned with all the excitement of a girl on Christmas.

Lightning shook her head, laughing a little. “You don’t mean-“

“I do mean, and that’s why you’ll plan it, Lightning,” said Liberty. She opened the car door, allowing Bomber to drive.

“So that’s it then,” said Lightning as she rode shotgun. Liberty sat in the backseat.

This isn't as long as some of the others, but Decu insisted. Take this as a preview, there's a lot more where this came from!

- - - - -

“You shall be suspected from all duties, privileges, and responsibilities for three days.”

Hino Setsuna flinched, good eye widening in confusion. Not only to have her request denied, but to be pulled from the roster like she couldn't handle the rejection. “I must protest, I--”

She quelled under the hard gaze of the Warmaster, who was clearly not in the mood to listen to excuses at such a late stage in this little game.

Three day...? What does... Oh. OH. Setsuna smiled, feel the scar on her lip pull, twisting the expression into little more then a sneer.

Yes, three days should prove plenty of time.

- - - - -

Stalking into the hall, Setsuna's mind worked quickly, furiously. She hadn't expected to have to move this quickly, with so little preparation. Still, she knew those who hesitated lost, and she had no intention on letting this one slip through her grasp.

She nodded to the other girl waiting patiently by the elevator. “Iwakura-san. I take it your request went well?”

The crimson haired girl flashed her a brilliant grin. “Yep, I'm all set to go! I can't wait, this is something I've been wanting to do ever since I was contracted! How... how about you, Hino-chan? How'd yours go?”

Stepping into the elevator together, Honoka hit the 'down' button absently as she turned to her companion. She blinked, though, as it gave a low buzzer sound, denying her request. “What the-?” She frowned, leaning to look at the console. “Why is it- wait.”

Glancing back to Setsuna, she cocked her head to the side. “Did... something happen? In there?”

Setsuna looked to the side, inwardly sighing to herself. “I... my request was denied. And I was suspended.”

Hanoka's eyes widened. “Suspended? Over a transfer request? Where'd you ask to go, the moon?!”

The other girl simply shook her head.

“Well... I don't think there's much we can do then, Hino-chan. The building isn't designed to let you walk around freely if you don't have your ID anymore. Do... would you like me to walk down with you?”

Setsuna shook her head, realizing that while she had been given a chance by the Warmaster, clearly it wasn't going to be easy. “No, but thank you. I think a nice walk will give me a chance to clear my head.”

- - - - -

It... proved to be a much longer walk then she had originally thought. A half hour walk down endless flights of stairs, one foot, one step, at a time. It gave her plenty of time to think, and she had confirmed two things, at least.

Fist, all the doors the whole way down had be barred to her. Before, she had never considered how much freedom her badge had given her; being a contracted girl gave her a lot more access then the pencil pushing office workers on the lower floors. Now that she was missing it, though, it's like there was a whole new world that she had never noticed before. Magnetic badge readers as far as the eye could see, and there were everywhere; doors, windows, even the fire escape!

She had stopped trying the doorknobs after the first ten floors, and given up on knocking on them trying to get someone's attention by the twentieth. It was a strange feeling, being able to see into hallways and sometimes offices, watching for a moment the people inside, but not once had anyone glanced her way, like she was a ghost. If it hadn't been for the security cameras installed discretely into the corners at every fifth flight, she'd think that no one knew she had essentially gotten trapped in here.

Second, and this was not to understated in the least, she had decided that she had really, really, REALLY FUCKING HATED stairs. While she had to climb quite a few of them in her carrier so far, as Vindicare standard M.O. tended to involve getting high and staying there until your target found your sights, she was really starting to reconsider swapping the Eversor training. Just because they always seemed to prefer elevators, from what she had seen.

Secretly she suspected that they were just trying to get ambushed while in one, giving them the perfect excuse to cut a blood path out again.

She'd take that over stairs any day, is what she was getting at, here.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/01/14(Sun)08:26:12 No.32502148

3 AM. Mitakihara. Mitakihara Heights, Tower One, Sixth Floor, Apartment 665.

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just woken up thirsty in a green-haired girl's arms.

It's...you're not going to say that it's been the most comfortable night's sleep you've ever had - the brief period of intimate contact you've enjoyed with a certain blonde-haired Vindicare in the Warmaster's personal quarters still deserved that title - but it had certainly been the most interesting. The most exciting. Definitely the most exhausting.

She did the thing with her tongue. It's...you didn't even know it was possible. You thought it was something she only made up for the porn comic she keeps on drawing. The pain in your throat - overshadowing the slight ache in your limbs and certain other parts of your body - making it clear that you've screamed yourself hoarse a few times. Making you blush crimson at the thought of it, causing you to bury your face in your hands.

Were you really...supposed to do this kind of thing? Were you supposed to find this kind of happiness? It never seemed like it, every single day you've lived. It always felt as if you'd always be wading through a pit of blood and bodies and whiskey, with the bitter taste of painkillers crumbling on your tongue.

There's...something's going to take this all away, you're sure of it. Everything's happy and cheerful and not exactly going to shit now, but somewhere, somehow, the universe is going to come around soon enough with the bill - and the amount on the bottom line is going to be more than you can afford.

A sigh leaves your lips, and it's here that you slowly pull yourself up to a sitting position - careful not to wake the disheveled girl on your bed that's as naked as you are. After some heart-pounding moments wherein she tried to pull you back in her grasp, you manage to squirm to the lip of the bed, your feet dangling over the edge and making contact with the carpeted floor. Where most of your Magical Girl costume lay, strewn all over in dejected piles.

Well. That's...huh.. That's certainly a sight you've never seen before. If you have, you don't remember.

You shake your head again, before reaching down to grab your panties. You've always been sloppy, yeah, but you're not going to stumble around the apartment naked. Even you have limits, after all.

The moment you do so, however, is the moment you see a small shadow - barely taller than a child - flit across the doorway of the master bedroom. The sound of childish giggling heralding its split-second appearance, so quick that it almost seems like it wasn't there in the first place.

...What? What the hell was that?

[]Grab your Desert Eagle and investigate it yourself. Something's not right here.
[]Wake Midori up, and tell her that your apartment has been compromised.
[]Leave it alone. You're probably just tired. You need a drink. Maybe two drinks.

That's...no, you didn't dream that. You're probably sure that you didn't hallucinate that, either. Something's wrong here, and you're going to find out what before it gets anywhere near Midori. Before it gets anywhere near anyone and anything else you care about.

You snatch up your Golden Desert Eagle and Soul Gem in the same movement, your Magical Girl costume manifesting on top of your naked form with a flash of purple light the moment you get up on your feet. At this, Midori audibly stirs, but she only murmurs your name before rolling over to the other side, still clearly asleep. You breathe a sigh of relief here, before narrowing your eyes and stalking forward, your gun held in front of you. Ready to kill at a moment's notice.

Carefully checking your corners and finding nothing but dark, empty apartment - you step out of the master bedroom, the oversized handcannon in your hand glinting as the moonlight catches it. Something shifts past you in the corridor - and you whirl to address it, a curse leaving your lips in a hissed snarl.

"The good-for-nothing is looking for us," A voice between a child's shrill tones and a raven's screeching cackle reaches your ears, seemingly coming from all directions. "She's trying to find us." Another cackle, this time closer, close enough for you to taste the malice dripping from its words. "How silly. We've been trying to find her all this time."

"And now we have," Another voice, almost identical to the first except for its accent - a slightly lyrical, lilting one that sets your teeth at edge at how closely it resembles Mami's. "Our pitiful, good-for-nothing mistress will be proud, too, now that we've found herself."

Question for while we wait.

It's the middle of the night and you're just chilling and zoning out to /tg/, enjoying a Bicardi on the rocks when suddenly, BLAM Chiaki shoots your front door, the explosive force of which takes out a good portion of your house as well as half your family. Lightning suddenly lights the recently dark corners of your vision as she approaches you and you start to slowly lose your mind.

Alright, party's over, you growl into the dimly-lit darkness seemingly twitching and dancing all around you. You're not sure who the hell this mistress of theirs they're talking about, but if they don't come out and show themselves, then you'll be mailing their bodies to her in convenient little zip-up bags. You don't take very kindly to intruders in your own fucking apartment.

"Kihihi~ Stupid, useless, worthless good-for-nothing thinks she can hurt us with her shiny golden toy." Again that annoying, waspish cackle. Again you whirl around, Golden Desert Eagle held between outstretched hands, trying to level your aim at something that's either invisible or isn't even there in the first place. "It's almost unsporting if we take her to pieces now to deliver to our own good-for-nothing mistress, yes?"

"Unsporting, and boring." There's a venomous petulance to the other voice that makes you want to reach out and just strangle the throat of whoever uttered it, and you grit your teeth in frustration. "Buuut~ I think we should follow her for now, at least. She IS still our good-for-nothing, even if she smells like a whore." The voice giggles as it savors the ugly word, making a meal out of it.

There's a chitter of agreement, and all at once you find yourself surrounded by the shadows that you've been pursuing earlier. Small, barely reaching above your knee. Childlike.

You hear one of them clear a throat, and an overhead light switches on. Letting you see just what you've been chasing. What you've been growling at.

Dolls. Wide-eyed, balljointed dolls of pale white ceramic and black tailored cloth. The creepy ones with the glass eyes and wide cresent slits for mouths. The ones you've always seen in shops and wondered what kind of deluded freak would actually buy them.

"We are fifteen in number, but only fourteen are here." One of them, seemingly the leader with a black pin-staff in her hands and a blonde mop of hair crowning her ceramic scalp. It looks up at you with its almond-shaped eyes of cold, emotionless blue ice, the crimson slit of its smile widening. "And we have been looking for you, ugly, smelly, unreliable and worthless good-for-nothing." She curtseys, and the rest follows suit in perfect, practiced unison. "You are a hard good-for-nothing to find."

...Alright, you've been called worse before, but somehow the good-for-nothing is getting on your nerves. You frown down at them, the Golden Desert Eagle still in your grip - and you see some of the dolls turn and whisper at each other, pointing at your firearm.

"You haven't collected enough," One of them whines. "Only four in number? Are you THAT useless?"

"Stop fucking fat girls and get on with your quest to destroy everything," Another screeches.

Is this some kind of Callidus trick, or what? You've heard of a few of them controlling puppets and such, but these don't appear to BE puppets. They're...alive. Almost sentient.

And something tells you you should know all their names.

Alright, it's way too fucking early in the morning for this bullshit. You decide to get to the heart of the matter right away - that being, asking who the hell this 'mistress' that they keep giggling and screeching about. You growl the question out, at the same time swiveling the Desert Eagle and aiming it right between the sparkling eyes of the one with the hat-pin staff. The doll, whose name pops up in your mind as IBARI - only seems to smile wider at this, its tiny shoulders shaking as it giggles.

And you grit your teeth together harder as its fellow dolls join its screeching mirth.

"The good-for-nothing is asking about HERSELF! Kihihihi!"

"This is like, irony or something! Isn't it? ISN'T IT?!"

"That's our good-for-nothing mistress for you! Sharp as a sack of drowned mice and twice as disgusting! Kyahahaha!"

Jesus Christ, it's like being back at middle school.

You press the Desert Eagle a bit more firmly against the blonde-haired doll's ceramic face, and the giggling immediately stops.

"We serve the good-for-nothing mistress who tore down the equally-useless Goddess from her heaven," IBARI giggles, one balljointed hand reaching up to carefully and slowly push the barrel of your Desert Eagle away from her face. "We serve her head to toe - from the tip of the most useless strand of black hair on top of her useless head, from the tip of the most useless feather at the very tip of her useless wings - to the tip of her useless shoes, at the very tip of her useless legs." Her smile widens. "You know her name, don't you, good-for-nothing? And you know she's you."

You lower your gun. The Transcendent One, then.

IBARI giggles. "GOTT IST TOTT!" She screeches, and she reaches out to link hands with the dolls at either side of her, and those dolls do the same to the others beside them. You watch, bewildered and possibly a little freaked out, at the sight of fourteen dolls dancing in a ring around you, chanting the demise of a god.

"GOTT IST TOTT! GOTT IST TOTT! GOTT IST TOTT--!!"

The display continues for a while before they finally stop, each doll shaking hands with the other and exchanging congratulations. "It's a shame we didn't bring tomatoes, otherwise it would've been a grand time," IBARI muses, stroking the bulbous tip of her hat-pin staff. "But yes, you catch on quickly, for a good-for-nothing."

...Strange display aside, this confirms it, then. The Transcendent One's found you, which means you'll have to move much more quickly. The Three Stooges had all but convinced you that she's the one you need to kill to fix everything. ...It'll be the most elaborate and drawn-out suicide ever committed, but if it helps fix all the shit YOU apparently caused, then so much the better.

You open your mouth to ask another question, when you remember something they'd chittered about earlier. Something about...being fifteen in number, but only fourteen are here? What happened to the fifteenth, then?

You blink as IBARI's smile freezes in place, just as all the other dolls freeze in place.

"What do YOU think, good-for-nothing?" She asks, just as you hear Midori scream a bloodcurdling scream. Of fear. Of shock. Of pain.

"We were tasked to bring you back, in pieces or no," Ibari giggles as she takes out another hat-pin from behind her. Even without moving, you can tell this is being imitated by the other dolls, each one bringing out weapons. Blades. Stabbing implements. "If we have to bring you back garnished with the slut you've been besmirching yourself with, then it makes no difference to us."

These fuckers...! MIDORI!

How do you react?

"Forget her, she's probably dead by now," IBARI giggles, as she and the rest of the other dolls begin to close in on you. Some bearing scissors, others brandishing knives and razors. "The fifteenth of us does not play around. We're actually a bit frightened of her, come to that. I think she enjoys it a bit TOO much." They take another step closer, and another. "Now, let's do this nice and easy--"

IBARI never gets to finish her sentence. You don't let her. A single pull of the Desert Eagle's trigger - the discharge roaring in your ears and kicking in your hand - reduces her pretty ceramic head into pretty ceramic shards, and you lash out with a kick that sends her decapitated body hurtling across the corridor and out the window.

At the same time - as you come around from the rotation of your kick - your Shield clamps itself onto your right arm, and you slam its edge on the wall beside you. Allowing the jarring impact and friction to crank the Shield for you a complete ninety degrees, while you empty the rest of the Desert Eagle's magazine at the horde of dolls about to lunge at you.

The sound of metal clacking against metal, of gears gnashing into each other, a series of clicks - and seven bullets slow to a stop in midair, each one mere millimeters away from kissing the forehead of a doll.

You've already begun moving even before the world completely turns gray, and you sprint back towards the Master Bedroom, ignoring that there would still be a handful of the dolls left alive if you disengage your timestop.

Please...please let Midori be okay, please don't let her--

The scream in the middle of your time stop is alien enough - and unexpected enough - that you freeze in your tracks, and it takes you a moment to begin moving again, your breath catching in your throat. You finally manage to drag yourself through the doorway - and see the dismembered corpse of Hanegawa Midori lying on the bed, her organs arranged neatly on the bloody sheets.

And the fifteenth doll - a small, bald thing wearing a black dress - blinks its purple eyes at you as it embraces Midori's severed, eyeless head. Its mouth agape in a silent, never ending scream.

One that you yourself vocalize as your vision goes completely black, the Golden Desert Eagle coming alive in your hands and spitting fire again. And again. And again. A thunderous backdrop to the spiderweb of stress-cracks spreading down your cheeks, spreading down your face.

NOT HER. NOT HER. NOT MIDORI.

"PLEASE--!"

You wake up to hear yourself scream the appeal, your eyes flying open, your breath clawing its way out of you in deep rasping gasps.

What? What's--you woke up again? You--

You look down at your own nakedness, half-hidden by a sweat-soaked blanket and a pair of warm arms around you. You're...obviously not in your Magical Girl costume. The green-haired girl you've just seen dismembered right on this very bed, with a doll bearing your face clutching her severed head - sleeping like a baby.

Wait. So that was all just...what the fuck?

You look back at Midori again, one hand immediately going to her hand, squeezing her fingers, to make sure she's real. ...She feels like it.

You glance up, towards the doorway. Challenging for a shadow to flit past with a giggle.

Nothing.

Nothing, after ten minutes.

Nothing, after twenty minutes.

And it's here that you bury your hands in your face to laugh. Or cry. Maybe both.

3 AM. Mitakihara. Mitakihara Heights, Tower One, Sixth Floor, Apartment 665.

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just woken up from a nightmare in a green-haired girl's arms.

This shit has got to fucking stop. This shit is not going to fucking fly.

Because there's so many things that Homura is.

Could Chiaki risk doing that if it meant potentially losing her? And if we do lose her, does it actually make her any safer, considering that what is threatening her is part of your own mind?

Would make sense.

Though we need to tell her about the three stooges in the DEagle in order for her to understand who the Transcendent One is.

That being said, revealing the incarnations in mirrors will likely cause Midori to reveal to Chiaki what happened in Siberia. Chiaki learning about the winged fragment might be important.

Depends on the general and the specific.

If Chiaki dies, does that kill the Overhomu, or are they infact concrete entities of their own?

There are other Homus, in other places at other times. So ending ourself does not seem to be any kind of answer.

And that's assuming we actually CAN. We're... actually not sure how entirely necessary that soul-gem of ours is, as I recall.

You keep your grip on Midori's fingers as you grab your phone with your free one, unlocking it and answering the call in one irritated swipe of your thumb. As you hold it up to your ear - a harsh inquiry as to why Blueberry is calling you at 3 AM in the fucking morning - you remember to take a deep breath here, to calm yourself down a bit more. No need to clue her in that you've just had the worst nightmare of your life, one that would probably have you locked in a Silent Room for the rest of fucking eternity.

"It's me." You finally bark out the acknowledgement a moment later, keeping your voice low as to not disturb the green-haired girl now cuddling up against your side. "Talk."

"Murderface? Ah, good. Sorry for calling so late." Sayaka's voice is serious, but calm. Pre-emptively making you sigh in relief - at least it's not something bad enough to actually make the usually-unflappable Eversor panic.

It's fine, you manage, giving Midori's fingers another squeeze to remind yourself she's not currently being torn apart by creepy fucking dolls or something. What's she calling for?

Silence. Hesitation. "...I'd rather not talk about it over the phone, Murderface, but it's important." Another moment of silence. "Remember the training we were supposed to be having today? I mean, later, when it's not 3 fucking AM?"

...Yeah?

"I'm bumping it up. This needs to happen now."

...Okay. So, first you have a nightmare convincing you that the universe doesn't really want you to sleep anymore, and now your Equerry has a 3AM hardon to beat your ass half to death while you try to hack her to pieces with a golden pigstick.

How do you respond?

However since Homucifer basically just threatened Midori, I figure warning her is the right thing to do. Better that she knows the danger exist, than remain ignorant and get killed as a result.

"Eversor Rank Leader Heather Crunch, we need to have a little chat."

If experience has taught me anythin' about our dear rank leader, it's that she loves theatrics. She's a lot more likely to take what you say to heart if you put some effort into the presentation. And a disembodied voice speakin' across a rather desolate-lookin' location, lit by a backdrop of stars, just drips with drama.

Havin' to act as a part of your job in infiltration, and bein' adept at bedroom role-play, also helps.

"Who DARES to attempt to intimidate the grrrrrrreat and mighty Heather Crunch?" bellows our dear Cap'n. She knows who it is, of course. But she does love to play along with this sort of thing. It'd be adorable under less unfortunate circumstances.

"See the destruction wrought upon this once-pristine place," I call out, safely hidden on the buildin's ledge, behind a mound of dirt and some purposefully placed webs, "and know that it was the doing of that girl, in her frustration."

The Cap'n shakes her fist. "What have you done with Slam, villain?" I can't see her face from where I am, but my friends tell me she's tryin' hard not to grin. This ain't the time for that sorta thing.

"Slam is safe, for now. Safe from the likes of you."

"Nonsense, she's only adjusting to the ordeal she endured. It'll pass in a-"

Time to drop the bombshell.

"There was no ordeal."

"...WHAT?!"

Yeah, I don't think she's takin' it all that well.

"The Spider Room is designed to -break- a person, not remake them. Slam was taken here for refuge-"

Which was a grievous mistake on my part, considerin' the nightly ritual of the Cap'n. I do hope she'll forgive me for carryin' her out here for nothin'. It probably won't be any time soon, not with the way she glared at me when I told her to go back to her room. Didn't say anythin', just limped away and didn't answer any queries.

"-and then put back where she belongs, away from your cruel machinations."

The Cap'n's pretty mad. "You went against my ORDERS, Berry."

Hidin's probably not gonna do me much good anymore. I clamber back up onto the rooftop and approach Cap'n, my posture all conciliatory as I plead in my normal voice, "Cap'n, please-"

Cap'n whirls about, face stern and businesslike. She's really takin' this rank leader stuff seriously, huh? "No," she interrupts, pointin' an accusatory finger at me. "I'm taking this straight to the warmaster. You insist on TORTURING her by forcing her to keep the status quo."

I try reasonin' with her, askin', "Did ya even ask her if she wanted yer help, though?"

"Questions would have gotten in the way of improving her standard of living, which being moved into the Eversor program would do." It's like debatin' a wall.

"She doesn't have any of our intrinsic advantages, she'd be-"

"Enough!" she barks, fed up with debatin'. She turns to head back down the steps, proclaimin', "I'm taking this situation to Russ and having you reprimanded for insubordination!" She's gonna leave, and do whatever she wants with Eleanor, and I'm gonna get a black mark on my otherwise spotless record. Ahhh, I was afraid this might happen.

Which is why I had my little friends help me prepare for this contingency. I clear my throat and present my trump card :

"Orrrr we could settle this here~."

Cap'n slows to a stop. Gotcha.

"The great and mighty Heather Crunch against my unbroken victory streak."

I have her interest, now I just need to set the terms.

"Best two outta three. The winner decides what to do with the loser." I put on my best smirk and wave dismissively at her to taunt her, mockin' her in a sing-song voice with, "Unless yer a 'fraidy caaat~"

Cap'n turns around and smiles broadly, any indication of carin' about her job gone from her face. Seems I heard right about her.

"Ha! I accept your challenge! I'll take every trick you have and overcome them all!"

The familiar, comfortin' weight of grippin' an object in my hand confirms the manifestation of one of my most trusted implements. A long dagger with a strong handle, perfect for thrustin'. And with enough poison to turn a magical girl's insides into slurry. I take my position a few meters away in a low crouch. There's a flower box not far from my position, but I don't let my eyes stray toward it, lest I give away what I'm thinkin'. Just keepin' my eyes on the Cap'n as she brings forth her big, thick red thing. I've seen her swing it around a few times before, but never really got to see it, or her, in action.

Ihihi, I'm gettin' excited in spite of myself.

We stay just like that for a little bit, starin' each other down. Both of us grinnin' like fools. I lick my lips as I size her up - she's actually kinda small, really - and decide to stop with the foreplay first.

I signal for my spider friends to spring the trap.

At my urgin', the rank leader is caught from the side by a thick band of spider silk and catapulted into the stairwell she was so eager to descend earlier. The moment her expression changes to one of shock is the moment I throw myself into cover behind the box. I keep movin' towards the buildin's edge, and, after stickin' the handle between my teeth, drop over just as Cap'n throws herself back into the fray. "Cheap shot!" she cries out, but I can tell she liked it~.

I scramble over the exterior as quickly as I can move without makin' any noise. My scouts' chatter tells me that Cap'n has taken only a few paces forward and her back is to the eastern side, so that's where I go. I hoist myself up and skulk my way towards her exposed flank. Careful, silent, and steady. When I'm within strikin' distance, I pull the dagger from my mouth and make a straight jab at her back. No showy, jumpin' nonsense that leaves you vulnerable. Which turns out to be a good thing, as Cap'n spins outta the way and uses the momentum to swing her sword in a wide arc at where my midsection is.

"Counter-swing!" she yells.

Conjurin' another dagger in my free hand, I make to parry the strike so I can slide underneath it.

That was a terrible mistake.

The full battery of a tank battalion has nothin' on the force of the swing that almost dislocates my arm after I try to redirect it. I bring both knives up and try to move that thing, but it's too dang big and strong. I'm losin' ground.

I see her foot move right as I disengage her, and her kick whiffs my leg. I backpedal to put some distance between us, but it's not far away enough. Her colossal sword comes crashin' down, buryin' itself in the reinforced rooftop and missin' me by a hair. That's pretty unreal. But it also gives me an openin'. It hurts somethin' awful, but I hurl the weapon in my left hand at her. She chooses to dodge again, which means she didn't see me leap onto the blunt edge of her weapon, run along it, take my other knife, and jam it in to her crazy head.

At least, that's what shoulda happened. What did happen was that her hard head repelled the blow completely, like stabbin' a wall. I'm off balance and nearly fall on my fine derriere after she pulls out her sword with just one arm. I catch myself, but I'm still on my hands and knees here. Lookin' down on me, she's got a real ugly expression on her face right now.

She's like a wall that walks, talks, and hits things. Even I didn't expect that. "The heck are ya made of?"

"Strength, determination, and the BURNING desire to help those in need!" she exclaims, holdin' her weapon in a perfect position to strike me. "You CAN'T pierce me, Berry!"

Well that certainly limits my options. I saw her flinch on gettin' hit, but I can't tell if it's because she was hurt or just reflex. Time to start improvisin'. Quicker than Heather can say "coup de grace", I roll away from her and dash up the stairwell entrance. I planned to leap over it and try to hide again so I can rethink my strategies, but stumble after Cap'n's sword clips my left shoulder, droppin' both my knives for all the good they'll do me. That much blood is gonna make it awful hard to hide. The giant red sword starts comin' back towards me, so I sprint under it and let it sail on past my head. I hear her on the move again, so I lead her to a different spot.

I scoop up the silky spider webs in my arms - reminds me that I promised those kids new sweaters, should start on that next week - and send another signal to my little friends. A well-timed jump saves me from bein' knocked on my face by a streak of white, but it sounds like Cap'n wasn't so lucky. I've got what I need, which means I can about face and bring the fight to her. Cap'n merely stumbled instead of bein' dropped flat, and that's just fine. I smother the crouched figure in a big sheet of whiteness and kick her to send her rollin' like a snowball. She halts much sooner than I'd anticipated, even with her sword arm stickin' out, but I can make do with that. As soon as Cap'n lets go of her weapon to try and tear off those webs - which lands with a terribly loud THUNK - I land a flyin' kick on the round mass and make it roll again, gatherin' more sticky webs. That should do for now.

I'm not givin' her even a second to overcome the dizzy spell. I follow after her and snatch the thing off the ground. Her muffled protests remind me of that delectable brunette from the other day as I whirl the thing round and around overhead. When I think she's nice and dizzy... BAM! Slam her into the ground, then slam her into the ground again, and again, and again, and again, and again...

My bleedin' shoulder's protests signal that I ought to do somethin' about that, so I throw the sack spinnin' up in the air. With well practiced movements, I pull out my first aid kit and apply some gauze and bandages once the poor girl thuds on the rooftop. It's hardly ideal, but it'll have to do until I'm done here. After packin' my gear away, I stride on over to my fallen Cap'n, who's just finished freein' herself from my little love nest and is pickin' the sticky white stuff out of her hair. Doesn't look like she's dizzy anymore, so I'll give her credit for a quick recovery. For a relatively new girl, she's got quite a bit of stamina.

"Had enough?" I ask, already knowin' her answer.

"You win this round," she concedes, pointin' at me again, "but it won't stop me from beating a dildo like you into the ground."

"Ihihi... Hon, I'm an expert on dildos, and can assure ya that neither of us is one." No response from that one. I was hopin' she'd turn a nice crimson color.

We take a few steps back and rearm ourselves. Cap'n makes the first move by chargin' at me, but she's not faster than me. I easily outpace her, which should make it simple to lure her into another location. I look back to gauge the distance-

What's that stuff comin' out of her sleeve? Tentacles? Whatever it is, this ain't a good time to find out. I take cover behind one of the flower boxes and get ready to move again when my cover is lifted up by those appendages and hurled at me. I dive out of the way, the container shatters on the spot where I was a moment ago, and I gotta keep movin'. Because as it turns out, she's got all those flower boxes held in the air with dozens, maybe hundreds of those... things. Milly's gonna be real mad when she finds out about this.

The safest place would normally be the walls below, but I don't think Cap'n's gonna give me the opportunity to move there. I don't have any traps set where she is, though I motion for my friends that can see me to get ready. It's been quite a while since I've done somethin' reckless like this, but I plunge in for a frontal assault. I duck and weave out of the way of the objects thrown at me, and start cuttin' through those... strips of tape? Is that what they are? Whatever they are, they're tryin' to grab me. Tryin' bein' the key word here, because she's just not fast enough.

Cap'n rears back to attack with another sword throw, but spiders crawlin' up her legs is still enough to make her throw go wild. Leapin' to the side to avoid another flower box, Heather is vulnerable enough that I can go for one part of her that I'm sure ain't invulnerable. Besides, I'm pretty sure she wouldn't mind wearin' an eye patch. It'd complement her image.

A lightnin'-quick thrust at her eye with my trusty dagger is blocked at the last second by Cap'n's free hand. As in she grabs the blade and snaps it. "Fell for it!" she taunts as I back away to try again, only to find my feet refusin' to move properly. When did she have time to bind them up? I can slip out easily enough as long as-

"And here's the comeback attack!"

My spider friends' report of the dreaded sword's return coincides with Cap'n callin' it out. I can't keep myself from inhalin' sharply as an intense force slams into my lower back, followed by a loss of sensation in my legs. With nothin' left to support me, I fall on my back and knock my head against the tiles. Peerin' up to survey the damages, I find the part of me with all my favorite bits cleanly separated from the rest of me and still bleedin'. It's a very weird feelin', suddenly havin' nothin' below your torso. Not the first time I've lost a limb, but it never stops feelin' uncomfortable.

"Alright, alright," I sigh, unable to look at her triumphant smile as her tape dissolves. "That round was yours. You earned it. Last one is for keeps." Under ideal conditions I could keep goin' for several more hours like this, but these aren't ideal conditions. There's an opponent in front of me, for one, she's not near any traps, and I still have to be able to move. My tactical options are even more limited right now, and I probably only have thirty minutes if I have to keep exertin' myself like this.

I'll have to settle on a gamble.

With no weapons in hand, I have to support myself on my hands. It's very strenuous to do so when one arm still feels wonky and aches every time it's moved. The ground's gettin' slick with my blood poolin' around it. Cap'n looks amused as she holds her blade back with the intent of smitin' an easy target.

"This match is mine, Berry," she gloats. "I'm not going to let-"

Whatever Cap'n was expectin' from me, I doubt she thought I'd throw my own butt at her face.

While she's tossin' it away and wipin' the blood out of her eyes, I'm clawin' my way up her back. With my arms around her neck, I ready daggers in both hands. She curses and tries to get me off of her, but blowin' on her ear makes her hesitate long enough for me to jam my weapons into her open mouth and against both cheeks. Her screams of pain confirm my suspicions that it hurts a lot.

From what I've seen, she can easily pry my hands away, or tear them off if necessary. But as long as she's not anchored by that heavy sword... Yep, she dropped it. While it's hard to get any momentum like this, I manage to lead her to the edge of the roof, where she takes the necessary missteps to send us both plummetin' to the ground.

I have only a few seconds to get into position, which isn't helped when Cap'n crushes my right hand. The now-useless appendage drops the knife and I start losin' my grip, unable to stop her from forcin' the other knife out with her tongue. This is far from ideal, and I'm all out of tricks.

"You fought well Berry," Cap'n growls, keepin' me tethered to her by my wrist. "But this is MY victory, and I WILL help that girl no matter how much you protest."

"Like ya helped yer buddy back at the Ninth?" I shoot back. Okay, that was mean. That was unfair and mean of me to say, dredgin' up somethin' terrible like that. But judgin' by her shocked reaction, it worked to distract her. With the ground comin' up real fast, I force my last knife into her mouth until it's ticklin' the back of her throat. Cap'n is gaggin' on it and bitin' down hard. It hurts real bad, but it hurts even worse once we hit the ground.

I think I may have just broken every bone in my left arm from tryin' to hold that thing in there. But more importantly, my dagger broke in her throat, and she's frantically tryin' to dislodge the pieces chokin' her.

"Please yield now," I demand, collapsed on her chest and unable to even move my head. Ihihi, there's a teeny bit more cushion than I'd given her credit for havin' there.

When Cap'n starts makin' what I take for affirmative noises, I disengage my weapons. She takes deep gulps of breath after pullin' my hand out of her mouth - ah, she bit right through it down to the bone. I must look like a mess. But it's worth it if it means keepin' my image spotless and helpin' out a poor lost-

"That was fuckin' a!" calls an unfamiliar voice from nearby. Cap'n's head snaps to attention and focuses on the source, before pushin' me off of her. Rude.

"Just a friendly tussle is all," she responds, brushin' herself off. "Now, how'd it go?"

"We found a big croc out there," says voice number two.

"Yeah, Jenny snapped its neck after it had me in its jaws," replies a third voice.

"And we got ourselves all bandaged up before we came back. People were givin' us funny looks," says yet another person.

"Haha, I don't doubt it!" Cap'n claps her hands once and bellows, "ALRIGHT THEN! You have proven your worth to your rank leader! How does that make you feel?"

I hear a lot of gigglin' before one of them has the bright idea to start howlin'. Then the others join in with her. A loud, drawn out, proud howl that even the folks in town must've heard. The traditional battle cry of the Sixth.

So these must've been some new girls, huh? Ihihi, that takes me back.

Magical Girl Liberty is non-canon according to the wiki. Would be weird, considering someone else was already writing WWII megucas.

Cap'n dismisses them and makes to leave as well before I call out, "Yer just gonna run off after spendin' a few heated moments of passion in my arms like that? How cold, Cap'n~" She's takin' her sweet time makin' up her mind, before she laughs it off. I think she was just tryin' to make me sweat it out.

"Ohhh... Very well! A deal is a deal after all." Cap'n hoists me over her shoulder, and my head inadvertently buries itself in her neck. No, really, no conscious control at all here~.

"And don't forget to grab my butt on the way back," I remind her.

"Yes, yes.."

Ah, one other thing I almost forgot. "And Cap'n?"

"Mm?"

"What kinda underwear ya got on right now?"

To the victor, the spoils.

[11/11]

And that's it for now. Next time is Eleanor's perspective again!

Thanks to Deculture for letting me write
Thanks to Cooldown for helping mold Suzi into the sweet, creepy girl she is
Thanks to Sanguis for looking things over
With apologies to Archival for going with the original version of the fight instead of rewriting it

Except EVERYONE DIES if we don't save them, regardless. And we can't save them without their support because we go into self destruct mode - or worse, lose outr memory with no one to help us get it back.

We get one shot. Giving up everythign we've achieved would be like trying to start over...but that won't work. People have already died trying to make this work and Chiaki knows a few of them (and not even all).

We need to get this right for once. And even if it paints targets on them, they're magical girls - they already hard targets on them. We're damned if we do, but we're worse than damned if we don't - and I have the strong feeling there is now one person who won't let us go dark without her...maybe two.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/02/14(Mon)08:34:30 No.32525548

You rub your eyes with one hand as you let out a frustrated, pained sigh. ...It's been a long night, you grumble halfheartedly into your phone's receiver. Can you at least ask why?

Silence, before your Equerry replies. "Seriously, Murderface? I just told you, didn't I? Are you--" Just as Sayaka predictably starts to rev up her bitch motor, however, you hear her take a deep breath, and quickly count to ten. "...Please, Chiaki. This needs to happen. Just get ready, alright?"

She called you by your real name. Fine, then. You'll play along for now.

Can she at least send a car over to pick you up, as well as somebody to keep watch on Midori while you're out?

For a moment, you swear you can hear Sayaka smirk over the phone. "Way ahead of you, Murderface. Kyoko should be on her way to get you now - I wouldn't be surprised if she's at your door any already. She should be with a couple of people even you wouldn't mind being Midorin's security detail."

Huh. That's...surprisingly dependable of her, all of a sudden. Is she trying to live up to Malal or something?

>>32525548

Sayaka snorts. "As if, Murderface. This is me just trying to anticipate what you'd ask for first, instead of waiting for your paranoia. If you think I'm going to serve you alcohol or blondes or demand, then keep dreaming." She chuckles here, and you can't help but join in. Despite, you know, having a nightmare so horrific your heart is still racing from it.

"Hey, uh...everything alright there, though, Murderface?" There's the slightest hint of concern from the Blueberry's voice. "You sounded kinda out of it earlier. Like it was a different person doing the talking, or something."

How do you respond?

[]Nothing worth talking about, unless I want to find my office suddenly padded for my safety.
[]Just nightmares. I don't want to talk about it.
[]Can't you call me Chiaki forever? I'm sick of my nickname.

Just...nightmares, you finally reply after a moment's hesitation. A nightmare that seemed too real for comfort. Not something you want to talk about, though. At least, not now.

"Yeah? Don't really know how that is, I've never had nightmares. Sounds rough, though." Sayaka says, sounding sympathetic and yet completely fucking infuriating at the same time. "Anyway, look, I gotta go. Go get ready and wait for Kyoko, she'll drive you to where we need you to be. Got all that?"

Yeah, yeah. She doesn't need to repeat herself.

Just one thing, though. Can't she call you by your real name all the time? You're frankly sick of your nickname.

"What, Chiaki?" Sayaka chuckles again. "Nah. You gotta work your way up to that, Murderface. 'Sides, callin' you that always makes me feel like I'm talking to an idol or something, it doesn't really fit you. Doesn't roll off the tongue the same way 'Murderface' does, either."

Fine. Then you'll call her a fruit usually used in garnishing pie a whole lot, then.

"Sticks and stones, Murderface!" There's a click, and your phone beeps to let you know that the other end of the line has just disconnected from the call. You acknowledge this with a tap on the screen, before letting the device fall onto the sweaty bedspread.

Well. Seems like you need to go get ready, then. Any other day, you'd be pissed at them dragging you out of bed at 3 AM in the morning.

...Actually you are, but with being pissed off, there's the slightest bit of relief. This is work. Busy work, something to keep your mind off of what happened earlier, and you can't help but be thankful for that.

You close your eyes as a vision of the bald little doll with your eyes cradling Midori's severed head rises unbidden from your memory. The image painfully stark, painfully clear, enough for you to see every detail.

Right. Gotta get ready.

Yeah.

>>32526138

A few stressful moments consisting of dragging yourself out of bed and staggering into the shower later, you emerge from the bathroom a cleaner, more lemony-fresh Warmaster, with your hair brushed out and back into its ponytail, and your Magical Girl costume freshly-manifested onto your form. You also made sure to brush your teeth and gargle mouthwash, because if Sayaka IS really dragging you into a training match so early in the morning, might as well have the teeth she's going to punch out of your mouth as clean as the rest of you.

And right on cue - or at least, when you hoped - the doorbell rings just once, announcing Kyoko's arrival. Clipping the bangles back around your wrists and slipping your whitesnake skin shoulder holster around you, you make for the front door, taking a few moments to glare at the dark, unlit corners of your apartment. Waiting for a child-sized shadow to prance out of them, or a crescent slit of a smile to appear in their depths.

None so far. So far so good.

You open your door a small crack - and see that your visitor is, in fact, Kyoko, all bundled up in a bomber jacket similar to the one she gave you. Behind her are two shorter characters - Kumatora, also huddled up in a down jacket, and what appears to be Rea Ashford, still in her usual costume and looking completely unperturbed by the morning cold.

"Ah, Murderface!" Kyoko grins, her one eye glowing as you pull the door completely open, revealing yourself. "Morning! Or at least, uh, really early good morning. Here to pick you up and drive you to you-know-where! I'm droppin' off these two to make sure Midorin's not going to be lonely without you around, hahaha!"

Yeah. For better or worse, Midori is involved now. The nightmare Homucifer sent makes that pretty clear. Heck, Homucifer might want Midori dead.

We really should talk to Midori about things as soon as possible after training with Sayaka. Better she learns the truth about Homucifer from Chiaki, rather than someone else afterall.

I mean for all we know, Homucifer might be able to communicate with Midori directly. Regardless, so long as we tell her, we can make it clear that Chiaki does not share Homucifers values.

Ah, I hope you don't mind, but I also brought some stuff for Midori-sempai and me to work on while we wait for your return!" She hefts what appears to be a large, thick file full of papers. For her...comic thing, probably.

Silence, before Kyoko coughs and speaks up.

"Er...aren't you gonna let us in, Murderface?" Kyoko blinks up at you, a puzzled expression on her face.

Hnh. You wonder...

You narrow your eyes at the Kyoko standing a few steps below you. Her one eye blinking at you in return, still puzzled, and perhaps confused.

"...Are you really Kyoko, though?" You finally mutter after a moment, flexing your right hand and turning your palm skyward - making your Soul Gem appear there in its black-barbed bauble form. The darkened purple jewel gilded in black and gold pulsing, the gesture causing all three of your guests to move slightly back. "Prove it."

"EH?" Kyoko's indignant response is loud enough to echo through the corridor, as well as make a few nearby apartment windows to glow ablaze with light. "You want me to prove WHAT?" She blinks her one good eye at you again, before shaking her head in disbelief. "Come on, Murderface, ya know it's me, right?"

"Prove it." You reply again, just as you watch your Soul Gem carefully, focusing on the trick that Enishi taught you.

"..." Kyoko falls silent here, completely and utterly taken aback by this, before letting out a groan of frustration. "Gwaaaaah. Seriously? That's..." She shakes her head again, crossing her arms over her chest. "Ya know, there's being security-conscious, and then there's being completely tinfoil-hat paranoid, right? Murderface?"

It's here that Rea suddenly cuts in, her voice as quiet and as cold as the chilly morning. "...I believe the Warmaster did ask for proof, Miss Sakura." She gestures towards you with a stiff arm. "Please provide the requested proof immediately, so that we can discern if you are indeed the real Miss Sakura or simply a Callidus impostor."

"A WHAT?!" Kyoko's second cry causes more windows to blaze with inner light, this time also with murmuring voices. "Aw, come on, Ashford, not you too! I even treated the both of you to donuts on the way here, for chrissakes!"

"That is neither here or there, Miss Sakura." Rea murmurs. "Or should I say...Miss Callidus?"

You glance at your Soul Gem and give it a brief shake. Still nothing. Good. That's very good. You can breathe a bit easier now.

Still, you need to check, and it's with narrowed eyes that you turn back to Kyoko, who's still clearly confused about everything but apparently determined to prove her innocence.

"Well? I'm waiting, Murderface!" She snaps at you, one of her canines peeking through as she all but snarls your name. ...Probably a bit angry too, considering what you're doing right now. But you have to be sure.

You nod, and pose your question to her. One that only she would know the answer to.

Specifically, the costume she wore during the Kilgore op.

At this, Kyoko guffaws. "Is that it?! Hah! That's easy!" She juts her chin out at you, all confidence and bluster. "I wore that really stiff-lookin' butler costume! With the long undershirt an' gloves and everything! And Sayaka-chan liked me in it so much, that she had another one made for me a week after I got out of sick bay! I--" Kyoko pauses here, only now noticing Rea's focused, laserlike stare. "Uh, Ashford...?"

"A butler costume. I see." Rea nods after a moment. "As expected of our Eversor Rank Leader."

"Whaaaat?" Kyoko whines. "She just likes seein' me in it, that's all! Something about how I look really sharp in it! Don't just start implyin' anything weird by yourself!"

"I fail to see just when and where I started implying 'anything weird', Miss Sakura-slash-Callidus Impostor." Rea doesn't even so much as blink as she replies, while Kumatora herself turns away to hide a grin. "I was merely stating an observation."

"Geh! Freakin' vindicares!" Kyoko snarls, before turning back to you. "Well?! That enough for you or what, Murderface? Come on, we're freezin' our butts off here!"

You give your Soul Gem one last glance, before shifting it back to its active form and then stepping back to let them in.

She's legit, you declare, and Kyoko's shoulders droop in relief. Both Kumatora and Rea begin applauding as well.

"Gaaaah. Really, Murderface, I know you an' Sayaka's got yer issues, but sometimes you're really alike, ya know?" Kyoko grumbles at you as she steps past, entering the apartment proper. "Again, bein' fastidious an' meticulous about security is all well and good, but bein' paranoid's a quick way to getting your soul gem blacker than Duncan Hills coffee, ya know?"

"Please excuse us," both Kumatora and Rea intone as they follow the Eversor into your apartment as well, Kumatora careful to undo her boots first before stepping up to the tiled floor. Rea, in stark contrast, simply de-materializes her shoes with a shimmer of blue light, leaving her feet in stockings. "Ah, can we set up at the dining area, Warmaster? We need the table space for the drafts and everything..."

You nod and wave them away, but not before warning them not to make too much noise, or else they might wake Midori up. Both Eversor and Vindicare Rank Leader salute you with perfect cadence, before scuttling off, carrying the box between them.

It's here, then, that close the door just as you turn back to Kyoko.

It's not that you don't agree with her, you tell the red-haired Eversor. And it's nothing personal, either. You just want to be careful, and if you have to err at the side of caution then so be it.

"I get what you're saying, but..." The red-haired Eversor murmurs as she drops into your personal chair, stretching her legs out as she reclines. "...Ah, well, nevermind. I guess it makes sense, you're Warmaster an' everythin'. Even without Oriko and everything, someone's still gunning for you, right?"

Oriko? So...she knows about Oriko?

Kyoko nods. "Sayaka told me earlier, over dinner. Nearly got into a fight with her over it, too." It's here that she grins, although you know her well enough to tell that it's forced. "Pretty fucked up, huh? I guess she never really got over Kirika."

She shrugs. "Honestly, I don't know why she's actin' out like this. Hating us to death is fine - I probably should've known something was up when she started dropping my calls - but man. Being the Prophet and everything, doing all that stuff back at the concert..."

Your best friend looks up at you. "Is there any hope at all, Murderface? I mean...gettin' her back to bein' normal, or...?"

You shake your head here. It's...you have no idea what to tell her, because you actually have no idea. Both you and Kyoko have seen firsthand what the Golden Weapons could do to someone uncontracted, and neither of you would have been able to walk away from it if not for a nine-foot tall, aptly-named walking automaton of death. And from your own experiences with them, you're compelled to take Kilgore's example as something that applies across the board.

But there ARE variables here that may prove to help, at least. Kirika's one, and the fact that Oriko seemed to be relatively untouched by corruption when you saw her in the seeing was another. And if the spirit inside the Golden Weapon itself could be reasoned with - like you did with Risa, and Kirika, and the Three Stooges - then maybe there's hope.

Still, you don't want to be overtly optimistic, nor do you want to be such a fucking downer for your best friend (even if you're not exactly having the best of mornings). So you tell her the truth, somewhat.

You don't know. But you hope that you can bring Oriko back to normal. You're going to try all you can, at least.

At this, Kyoko grins. It's still a forced one, but you can also tell that her mood's improved somewhat. "...I guess that's the best we can hope for, huh?" She lets out a sigh, patting the armrests with the flat of her palms. "Well, if you're the one saying it, then I guess I can rest easy, knowin' that you're on the job."

[+ 1000 KYOKO POINTS!]

It's here that she finally stands up. "Comfy chair, by the way, Murderface. Ya really know how to pick out your stuff, huh?"

You only steal the best stuff, yeah.

"Hah!" Kyoko guffaws. "Anyway, we should probably be goin', I think. I'll wait downstairs, the car's double-parked and I don't want to get towed at this hour." She pats your shoulder. "Don't take too long, okay? Sayaka-chan says we might not get back till really late, dependin' on how things go."

What? That's...ugh. And you were looking forward to having breakfast with Midori, too...

"Sucks, doesn't it?" Kyoko nods emphatically.

It sure fucking does.

...Wait, what does she mean, don't take too long?

Kyoko blinks at you. "Well, er...I thought you'd like to say goodbye to Midorin at least? I mean, you're not gonna leave just like that, an' let her wake up without knowin' where ya went?"

That's...huh.

"Hey, I don't know what your setup is with Midorin, but..." Kyoko scratches the back of her neck. "I dunno. I'd go and say goodbye, even if it wakes her up. Otherwise you might lose points or something."

Lose...points?

"I mean, she might get mad," Your best friend explains.

What do you do?

Alright, pausing thread for now! Most voted action to start off the next thread! Thank you for everyone's participation, and feedback is always great!

We have a few writeups today, I think! The first is from Twiceborn, the second part of 'From Whence Cometh Iron?' ! Read it here:

The other will be posted by its author!

Questions answered before I go to sleep, in any case!

Tougher sell. They don't know each other that well because Sayaka assumes the absolute first thing Amber will do is go 'Heehee I'm fucking your girlfriend!' and try to break them up.

They're similar enough personalities, though (except for Amber being an amoral cheer-monster), and Kyouko's basically friends with everyone.

I would actually LOVE this. Midori showing backbone? Getting involved in the plot? Yes please!

>>32529073
We sent her on a mission that plays to her strengths, which was good. Whether we're being too protective I can't say, but Midori, I am not even trying to be difficult, CANNOT HANG with the big girls unless she plays it smart. She cannot fight pretty much anyone in the cast head-on. She should not be along with a lot of the missions we're involved with.

But this, this was a good choice - this is treating her like a capable person and letting her do things she's supposed to be doing.

That's not the issue. It's that when she's shown up lately she's just been a moeblob. If you want to get a fix of ChiakixMidori loving there's enough write-ups of that already, but for the love of god let her do something before you wrap yourselves around her like an albatross.

Yeah, and the reason for that is her screentime is so low, therefore anons want their fluffy scenes when she is. You're basically saying 'man, stop making the 3% of the quest this character shows up into moe-time, it's way too much!' When the other 97% are all shadoweuns/action.

Problem: Midori is a pacifist (or, at least, is extremely against killing people) and would have a lot of trouble going for decisive, fatal shots. She may also be a crappy shot to begin with, which training can help with, but would take a lot more training to overcome.

The points I'm referring to are: When we said goodbye to Iori, she insisted on going into the mansion with us, but we left her in the car. During bear hunting in Siberia, she was adamant about meeting up with Mirai and not being sent back.

Giving the situation, it would be in character for her to insist in coming along again, even more so due to current events and I seriously, seriously hope that she does

You mean in OOC time. In terms of IC plot, we've been seeing a shitload of Midori. And I'm saying those scenes would show up if Midori did more missions and shit with Chiaki, but since we keep leaving her behind that's not a reasonable complaint. No shit people are gonna go all moe on you when we meet her after work, and we don't get to see what she does at HER work anyway.

That doesn't change the fact that WE, THE PLAYERS CONTROLLING CHIAKI, have had relatively little contact with Midori. Honestly, its starting to feel a bit like a long-distance relationship at this point.

IC and OOC problems are two different things - and this is very definitely an OOC issue.

And while that 3% thing is undoubtedly an exaggeration, I can be pretty certain that out of the main characters, Midori has had the least screentime lately. Or, to be more succinct, the least MEANINGFUL screentime.

Admittedly, there was a point at which we didn't see Midori for nearly 60 or 80 threads or so and I argued at that time that she'd gotten nearly no screen time.

Recently, we've been having a lot of Midori, for which I'm glad, but now I hope that she gets to be a bit more assertive again, like she was at the start.

Maybe now that her sempai finally noticed her, she won't be as so hesitant to speak her mind

No fucking shit.

But OOC perceptions colour Chiaki's behaviour. If people feel like its been a month or two since a character has shown up - which with Deculture's glacial pace is all too likely - then people will REACT TO THAT CHARACTER like its been a month or two since they've seen them.

And when someone doesn't show up for 80 threads, thats an awfully long time.

Hence my comment about a long distance relationship.

Over a month of flashback (more like 6+ weeks atm), and while suptg is being a shit so I can't check, I seem to remember we didn't get a lot of time with her before it started either. Something like these two threads where she's spent 100% of the time sleeping isn't Midori screentime either. So, however long we talk to her next thread, and then it's off for a day of not seeing her which at Decu's pace is probably about 4 months.

Can't we share senses with her or something due to being linked by soul gem?

I'm not saying we should be going for [Assuming Direct Control] but having a second set of eyes from an stealth-buff is a huge asset.

So we're basically in agreement that it'd be nice if we saw her more and ideally found ways to work with her more. You just like the moeblob scenes because it's a change of pace from all the noir and drama and I don't, because they're all we get of the character. Is that about right? That's what this seems like.

Anyway, I see what you're getting at, and I understand the logic, although I disagree.

I disagree here. The point at which I'm referring to is the Ruri Arc (which I despised) and then being promised a date and having that interrupted by Malal Arc (which I liked). Since then we've had the date, and then dinner, and now well be talking to her again. For the time being, I'm satisfied with the amount of appearances.

Now, I would like for Midori to start acting like her old self again.

>>32529357

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/08/14(Sun)08:44:15 No.32652222

You decide to say goodbye to Midori before leaving. As much as you're itching to find out just what the hell is this all about - you're pretty sure this isn't about your training anymore, not by a fucking long shot - you don't really want to have Midori wake up to an empty bed, alone with a couple of posted guards. Not after last night.

Making your way back to the Master Bedroom, you see that the Callidus who you've spent the night with is still asleep - although she seems to be in the verge of waking up, a distressed expression wrinkling her features. Her hands fumbling every now and then at the spot of the bed where you'd been only moments before. You're already wincing at the thought of waking her earlier, but now...

...Nnh. Nothing for it. You have to let her know. She'll be worried regardless, but at least she'll know who you're with, instead of assuming the worst right away.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/08/14(Sun)08:44:46 No.32652228

>>32652222

You hold her by the shoulder and gently shake her awake. Murmuring her name quietly as you do so.

To her credit, she wakes up with considerably less violence than you did, her eyes fluttering open after a small sigh leaves her lips. "Nnh...S-sempai...? Is it time for me to make breakfast already? I..." She yawns here, both arms coming up to stretch - and it's here that she looks at you again, crimson eyes squinting. "That's...why are you in your costume, sempai? I don't..."

Midori blinks again, suddenly and immediately more awake. "S-sempai? Are you...what's going on? What's happening?" She grabs onto your hands, as if trying to keep you there as she glances towards the window. "...It's not even morning! We don't have to go to work yet! What's going on?!"

...You haven't told her anything yet, and she's already panicking? You try to make a joke here, forcing your lips into a smile you didn't feel. She's getting to be as paranoid as you are.

It's here that Midori pouts at you. "If...If sempai's trying to make jokes, then I know it's something bad! Please, tell me what's happening!"

How do you respond?

Meguca physiology in general. Changes caused by physical development can take years to be reflected in the self-image in the soul-gem... though not dying or needing to recieve healing can accelerate this somewhat.

Also, considering that Chiaki could wield the Golden Desert Eagle without losing any semblance of accuracy either due to recoil or the weight of the gun itself would make her a fair bit stronger than her "noodly physique" hints at.

True enough. I just haven't read anything that explicitly says the Golden DEagle had anything other than being able to be drawn from Chiaki's shield at anytime or the fact that she doesn't have to worry about ammo. Apart, from it containing three fragments of her (Braids, Dildoes and Murderface).

Anyway, more training sessions with Sayaka will hopefully rectify that.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/08/14(Sun)09:41:39 No.32652810

>>32652356

You decide to be honest with her - at least, as honest as you can be without giving her more reason to panic.

Sayaka's called you in for a training session, you explain. A very early one, which, you agree is a little weird and definitely very irritating, but you know that the Eversor Rank Leader isn't someone to do anything without a very good reason. Either way, you'll be finding out what that reason is soon as you see what it's all about.

"A...training session?" Midori asks, eyes still wide and fearful, her hands still grasping yours tight enough to start to hurt. "But THIS early? The sun's not even up, and we just..." Her face goes crimson here, but she keeps her gaze level at you, eyes briefly narrowing. "...There's someone else here, isn't there?"

You blink at this. Even with Kyoko's decidedly loud indoor voice, and the other two Magical Girls having moved to the dining room - Midori couldn't have possibly heard them. Not with the way the apartment's laid out. Not to mention she'd been visibly asleep the entire time they were here. Which then begs the question - how did she know?

You confirm her suspicions with a nod, however. Yes, Kyoko just arrived a few minutes ago, here to pick you up. She also dropped off Rea and Kumatora as guard detail. You add, after a moment, that the latter had also brought a particularly thick file with her - something about a manuscript?

"H-huh? Oh...y-yeah, we were supposed to go over the next volume's first draft," Midori murmurs. "But not this early...! I had that set until after lunch today, at least...!"

Well...at least she could have a head start on it? You suggest with a weak smile. This goodbye isn't turning out as well as you hoped. You just wanted to nudge her awake, tell her where you're going, get a sleepy acknowledgement, before slipping away - but not after giving her a kiss or something like that.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/08/14(Sun)09:42:50 No.32652827

>>32652810

Not this panicked questioning. Certainly not her physically holding you back, before you could leave.

It's...almost endearing. Not a lot of people actually insist that you stick around them for too long.

It's after a moment that you clear your throat, trying to get your thoughts back in order. Anyway, you just came back in here to say goodbye, so she doesn't wake up and wonder where you are. That seemed like the decent, responsible thing to do.

"I...I appreciate the gesture, sempai, I really do," Midori replies after a moment, nodding. It's here that a determined expression sets on her face. "But besides that...please let me go with you."

...What?

"I want to come with you to this training session." She says firmly, nodding again, more to herself than to you. As if confirming an internal decision. "If it's just a training session like sempai says, then it's okay, isn't it? Unless..." She trails off into silence, still locking eyes with you.

Unless...?

"Unless it isn't just a training session, and that means I HAVE to come along." Midori finishes. "Please, sempai."

What do you do?

[]Try to reason with her. This is something you have to do alone. It's a Warmaster thing.
[]Refuse her outright. She's yours, but she has to respect that you can make your own decisions, and you're firm on this one.
[]Bring her along. Sayaka did say it was just a training session, and while you have your own suspicions, bringing Midori along shouldn't be too much of an issue.

As Hat-chan pointed out, leaving her behind might well turn out to be the decision that kills her, since we are not there to shield her from Homucifer.

The three stooges did imply that Homucifer cannot directly attack Chiaki, and in the dream it was Homucifers minions who killed Midori, while Chiaki was NOT THERE.

We are just taking her to HQ at this point. Again, we can check the situation, what Sayaka wants and THEN decide again whether or not to continue bringing Midori with us.

However it is atleast safER than Chiakis apartment. And like was said earlier, Homucifer apparently cannot strike at Chiaki directly. Hopefully that means she also cannot strike at those that are nearby.

Also, it occurs to me that we have the DEagle right? Why cannot we ask advice on this matter from the three stooges? They would certainly realise that Chiakis dream was no dream, and would be in the best position to offer advice on how to shield ourself/Midori from the "Transcendent One".

Its from them we first really learned about Homucifer afterall.

I dont agree with this. After we had the talk about the Murderface-Expierience® she was less clingy so and it sure does look like she seems to be freaking out for some reason.

Or it could just mean that Homucifer can't harm Chiaki physically.

However it was also said that since the DEagle is our GW, it corrupts us less than the other weapons do, so using say the Katana and DEagle together would be far safer than using Katana and the Bangles (or Bangles+Axes).

If you think the advice of the three stooges is worth it, vote to carry DEagle with the katana.

Just as you open your mouth to automatically refuse - your newly-acquired Watch-Wearing Dildoness coming to the fore - it's also here that the sheer gut-wrenching fear caused by your nightmare gives your guts a good wrenching, reminding you of just what you saw. Yes, it was just a nightmare, and you're not one to put much stock on dreams - but wouldn't it be better to err on the side of caution, here?

What if it was a warning? One that was so detailed that you tasted Midori's blood as it misted in the room where that eerie doll slaughtered her? One that felt so real that you still glanced at the shadowy corners of your apartment, waiting for that tell-tale giggle that you were already beginning to dread?

And that's beside the fact that there IS something decidedly weird about this entire arrangement. A fucking training session at 3 AM? Not even Kirika at the height of her lunacy was THAT extreme. You doubt Kharn would have allowed this kind of shit to fly. She'd have probably rolled over, gave whatever blonde she had in her bed a smack on the bottom, before promptly falling asleep again.

It's here, then, that you nod at Midori. On second thought, sure, why not? You have your own suspicions about this training thing, you tell her, but it should be alright for her to come along. She needs to go get ready really quickly, though - you doubt Sayaka's in a mood to wait.

The green-haired Callidus, who seems to already have a pleading rebuttal poised and ready to be flung at you - probably banking on your refusal - is clearly wrong-footed as she absorbs just what you'd told her. "W-wait, sempai, you're...really bringing me along?" Midori blinks her wide crimson eyes at you. "Really? You're not joking?"

You blink at her, before shaking your head. Have you ever been the type to actually joke about these things?

"W-well, not really, but..." Midori shakes her head, seemingly deep in thought - before suddenly jumping out of bed with a shriek, as if suddenly remembering something. "O-oh! Yes! I need to get ready really quickly, just like Sempai said! I'm sorry, I just wasn't expecting...!"

I-it's fine, you tell her, as you see her throw off the blankets - and you turn away, feeling your cheeks burn at the sight of Midori running to the shower in her...altogether. This is stupid, it's nothing you haven't seen before, but...ngh.

"Give me five minutes! I'll be more than ready then!" The green-haired Callidus calls over the full blast of the shower. "Five minutes, sempai!"

It was closer to four minutes, actually. A little bit after 3 AM, and while you're looking worse than what you're accustomed to scowling at in the mirror, Midori looks as if she'd gotten a solid eight, completely fresh and ready for the day.

"Ready!" She grins, zipping up her trainer jacket, before linking her arm with yours.

...Yeah. Alright, then.

With her by your side, you make your way back to Kyoko in the living room. She seems to have fallen asleep in your chair again - but she immediately wakes up at your approach, one hand automatically coming up to wipe sleep-drool off her chin.

"Nyeh? Oh, Murderface, ya ready? Let's go--" The red-haired Eversor freezes here, her one eye widening at Midori, then at you, then back at Midori. "Uh...um..."

"Good morning, Kyoko-san!" Midori greets the Eversor, who only nods dumbly and returns her greeting with a mumbled one. A moment later, and you blink as you're dragged away from your Callidus by Kyoko herself, away from the living room.

Why is taking Midori crazy? You ask while trying to unsuccessfully worm your way out of the headlock Kyoko's put you in, before giving up and just letting her have her way. Freakin' Eversors. Does she know something she's not telling you about this...'training' session?

And just like that, like you've said the magic word, Kyoko releases you - the red-haired girl turning away from you, her arms crossed over her chest. "Geh...I was really hopin' you wouldn't have to ask me that, Murderface, honest to God..."

You pat the wrinkles of your collar down before glaring at Kyoko's back, murmuring your best friend's name in what you hope wasn't at all a threatening manner - even if anything you say invariably sounds like a threat by the tone alone. She freezes here, before turning to face you, her expression pained.

"Look, it's...Sayaka didn't tell me anything else, other than to get you to where I'm supposed to drive you, right?" She jerks her thumb towards the dining room's direction. "Far as I can tell those two weren't told either. But...egh, you know, I just overheard her talkin' to Mami over the phone, and it seems like this ain't a training session at all."

...You figured that. Now what is it really?

"Guh..." Kyoko seems pretty close to tears now, clearly caught between two sides. "I think something serious went down in Kazamino. I made a few calls of my own on my way here, an'...it seems like there was a really big fire in one of the churches there. Just happened in the middle of a mass, or something...lots of people burned to death where they were sitting." Her voice falls to something even less than a murmur. "Most of 'em sparklies, but that's unconfirmed."

Huh. That's....well. Now there's a reason to be dragged out of bed at 3 in the morning.

"I think this is a secret meeting on what to do about that, because they think it's the...uh..." Kyoko shakes her head, here. "P-word."

Yeah, jumping into the barrier to save Chiaki could be viewed with suspicion. It seems like something a spy might do, so no one suspects her.

The players know she is on the level, because we were controlling her at the time, and literally saw her internal thoughts/emotions.

Obviously Kyoko and Sayaka would not have that luxury.

Penis?

"W-what?" The Eversor's jaw drops, her cheeks crimsoning. "No, Prophet, ya idiot!" You wince as Kyoko's fist thuds into your side. "Prophet!"

3:30 AM dick joke and bruised ribs aside, this makes a lot more sense now. If there's Magical Girls getting killed the next city over, then there's definitely a need for a meeting. Especially if the suspect's the Prophet herself.

...It's come to this, has it, Oriko? This is what you've decided to do with your life?

"Anyway, uh...that's why I think it isn't such a good idea to have Midorin with you on that meeting." The red-haired Eversor takes out what looks like an embroidered blue handkerchief from her jacket pocket and dabs at her forehead with it. "I just think it's gonna be dangerous for her there."

How do you react?

Combined with the fact that her magic inherently diminishes suspicion, it means that if she doesn't get initially get caught it's unlikely for anyone to figure out a callidus had been there. Unlike the Yakuza guys for the Ruri ark.

For what its worth, we are apparently a lot better at dealing with illusions now. Midori has taught us how to check for them.

One thing that just occurred to me though. We should be carefull with sending Midori against Oriko directly. I mean she is using the title "prophet", and she was able to magically perceive us when were scrying her through a mirror.

Its possible that she could see right through any illusion magic. This kind of "prophet-vision" might well be an ability given by the golden staff. I recall that in that Kharn flashback for example, Ahriman somehow just knew Kharns history and past. The staff might well warn Oriko, no matter how good an illusion Midori uses.

Lets not send Midori to face Oriko personally.

Well, its worth keeping in mind that Oriko probably went for the power offered by the staff, because Chiaki killed Kirika. She wants revenge.

Oriko might well go for the whole "cause equal pain" thing before going for the kill, which might include killing those Chiaki holds dear. Don't forget she sent Chiaki a severed head made to look like Mami.

If Oriko has learned that Chiaki is close to Midori (staff might have told her?), she might well want to kill Midori first, and Chiaki second, for maximum pain.

Even with this new information, you still insist on Midori coming along.

"W-what?" Kyoko frowns here. "Murderface, I just told you--!"

Yes, she did, you say as you raise a hand to stop her. And you appreciate the information, really. But even with that, Midori herself suspected that this wasn't going to be just another training session, as ill-scheduled as it is. And she insisted on going. You doubt you'd be able to convince her to stay if you wanted to. Besides, if everything does go to shit, she'll be safer by your side than being anywhere else.

The red-haired Eversor blinks at you, before turning to Midori (who simply smiles and waves back) and then turning back to you again. "...Hold on a second there, Murderface. You're saying even she thinks something's screwy with this setup? Midorin? And she WANTS to go?"

Yeah.

"That's...huh." Kyoko crosses her arms once more, seemingly impressed. "I mean, I know she's a Callidus an' everything, and they're generally smarter than us stick-wavin', gun-shootin' peasant Eversors and Vindicares, but..." She shakes her head, grinning. "Man, I gotta say, you really lucked out with Midorin, Murderface!"

Kyoko slaps you hard on your back, nearly knocking your glasses at the impact. "Someone who's okay with gettin' dragged out of bed at this hour to go into the danger zone with you? That's something special! She's a keeper, don't let her out of your sight!" She pauses here for a moment, before slapping you again. "That or she's catching the paranoia from you! Hahaha!"

...Yeah. Yeah, you think so too. The former, anyway.

"Anyway, if you guys are sure, then I'll happily drive the both of you there." It's here that she pulls out her own smartphone. "Lemme just call ahead an' make sure Sayaka-chan knows, before she gets an aneurysm seein' Midorin' with ya when we pull up at our destination."

That sounds like a plan. ...What about Kumatora or Rea, though?

Something about frames and censorship. "I guess we can take 'em along with us? I mean, we're already taking Midori, what's a couple more?"

She shrugs after a moment. "Or we can just let 'em stay here and wait for us, keep your apartment guarded."

You decide to take Rea and Kumatora with you as well. If Midori's coming along, and there's a potential for something to go ass-skywards, then you might as well make sure you've got enough people with you. People you can trust, anyway.

"Hoo boy." Kyoko shakes her head. "Tellin' Sayaka-chan about all this is gonna be a doozy, but...ah, well, Warmaster's orders." She grins at you. "Come on, let's get this show on the road. If we're gonna get there full up, we might as well be there all punctual and stuff."

And so you do. What was only supposed to be a two-person party squeezed into what appears to be a rather well-maintained but beat-up family car - you have no idea what make it is, but it seems to look reliable. It's also clearly a civilian model, something that isn't sporting Officio colors, emblems, or even a plate.

"Borrowed it from a parking lot near the airport," Kyoko pre-empts your question with a gleeful answer as you drop into the side passenger seat, with Midori, Rea and Kumatora all squished together at the back seat. "And no, it's one of those 'park your car here and leave it while you go overseas' kinda parking lots. Sayaka-chan wanted me to use civilian wheels to drive you to you-know-where. Easier to lose tails in traffic if you're not in a company car."

Yeah, you can see that, but...there's hardly any traffic on the roads! It's still three in the morning!

"Miss Midori," You hear Rea speak out in a calm, yet clearly muffled voice. "Please move your breasts. I am asphyxiating."

"Just go with it, Murderface, jeez!" Kyoko growls as she adjusts the rear-view mirror, before starting the car up with a twist of its keys. The automobile coughs into reluctant life, and soon enough it moves out of the street and into the main road.

The ride is relatively quiet and uneventful - well, besides hearing Kyoko and Sayaka get into a one-sided shouting row over the phone. While your red-headed Eversor best friend tried her best to explain things as they are, without making you sound like an entitled piece of shit with a Warmaster hat - you couldn't help but overhear certain words and phrases, like 'Murderface wanted to' and 'she's the Warmaster, what was I supposed to do?'. Of course, you also heard 'Midori's a tough girl, she can hack it' and 'YOU try seperating 'em, it's fucking impossible'.

Poor Kyoko. You'll have to make it up to her sometime.

The ride ends at what appears to be beside a family restaurant in Mitakihara's upper commercial district - where some of the swankier hotels and business towers are also situated in the city. As your party piles out of the car - with Rea looking considerably more haggard than she did, but looking no less eager, and Kumatora so exubrant she's actually shadowboxing - you glance at the restaurant's lone occupant through its transparent windows.

It's Sayaka. Fully transformed, sitting in one of the restaurant's family booths. Her cape draped over the booth seat's back rest. A long and flat black metal case on the table in front of her, big enough to contain weaponry of some sort. Most likely a sword.

It's to note here that your Equerry's never looked as pissed as she does so now, sipping at her drink through a straw with cold, seething fury.

"Here we are," Kyoko says as she stretches, gesturing towards the restaurant's entrance. "Well? What're ya waitin' for, Murderface?"

You find yourself swallowing audibly. ...But what about them? Aren't they coming in with you, too?

"Sayaka-chan wants to talk to you personally first, I think." Kyoko smiles weakly. "She, uh, told me in the call earlier. We'll just wait here for ya until you're done."

...Right. But this...this doesn't look like the meeting place.

"I know, right? But this is where she told me to drive you to, so..." The Eversor shrugs, before flitting behind you and pushing you forward. "Go on! She's not really that mad!"

...You allow yourself to be pushed, and it's here that you stumble into the otherwise deserted restaurant. Sayaka looks up at your approach, and brusquely points towards the seat in front of her. You find yourself obeying, planting your ass where she designated you should.

"For the record, I'm pretty mad." Sayaka finally says after audibly draining her drink. "But Midorin's here, we're all here, and it's still a couple of hours before the sun even thinks of rising." She shakes her head. "Murderface, you know why we're here, right?"

...You have your own suspicions, yeah.

"From what Kyoko told you, yeah." She throws the red-haired Eversor outside her trademark glare - one easily comparable to yours in both venom and seething hate - and you swear you could hear Kyoko's knees knock even from inside the restaurant. "And you know how dangerous this could be?"

Somewhat.

"Why'd you still bring Midori, then?"

How do you respond?

[] Because I'm making decisions based on what little I know, instead of having the full picture like I'm supposed to? I AM Warmaster, Sayaka. Try to remember what that means.
[]She wanted to come along, and I feel better with her around me. It's simple as that.
[]Forget Midori for now. Tell me what the fuck this is all about.

Just her luck to have you as a Warmaster, huh? Even if you yourself are frankly irritated, you try to ease the tension between you a bit. No need to get her revving her bitch motor harder and harder. Would it have been easier with someone like Kharn?

Sayaka snorts. "Probably. I'd only have to throw blondes at you to get you to do what I want. Then again, it's nice to have someone else be the uptight, watch-wearing dildo for a change." She cracks a smile here, before taking what looks like a file from the seat beside her. She slides it across the table to you, and you flip through it immediately.

"Four hours ago, the Kazamino branch of the Church of the Blessed Lady suddenly exploded. It's one of those many off-shoot sects of the Blessed Lady religion, you know what that is, right?"

Yeah, you've heard of them.

"Good. Anyway, as I was saying. The church suddenly exploded as it was in the middle of a midnight mass. Witnesses describe it as if a napalm bomb went off inside, everything just started burning after that one explosion. But what they also thought was strange was that no one came running out, even if it took a bit for the building to actually go up in flames. Firefighters managed to take out the fire an hour later."

You flip through the file - it's all photos, quickly taken with a sharp photojournalist's camera. Detailed, stark, and quite gruesome.

"When the coroners came to take the bodies, they identified all the bodies as female, between the ages of fifteen to twenty-one, all burnt to unrecognizability. You know where this is going, right?"

Right, you say as you flip past a photo of a burnt corpse holding hands with another shrivelled, blackened husk. All the victims were Magical Girls.

Pinky promised to "play fair" with Midori. We probably don't have to worry about divine lightning or stuff, but agents and golden weapon shenanigans are probably par for the course.

Mami has influence over basically everyone. She's probably bedded more important people than Kharn managed. Its been stated that Officios would go to war over her.

THAT SHIT is why she's not trustworthy. Koobs is actually pretty cool all things considered.

"They were all sitting down when they burned. No one was standing - well, except the one leading the sermon. She was found in multiple pieces all over the altar, like someone blew her up. And they also found a lot of jewel fragments scattered all over."

...Soul Gem fragments.

"Twenty-four of them were ours, Murderface." Sayaka shakes her head. "Twenty Eversors, four Vindicares. The rest were either Tenth, or Seventh. And we have reason to believe that the Prophet was behind this."

She takes out her smartphone, taps on its screen a couple of times, and holds it out to you; you see the grainy footage of what appears to be a crimson-suited Culexus manifesting in the middle of a congregation. She raises a hand, and small flashes of light burst from all over the screen - each one followed by a seated girl's head lolling slack on their shoulders.

The Culexus then clenches her hand to a fist, and everything bursts into hellfire.

The video cuts after that.

"The people we're going to meet are...representatives of the Church of the Golden Land sect," Sayaka draws her smartphone back and stuffs it into her skirt pocket. "They want to discuss what to do with the Prophet. They're all but ready to declare war on her, Murderface, but...I think they want to work with us in bringing the Prophet down. To keep casualties to a minimum." She clears her throat. "They asked for you specifically, actually."

...Right. This is...well.

Now you understand why they're going through all this trouble.

Dammit, Oriko...

"Any questions?" Sayaka glances at her smartphone's clock. "We don't have a lot of time, so make it quick, Murderface."

What do you ask Sayaka?

[]Now tell me what these sect people really want.
[]Where's Mami in all this? Does Kyuubey know?

>>32656203

>Because you're making decisions based on what little you know of the situation, you tell Sayaka, narrowing your eyes behind your glasses in your own trademark glare, matching her stare for stare. Making decisions based on incomplete information - instead of doing so with the full picture, just like you're supposed to? You ARE Warmaster after all. She can do well to remember what that means.

>Sayaka has no response to that, only to glare at you harder, a small vein pulsing at her temple. When she speaks, it's with a deadly, forced calm. "That's only because of how quickly shit happened. But all you had to do was to follow what I said: get ready, let Kyoko drive you here, and nothing else. You didn't have to get Midori involved--"

>You shake your head here. She's not getting it. You made the decision to bring Midori here with what little information you had on hand at the time. Kyoko telling you more about the situation was a complete fluke, and you forced her to tell you. If she didn't want you to bring Midori, then she should have at least told you a bit more than wash up and get chauffered by Kyoko!

>"The lines weren't secure. We don't know who may have been listening." Sayaka growls. "I--"

>You shake your head and wave away her protest irritably. Forget about that, forget about Midori. You want to know what the fuck this is all really about. And if this is some kind of convoluted scheme for someone's surprise birthday party, then you are drinking all the whisky in said party and someone else will clean up after you.

>...The blue-haired Eversor closes her eyes briefly, taking a couple of deep breaths, before opening her eyes once more and shaking her head at you. One gloved hand reaching up to pinch the bridge of her nose. "Jesus Christ, Murderface..."

Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam versus The Grind Part I

Who made the packaging on these ramen blocks? For the life of me I can't get this thing open. I wanted a sandwich, but they were all out after I woke up from my first shift. The earlier I lose conscious perception in my trance state, the longer it takes to come back. So either more suffering up front, without being able to move even my eyes as I become acutely aware of how uncomfortable I am, or more suffering later, where I end up missing lunch or dinner.

The latter doesn't seem so bad in comparison.

Still, I was hoping for something nice today after this fuck-awful weekend. I should have learned by now, nice just doesn't happen to me. And yet the lesson never ever ever EVER sticks.

Just getting these was a fantastic demonstration of how shitty everything is. That tea-guzzling bitch found me while I was trying to carry it and a bowl of hot water, which was fucking retarded in the first place. She spooked me so bad I dropped the bowl. Then she actually came charging at me with those freaky maces, screaming that she'd beat me into paste. While I'm sure it'd be nice to have an excuse not to work, I'm afraid of things that hurt. I'm not sure how I managed to outrun her, limping away as I was, but I did.

This fucking plastic piece of shit. Why the fuck does it require so much force to open? My right hand being burned doesn't help, red and tender as it is. It's too painful to try very hard to open the package this way, so I'll have to use my teeth instead.

Fuck, I got little bits of noodle all over the desk and the floor. It must have gotten crushed while I was hauling ass back to the office. The silvery flavor packet falls out and drops onto the floor, where I try to pick it up - dammit, that was retarded, I spilled more crumbs. I toss the useless thing in the trash as I grab the largest wedge I can find and bite into it.

It's very chalky, and tastes like a mouthful of flour and failure.

[1/10]

They haven't brought me my weekly allowance of grief seeds yet. I know it's Monday and the week's just getting started, but it feels like there's a lot of that corruption stuff flowing around my soul gem. Maybe that's what's got me so melancholy today. Swallowing the tasteless dry noodles and trying not to choke, I find myself trying to figure out why everything's so fucked up. Trying to find some reason or logic behind why everything is terrible while taking another bite.

Maybe it's because I was a troublesome kid. I did bite a lot in kindergarten. Kept climbing on the counter and eating all the cookies no matter where Mom hid them. Very prone to crying fits.

But I think everything went to Hell after I punched that boy.

I used to have a more significant weight problem when I was in first grade. I got called the "Breaker" because I sat on a rickety chair one time and it snapped under me. Some boy was the one that kept pushing for the name to stick. He was a real shithead for a lot of reasons.

If movies had taught me anything, it's that if you knock out your bully, everything gets better. So one day I just lost it. Went from sitting at my desk to whaling on his smug, stupid face even after he fell down. I was screaming and crying the entire time, even after the teacher pulled me off of him. After seeing the damage I did, though... I just started crying because I felt like shit.

Before I was transferred out of that school for good, I heard one of those jump rope rhymes, or whatever they're called, caught on after the incident. I start tapping my foot in a rhythm as I quietly cite the lyrics that stuck with me:

"Breaker, Breaker, bellyacher
Made a hit and knocked down Laker
Raised on a diet of Pixi Stix
Just how many hits did Elly get?"

Right, that was his name. Never heard from any of those kids again, since my family had to move to a different district.

Chew, chew, swallow, bite. If I only had something to wash this down with.

I really didn't try hard enough to be a good daughter, did I? There was that time I got caught taking things from my classmates' backpacks because I didn't like any of them and none of them liked me, so I had to change schools in the middle of second grade. Next year I managed to get constipated from all the awful shit I ate, and had to take mineral oil for months. Actually tasted worse than this junk.

But my crowning achievement in being a horrible child was when I set that trash can on fire and melted a perfectly good television in the process with an improvised flamethrower, because I should never have been allowed anywhere near the matches and compressed air. There was definitely a lot of yelling and belt-whipping after that, which I certainly deserved. Hell, I deserved worse at that time. They were good people who deserved a better kid than me. But that treatment facility they sent me to only managed to instill in me some good manners about washing my hands and nothing else. That sort of bullshit is why I didn't get to visit Disney Land that year, or ever again.

It's about that time that I picked up cussing out of habit, since that's the sort of thing that I heard a lot around the house. Everybody was really upset. Come to think of it, I don't remember seeing them ever smile again after that incident.

I did try a little, though. I really wanted to help them somehow. Even if I had to remove myself from the picture, I just wanted to make them happy. Make them laugh like they used to way back when. Hell, I'd settle for them not being ashamed of me. But I was just a kid. Just a stupid fucking kid who couldn't even help herself, much less anybody else. That it hasn't changed even now is a testament to what a goddamn failure of a daughter I am.

FUCK! Cut the roof of my mouth. Now it tastes like flour, failure and blood. Which... actually manages to be an improvement from before, and gives me something to swallow with. Joy.

All those fuck-ups are probably why they told me to just stay out of the house during tax season. I think it was tax season, anyway. Lots of forms to fill out. I didn't like having homework, so most of it was done at school. It gave me time to walk around town. Do some chores outside to take an infinitesimally small amount of their burden upon myself. I wanted to do something, anything, other than continue to be a useless sack of snot and tears.

So of course that's when it showed up. Some kind of black-furred rabbit-cat-weasel thing with scary eyes, decked out in gaudy, gem encrusted jewelry. He asked why I was crying, and I spilled my guts. Because I was awful and didn't take the "don't talk to weird animals" lesson to heart.

He said he understood, and offered me his little contract : Get a wish in exchange for working at a big agency. Fight monsters that used to be like you because they let their souls become tainted. Something about saving the universe if you let yourself become a monster. It was heavy stuff that should have sent me running back home, so that I could maybe ask for permission or at least talk it over. But no, I was just an awful little brat who wanted Mommy and Daddy to stop being angry at me and for our family to live Happily Ever After. But rather than wish for anything helpful, like, say, money, I said something so mind-bogglingly stupid that I want to kick my younger self's teeth out just thinking about it :

"I wish I could help."

I swear that bastard bunnycat weasel was laughing when he tore that shining blue bauble out of me. Scared me so bad I fell on my ass. Said I was one of his bitches now, which should have given me a clue that the fuckwad needed a good punting. Instead I sat there and listened to his spiel about "superhuman clerical abilities" and "minor physical augmentation". And to be fair, that sounds pretty great when you're twelve.

Time to move on to the crumbs and bits.

The first time I transformed, which was right on the spot, it felt... Revitalizing. Empowering. I felt strong, like I could do anything. It took me a while just to stop basking in the sensation and rush on home, because I managed to distract myself by feeling nice for a change. To make up for it, I found myself moving much faster than I had ever done in my life. I accidently ran past my house because I wasn't paying attention, I was so engrossed. Then I hit the city limits and turned around, feeling utterly ashamed of myself.

I forced open the door and sauntered into my house proudly. The looks of shock and confusion on my parents' faces couldn't stop me from grinning. Grinning so hard my face hurt. I did a little twirl to make the cape flutter and followed up with a curtsey. It was somewhat embarrassing, but I was too caught up in the moment to care. I could do something for them, something for the people who raised me. Something that would make them proud of me.

They didn't even recognize me at first. I didn't realize at the time, but my hair had changed. It used to be short and brown, now it was a mass of lavender curls. Then Mom cautiously asked if I was Eleanor, and I assured them that I was their daughter. I launched into a short speech explaining that I could take care of their paper-fueled woes with my newfound power. I didn't even bother to ask permission, I was just so eager to show what I could do that I strode over and grabbed hold of the nearest sheet.

When I was close enough to look at the forms, a chill went up my spine. Something was wrong, but I didn't know what it was until I tried to move and found that I could not. At least, not of my own volition, as my body went to work on the forms with a pen in its hand. Sounds were muffled as though I had my head submerged underwater. And my brain felt like it was being pumped full of cotton as numbers and seemingly random words like "mortgage" filled it to the bursting point.

Everything started to hurt, and my eyes grew dry as they refused to close. I wanted to scream, to cry, to beg for help, but I couldn't move my lips at all. I couldn't even tell if I was breathing. And I felt everything that made me what I am being shoved aside to make way for this unwanted knowledge. Thankfully, this didn't last very long, as I soon lost any and all conscious thought.

And of course, upon finishing everything, I had no idea what was happening or how long I'd been there. I didn't know myself, I didn't know about my house, and I certainly didn't know who those panicky figures were that were standing near me. I just knew that they were there, and that I was in pain, so it must be their fault. I screamed gibberish at them, the people that I was convinced were at fault for this. When one of them, think it was Dad, raised his voice at me, a pen materialized in my right hand. This was the sort with the pointed nib, and as I made a fist, it grew and grew until it was big enough to pass for a spear.

Understandably, my parents panicked and tried to run, but I went after them. Even though they made it outside, I was much faster than they were, and it was so easy to catch up to them. To slash and stab at them, ink mixing into their blood and making them double over in pain as they grew ill. I wanted to make the things that made me hurt pay for what they did. And it felt -good-. It felt cathartic to cause such pain, to maim and mangle and poison.

I... I don't like to dwell on this part. It makes me feel ill.

Thankfully, I remembered what was happening before a fatal blow was struck. And I was rightly horrified of what I did. The pen, the costume, everything disappeared in a flash as I tried to help them up, but they were terrified of me. Yelled at me to leave. So I did the only thing I could do : I ran home and locked myself in my room.

Don't throw up, don't throw up, don't throw up. Big gulps of air now, Eleanor...

I lay on my bed for hours just staring at the window. I couldn't sleep at all. I just kept going over the events in my head, feeling worse and worse with each iteration. I heard sirens in the distance at some point, and that made me cringe.

I plucked the soul gem from its gilding. It had started to get murky with that corruption I'd heard so much about from the weaselly little cat thing. This bauble was the source of my troubles, and he has specifically told me not to break it. So naturally I threw it against the wall as hard as I could.

It bounced off and landed on the floor, rolling along unharmed. I felt like I'd been the one hurled around, tears forming from my eyes as agony became my world for the next hour or so. Or maybe it was just minutes. I couldn't really tell, but it felt like a long time. The next brilliant idea I had was to run away, put everything behind me. And I made it as far as the end of the block before everything went black.

Next time I woke up, I was sitting in a chair in a very sterile office environment. I could feel something pressed into my hand: that soul gem I'd left back at the house. Right, the thing said not to get too far away from it or else you're like a puppet with your strings cut.

Speaking of, sitting behind a desk covered in some of the gaudiest decorations I've ever seen, was that fucking cat. I don't remember the specifics, because that fucker's voice gives me a headache just thinking about it, and I was in a daze at the time, but he welcomed me to the Eighth Officio, informed me that he owned me now, and that my folks were doing fine without me. That last part gave me some relief, since I was afraid I'd flat out killed them, but this wasn't what I'd signed up for, was it? I thought I'd be doing magical girl things.

Asshole said that's for the big girls. Thanks for making me feel self-conscious about my height, you shitlord.

Then he laid out my new job and its benefits : I'd be his paperwork-filling bitch, working each weekday from seven in the morning to nine at night, and get a thirty minute break between workloads to eat lunch if I was quick enough. All the documents would be in some kind of code or something because super secret sensitive information bullshit, I don't know why he wanted to do it. Probably because he's just an asshole.

For all of that, I'd make less than ten grand a year, would not get dental, and had to live in what was little more than a closet with a bed. At least I didn't have to fill out any forms or whatever, but I vehemently complained that it sounded inhumane. Smug fucker told me magical girls aren't humans anymore and I was little more than property. I tried to complain again, but he did something to the soul gem that made my insides boil until I agreed to the conditions.

I was put to work a few hours later. Had to actually climb up onto the chair I was given, it was so high up. There was a mountain of papers on the desk, far taller than myself even if I stood on my tiptoes. I remember pulling at one to get started and the entire thing came crashing down on me. Then darkness, then a bright flash, and... I guess I did my thing. I came out of trance so late that it was actually about time for the next workday. Holy shit, did I ache. Felt like I'd been posing as a statue and staring at the sun, everything fucking hurt.

Apparently the girls of the Eighth, as a whole, didn't like people who cry too loudly. Or too snottily. Or not loud enough for them to enjoy it. Or cry at all. In any case, over the next few days I learned the hard way that tears attracted some terrifying, vicious people that were more than willing to kick all the sad out of me. But since it didn't impede my work in any way, it was allowed. I don't think my complaining would change anything anyway. Not after what happened the first time.

As it turned out, just about every little ray of sunshine in that shithole was actually everything I was ever happy about, or even hopeful about, going up in flames.

For instance, trying to show up people that pick on you only works in movies. And giving yourself a new surname, because your family disowned you and you want to sound cool, is completely fucking retarded. Holy fucking shit, I thought I could actually beat them at basketball or something because I was a magical girl now. I thought I could be -good- at it because I was a magical girl now. Guess it somehow didn't register that they were, too. And that they were better at it than me. And even if I'd somehow won, they'd probably kick my ass anyway. And that no, you can't just go out and try to jam with the rest, that's breaking the whole secrecy thing or whatever, girl that's not even five feet tall dunking on some dude. That's the kind of moronic logic that a twelve year old, one who thinks they can magic things better, would have.

Godfuckingdammit why was I such a stupid fucking kid? I couldn't even handle being independent and had to go a whole month without food because I spent it on some video game or something that got stolen.

I actually accepted some kind of meal from a crazy girl that I'm pretty sure... No, it definitely had drugs in it. No other explanation for why we spent the weekend in her laboratory, "testing stimuli" or whatever to see what makes me go off. Television ads, DVD menus, fliers, newspapers, newspapers in television shows, magazines, books, computers, smart phones, crossword puzzles, word jumbles, comic books, character sheets... All of it set off the trance, like a dog chasing after a ball that you actually have hidden behind your back. Sometimes we revisited things with some minute adjustments that turned out to do nothing. Wearing glasses, for instance, didn't affect it at all. Really, I think she was just toying with me until it stopped being fun.

I was so tired by the end of it all that I just collapsed until I was dragged out and left in the hallway. Got a few precious minutes rest before I had to find my room.

Hell, getting food was a battle all its own even if I could pay for it. Kept getting chased down by scary characters with ridiculous weapons and even more ridiculous costumes. Nearly died when some girl almost sliced off my head with a scythe. Who the fuck uses a scythe?

Had to skimp on a lot of luxuries. Like pajamas and spare clothing. The soap I used kept crumbling and I had a hard time getting a grip on it. Almost certain I heard somebody call me Smelly Elly because of the shitty soap breaking before I was done using it. The cheap toothpaste didn't work, either. I had some pretty painful toothaches that would cost too much to look at, much less fill. Fucking weasel.

But I think my crowning achievement in stupidity while I was there, has to go to trying to kill myself through defenestration. As it turns out, no matter how far you fall, you're only going to break your legs, and not your soul gem. After that, they put a gate on the window that I wasn't able to budge, and I wasn't allowed outside.

The months went by with a tortuous slowness.

At one point things seemed to pick up. I got a chair that wasn't shit. It was actually very comfortable, and I wish I still had it. Then somebody started bringing me food and water during my breaks. And it was real food. Well, real fast food, anyway. It felt like an actual meal instead of just part of one. People were giving me a lot of room in the hallways instead of trying to knock me down, too. I thought that I might actually be able to live with myself.

The weasel rat bastard had other plans.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/14/14(Sat)09:06:32 No.32775053

"What they really want...?" Sayaka blinks at you, before shrugging. "I...I'm not sure what you want to hear, Murderface. I mean, if you ask me, they want Oriko's head on a silver platter, and that's not exactly hard to figure out considering..." She waves a gloved hand to gesture to herself, you, the empty diner in general. "...all this. I mean, Christ, not only is it 3 in the fucking AM, but they've also got Mami involved in this."

Wait, Mami? Mami's involved? How? You feel whatever sleepiness left in you suddenly drain away in a cold, painful flood of heart-pounding panic. Was...was she one of the twenty-four-

"What?" Your Equerry's eyes go wide, here, and she quickly shakes her head as she realizes just what you mean a split-second later. "OH, Jesus, no, Murderface. Christ, no. Relax, alright? Things are urgent but not THAT urgent." You see the blue-haired Eversor force a smirk. "If Mami'd been one of the twenty-four girls we lost here, I think we'd be skipping this particular bit and going on a war footing ourselves. Hell, you'd be the one leading us into it, screaming your head off the entire time."

...Damn straight you would be, you agree, relaxing a little.

You don't care who it is. If anyone so much as harms a hair on Tomoe Mami's head, you'll set Mitakihara on fire if it means catching them in the flames.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/14/14(Sat)09:07:15 No.32775062

>>32775053

"Nah, when I say Mami's involved, she's..." Sayaka squints a bit, her brow furrowing as she attempts to find the right words to say. A moment later, she gives up, patting the table on front of her with her fingers. "Well, you know how she's like, right? How she seems to know everyone and everyone knows her and she knows what's happening everywhere, all the time?"

Kind...of? You know Mami's very capable, and she'd be a lot better at this Warmaster thing than you could ever be.

"Well, apparently she's been keeping tabs on this Church for a bit now. I think she started around the same time they set up shop here in Japan, couple of years ago." Sayaka nods. "Think she's on a first-name basis with the upper staff of the sect, or at least the reps you're gonna be meeting with. I'm pretty positive she set this whole thing up herself, I mean..." She holds up her smartphone. "She's the one who called me up to get you here and everything, Murderface."

So this Church of the Golden Land is...friendly with Mami, then? Is that what Sayaka is getting at?

"What I'm trying to get at, Murderface, is that for now, they look legit. I mean, if Mami gets along with them, then maybe they're not the coven of bloodthirsty cultists I usually consider these Blessed Lady fanatics to be." Sayaka offers you a wry smile. "Well, that, and I hear Kyoko usually sits in their sermons whenever she gets the chance, but I think it's just her goofing off somewhere quiet and peaceful for a short nap. And free food."

Ah. So that's...well. Maybe they're not so bad after all, then.

...But if Sayaka doesn't consider them dangerous, then why'd she ride your ass with you bringing Midori along?

Your Equerry frowns here, before reaching over and poking your forehead with a finger. "Because Oriko might get it into her head to try and fuck with us during the meeting, that's why! Chrissakes, Murderface, I know you're not a morning person but think a little! Jesus!"

"That said, they're kind of skittish already, what with their main branches being blown up and all, so...you know." Sayaka pats the long metal case that can only house that sword with the weird gun-sheathe of hers. "We're trying to assure them that the Ninth's all it's cracked up to be: a professional Officio that's not to be fucked with at all times."

But what if they DO turn out to be a coven of bloodthirsty cultists? What then?

Sayaka's silent for a moment, before shrugging. "Mami's gonna be in there with us. I'd give 'em two, three seconds of screaming about their Blessed Lady before they get a Vindicare Makeover right in their stupid, screaming faces. All of them, at the same time."

Heh. Yeah, that's Mami for you.

"Anything else, Murderface?" Sayaka glances at her smartphone again, before cursing softly. "Anyway, forget it, we're cutting it really close. I need you to pick who you're taking into the meeting with you. Whoever you don't pick I'll post for overwatch or backup." She looks back at you for a moment. "Can't say where the meeting place is, but it's going to be a hotel room. One of the swanky ones that Mami uses often, I think."

>Who do you take into the meeting with you? You can only pick two.

Inside is what looks to be a small wallet-sized picture of a girl with pink hair and crimson eyes, wearing a magical girl costume that was very, VERY familiar. It was obviously a self-taken photo, seeing as the girl was holding a smartphone up with one gloved hand - the other holding a sideways V sign with her fingers over her right eye. Because, considering how Sayaka described it, that's unlikely to happen and it'd be a good idea to bring a Callidus along which are trained in information retention and analysis like a Vanus? Also, if it does come down to a fight, having Callidus support would be optimal.

You decide to bring Midori and Kyoko. You tell Sayaka of your decision, and she lets out a small sigh, shaking her head. It's obvious she's not exactly...pleased with your decision, but the brief smirk curling her lips seems to suggest that she was also expecting it.

"Fine. I'll have Rea on overwatch, and Kuma on immediate backup, then." She stands up from her seat, lifting the metal case off of the table and onto her shoulder with one hand, while the other flares her cape out in a brief flourish. You follow suit a moment later, your own departure from the booth decidedly less graceful.

...Christ, you almost ate tile tripping over your heels there. Just how much did Midori wear you out earlier, anyway...?

As you finally stumble outside, you come upon Sayaka announcing your decision to your little group. Rea and Kumatora accepted their offered roles as you expected them to - your Vindicare Rank Leader with her usual complete lack of expression, and your former trainee (now Midori's assistant) with hot-blooded eagerness.

You were nonchalantly lighting a cigarette when Midori and Kyoko got their assignments, and you almost choked on your first pull as you saw the same fiery eagerness in Midori's eyes as she listened to Sayaka with rapt attention, hanging on to her every word.

It wasn't just that that surprised you, of course. Besides the fire, there was...well. Something that resembled...pride. Pride of a professional sort, and sharply-focused determination. As if by bringing her along, a switch inside your Callidus had been flipped, a button pressed. She was still your Midori, that much was clear, but there was something new to her, now. Something you're not accustomed to seeing.

Or something you never really bothered to look for.

Kyoko, on the other hand, merely turned to grin at you, before flashing you a thumbs-up. That made you breathe a bit easier, too. Things may go up shit creek today in the worst way, but with Sakura Kyoko on your side, you could at least relax a bit more.

With the roles assigned, the four of you piled in back into Kyoko's car, you in the back seat with Midori, and Sayaka riding shotgun. Kumatora and Rea would be getting to the meeting in another method of conveyance, and the last you saw of them was of your Vindicare Rank Leader dragging Kumatora into an alley with one hand while drawing her blocky, futuristic-looking pistol from its holster with the other. A bright flash of light illuminating the entire alleyway they disappeared into for a split second.

"Thank you for letting me come along, sempai," Midori murmurs as gives your fingers a squeeze - and it's here that you realize that you've been holding each other's hands the moment you got into the car. While you're certainly no prude, the realization of it makes your cheeks burn somewhat.

It's...it's nothing, you manage to croak out in more or less the same volume. It's not really that hard to put her in the way of mortal peril like this, it's like second nature for you.

You force your lips into an awkward smile here. She knows that's just a joke, right?

"If you're already making jokes, then it really can't be helped, can it?" Midori shakes her head, a giggle escaping her lips. "Don't worry, sempai. I'll take care of myself. I just want to be there for you when you need me too, that's all."

But she's always been there for you--

"Not just as someone waiting for you to come home, sempai." Your Callidus shakes her head here. "I can't be just like that, even if...if it's romantic, too." She blushes, here. "I want to be there for you the way Miss Kyoko and Miss Sayaka are here for you."

...She wants to be a moocher and a bitch?

"We heard that," Sayaka and Kyoko says at the same time, their twinned voices clear over the sound of your Equerry putting her gun-sword together. "I don't mind if you call me a bitch, Murderface - most of the time, anyway - but if you call Kyoko a moocher again..."

What?

"...Well, at least tell me what she owes you and I can pay you back, or something." Your Equerry glances at you from the rear-view mirror, amusement glinting in her blue eyes. "Seriously though, Murderface, if you're gonna be all lovey-dovey back there, just warn us in advance, yeah? So we can at least stop the car and avoid throwing up all over ourselves."

...Yeah, yeah. Assholes.

"Christ, that gravelly voice trying to sound all cute and romantic...ugh." Sayaka makes a grotesque exagerration of a dry heave, and Kyoko very nearly crashes into a hydrant as she starts to laugh. "Midorin, when you wake up early to make Murderface's breakfast, give her ginger tea instead of coffee. Do something for that weird voice of hers so she doesn't sound like she's gargling gravel all the damn time."

What? You...you don't really sound that bad, do you? Your voice is rough, sure, but--

You glance at Midori, and she shakes her head at you, while also doing her very best to stifle her own laughter. "N-no, you don't, sempai. Miss Sayaka's just teasing."

"No, I don't tease. I'm telling the truth." Sayaka intones coldly, before shrieking as Kyoko pokes her in the side. "G-GEH! KYOKO QUIT IT! Fuck, you almost made me drop the fucking slide there, Christ!"

"Well, you quit teasing Murderface, she's got enough to deal with already!"

"What, I can't poke fun at my own boss? That's in the rules of being an Equerry, you know!"

"Bullshit! Stop lying!"

I just always thought that the short-cut looked way better on Chiaki, and fit her better, than the pony tail or any of the other options presented way back when.

You glance at Midori, giving her fingers a squeeze before replying to the rather offhanded question. You'll wait until this particular incident is resolved, first. Things have just been happening left and right, and you don't think this is the right time for something like that. After all this, though, then...well...you'll think about it, see where the both of you are at that point.

"Logical and smart. Seems like we're getting through to you somehow, Murderface." Sayaka turns from her seat to smirk at you, before going back to assembling her sword. "What about you, then, Midorin? How do you feel about Murderface's decision? After all, she--"

"I don't mind!" Midori blurts out, cutting your Equerry off and making her blink. "I...I mean, I'm not disappointed or anything, and I don't want Chiaki-sempai to worry about my feelings." She looks at you and nods. "B-besides, she's right, a lot of things are going on. Important things, and I understand completely if sempai wants to wait." It's here that she smiles. "I can wait as long as it takes, as long as it's for Chiaki-sempai."

Sayaka chuckles here, after a long moment of silence. Kyoko, meanwhile, lets out a low whistle. "That's a keeper, Murderface. Don't let her out of your sight no matter what."

Yeah. ...Not like you were planning to.

The car finally comes to a stop a few more minutes later, and you step out of the car to look up at what could be the ritziest hotel you've ever seen. Even classier than the one you met Iori in, a couple of lifetimes ago. It doesn't have a name emblazoned on the front foyer, like all the other hotels you've seen - just the roman numeral IX embossed in gold at the front door.

"Penthouse suite, Murderface." Sayaka calls as she herself steps out of the car, the gleaming gunmetal hulk of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie hanging from her waist. "We're running a bit late, but I called ahead. Mami's already in the meeting room, they're all just waiting for us."

...You can't help but you're still walking facefirst into an ambush, but if Mami's already there...

"Just relax and keep your wits about you, alright? Everyone. You too, Midori, and especially you, Kyoko." Sayaka checks the straps of her waist-slung sword a few times before looking up and nodding. "This is just a meeting, after all. Worst we can do is go in there looking like we're expecting a fight. So look like you're not and it'll be just fine."

Says someone who's wearing a fucking gun-sword on her hip.

"Exactly why I'm wearing it, Murderface," Sayaka explains patiently. "If they can see what I'm packing and where it's on me, they know I'm not up to anything funny." She points towards your own shoulder holster. "I was gonna ask you to open carry your Desert Eagle, too, instead of hiding it in your Shield or whatever - but you're already doing it, so that's fine."

...Ah. Right. That makes sense. Sort of, at least.

You're still wearing the Bangles too, under your sleeves. You'll...just let them remain concealed for now, just in case you need them.

"Seriously, though, this is the part I don't really like." Kyoko shakes her head, frowning up at the hotel. "That kinda foreboding...eh. Makes the spine tingle in a really bad way, this."

Like standing at the lip of a AC-130W Stinger Variant's embarkation ramp, huh?

"Geh, don't remind me, Murderface!" The red-haired Eversor shudders, before punching you in the arm, making you wince. "Come on, let's get this thing going already! I'm gonna miss breakfast at this rate!"

And with that, your small party makes its way into the hotel. The staff seem to be expecting your arrival - in that they completely ignore your presence, milling about whatever they do to keep an operation like this moving.

It's also here, as you move deeper into the premises, that you notice a particular formation that your three party mates immediately assume around you. Sayaka, your Equerry, at the front. Midori at your side, and Kyoko bringing up the rear. Not once does Kyoko move up to talk to Sayaka, or vice-versa. Midori not leaving your side is...predictable, but this...

You're not too sure what you feel about it.

The elevator ride is just as brief as your walk into the hotel - and what banter had there been earlier in the car seems to have stayed there, with your Equerry and your aide glancing at every door and every corner with sharp eyes and a hand near their weapons. No conversation whatsoever, just a professional chill coming from the red-and-blue duo - and a bit coming from the Callidus by your side as well.

After a bit more walking, you finally reach the penthouse suite. As you approach the door, you can faintly hear Mami's voice from behind it, as well as a few others you're not all that familiar with.

...Good. That means Mami hasn't been sacrificed and offered up to whatever bloodthirsty goddess these fanatics worship. That makes you relax a bit more. Only a bit, though.

"Alright, here we are." Sayaka says after what seems like an eternity, her shoulders drooping the slightest bit. "Meeting's just beyond this door, Murderface." She reaches out with a gloved hand, closing her fingers around the doorknob. "Anything you want to do before I let ourselves in?"

[]No. Let's do this. Open the door and lead the way, Sayaka.
[]Let them stay out here while you go in alone. If it turns nasty, then you want them to barge in there and start killing.
[]Take only Midori with you, leaving Kyoko and Sayaka out here to wait.

Pinky and Chiaki, are, of course, totally different, because Weird Time Shit. But Mami... this Mami really feels quite off from the original Mami. She might look closer than the other two on the surface, but deeper down... something feels strange. I wonder what it is?

Well, I agree that Mami is putting on probably the single best pokerface in the entire setting. She knows its far better to be loved then feared, and has taken the magical girl world by storm by being someone that a very many people, from every Officio, would die for if asked.

Just remember that despite all this crap Chiaki, Kharn, and everyone else is/has gone through over the dumb things, Mami's had her Golden Weapon this whole time (definitely one of the longer holders of such timeline wise), and it was heavily impolite that not even QB knows it.

To underestimate Mami is to fall to her spell.

"Understood, Warmaster." Sayaka's voice is cold, curt and crisp as she replies - and you immediately realize that no, she's not being a bitch to you now, but rather being a professional Equerry. YOUR Equerry. The difference is subtle for sure, but at the same time the Sayaka in front of you now is worlds apart from the one you're used to hating.

From someone who would gleefully make a pincushion out of your kidneys to someone who would willingly take all the bullets for you and then some.

Someday, you'll make her regret being in this position, you think.

A click, then a creak, and Sayaka pulls the door open - her cape billowing out behind her as she steps forward, into the suite proper. You hear voices - Mami's own joining in - greeting the Eversor in mild surprise. Sayaka says something in response a moment later, sounding the slightest bit sheepish, but otherwise still in the professional tone of voice she'd replied to you with earlier.

After a moment, she turns to wave you in.

You feel Midori's presence right behind you, and it's with a deep breath that you move into the suite yourself. Feeling your heels sink into the soft, wall-to-wall carpet inside.

And the very first thing you notice inside the suite - besides the tense atmosphere, anyway - is the girl sitting on what looks like a very comfortable chair, on the opposite side of a tea table set in the middle of the room. Your vision automatically locking onto her, as if someone had called attention to her and forced you to look, despite it being relatively quiet and everyone talking in hushed, careful tones.

You don't even notice Mami by the door, the blonde greeting you with a smile and a half-hug, before draping what feels like a heavy, oversized black leather greatcoat over your shoulders. The metal epaulets clinking against the bronzed skull shoulder guards as the garment settles upon you.

You remember her face from your dreams. The girl you supposedly loved before you woke up again a few months ago, in a dark apartment with booze in your breath and blood on your tongue.

She'd been staring into her cup of tea, and had since looked up at your arrival. Her dull copper eyes meeting yours, over a small mouth on the edge of frowning.

She looked angry, tired, and bitter all at the same time.

But more than anything, she looked cold and alone.

Alone, even with her entourage standing arrayed behind her - a pair of identical red-haired maids, a green-haired girl with a white-and-blue kimono sporting a snake motif, and...what appears to be a shivering comforter rolled up in the corner of the suite. A comforter with legs.

But you'd remember her long, checkered scarf anywhere, and the red leather jacket she's wearing seems new and all too familiar at the same time.

You manage to tear your gaze away from her long enough to have Mami lead you to the chair across from the seated girl. You plant your ass where she points, dutiful and proper. You don't even flinch as she places your Warmaster Cap on your lap - the skull-and-wings emblem replaced now with the symbol you chose. The shattered purple star, ringed by a gun barrel's silhouetted rifling.

You look back up at the ghost from your past, at the corpse from your nightmares.

You say her name, feeling it leave your lips in a gasp as the surprise of it all punches into your gut.

"...Warmaster Matsuda." Wendy Cooldown replies, carefully, evenly, her voice tightly controlled. As if forcing herself to say what she has to, rather than what she wants to. "Thank you for taking the time to join us."

A young girl sat alone in bustling cafe, idly sipping at her coffee as she stared out at the busy streets of Santa Destroy. Her hair was shaggy and unkempt, her glasses didn't quite fit properly over her tired, bagged eyes, and she wore a rather unstylish dull green track jacket, with frayed cuffs from years of anxious fidgeting. She looked like little more than a shut-in, finally emerging from her house for the first time in a week. Which, as it turned out, was entirely true.

The news droned on in the background, a young reporter going on about some crisis in a far off country. Not a word had been spoken about the massacre in Varrigan. Not a single word about an entire city being effectively erased from the map. There had been talk of Horzine Biotech declaring bankruptcy, but very little in the way of explanation. To the outside world, the event - quickly becoming known as the 'Varrigan City Massacre' in the magical girl world - had essentially never happened.

A few minutes past eleven in the morning, a woman walked in and took a seat across from the bespectacled girl. She was tall and buxom, with bright green hair cut short and piercing, narrow yellow eyes. She wore a black coat over a white blouse and tie, topped off with a black sun hat.

"Mornin', Em," she said, giving the girl a smug grin and a wink. Her voice was like silk, with just the slightest dash of Southern sunshine. "Lookin' good."

"Zis is ridiculous," the girl muttered, glowering. "I look ridiculous."

"Aw, that's nonsense, punkin! You're cute as a button!"

"I am not cute," she pouted with crossed arms. "I am Doctor Emma Strauss."

"Well, sure, I mean," the woman said, waving a hand, "you could use a bit of make up, a BRUSH, glasses that fit, some nicer clothes, but... Oh shoot, where was I going with that..."

"Can ve move onto business, please?" Strauss muttered. "Zis is embarassink enough as it is."

"Oh, come on, Em! How often do we get a chance to just sit and chat like this? How are things? Huh?"

"How are sinks? HOW ARE SINKS?! Vell, let's see," the girl began counting on her fingers as she spoke, "I lost my job, my home, my money, my experiments, not to mention all of my eqvipment und now I'm stuck in ze shittiest motel in Santa Destroy! Zat is how sinks are!"

"Come on now, it can't be that bad."

"It is EXACTLY zat bad!" The scraggly-haired girl took a sip of coffee, grumbling to herself. "No sanks to YOU. Please tell me exactly vhy I kept you around if you vere unable to varn me about a full-blown COUP IN MEIN OFFICIO?!"

“Because," the woman puckered her lips and batted her eyelashes, "deep down inside you're lonely and enjoy my company?”

“Your 'intelligence', or lack zereof, cost me EVERYSINK und you expect sit down und talk like nosink is wronk?! Or vas zis all a part of anozer vun of your little plans, hm?”

"Emma, baby, sweetie, honey," the green-haired woman said, in as condescending a tone as the doctor thought possible, "lemme learn you a thing about a thing, okay? You seem - or seemed, as the case may be - to have this little delusion up in that big old brain of yours that you're invincible. Untouchable. No one in their right mind would EVER want to come after the GREAT EMMA STRAUSS, no sir, am I right? Come on. Let's face facts, hon. Was it MY fault that you had jack all for security run by a bunch of Varrigan rent-a-cops and that mangy little pet experiment of yours? Hm? And was it my fault that you cloistered yourself away in your glorified basement and ignored the Officio that you were in charge of? Hm, hm?"

Strauss' lip twitched as she brought her cup up to her lips. She stayed silent, only giving her companion a piercing glare over the rims of her glasses, which was promptly ignored.

"For world-class genius, you can be pretty god damn stupid, Em."

The doctor coughed and hack as hot coffee shot up her nose. "EXCUSE ME?"

"You heard me," the woman said, her patronizing smile disappearing in an instant. "You want my advice, you just ask, but don't pin this whole fiasco on me, now. Alright, sweetie?"

Strauss scowled as hard as she could, but remained speechless. Everything the woman had said was true, and she was far too pragmatic to try and deny it. Even as a timid looking waitress approached the table, the doctor kept furrowing her brow and waved the girl off without sparing her so much as a glance.

"Venti caramel non-fat latte, please," the green-haired woman said with a wink and a smile. "Thanks, hon."

The girl jotted the order down, repeated it back, then scampered off, so as not to risk the ire of the gruchy-looking nerd.

"So," the woman said, leaning over the table, "I'm 'nna take a wild shot in the dark here and say you're in the market for a bit of good old-fashioned revenge, no?"

"Right now, I don't know vhat I vant," the doctor murmurred, her gaze still wandering out the window. "Payback, sure. Vhy not make myself a billion dollars und finish ze Maerorus project vhile I'm at it, hm? I have nosink left, Frau. How am I supposed to get my revenge vhen everysink I own fits in ze trunk of my car?"

"I," the green-haired woman's eyes wandered as she feigned an innocent expression, "might be able to lend a hand. Assuming you ask nicely, that is."

"You? Hah!" Strauss barked. "I already sold my soul vunce before, I do not intend on repeatink my mistakes."

"Listen, sweetie. I'm not gonna bullshit you, because you're smarter than that. This... This 'Malal' character has been a thorn in my side for a good while now. Long story short, I want her gone and I want to know if you're in a position to lend a hand with that. Y'understand?"

"You are tryink to tell me zere is no catch?"

"Mutual interests, honey. You want your revenge, and I want her dead for," the woman waved a hand, her expression less cheerful as she tried to find the right words, "let's say personal reasons. Do we have a deal or do we have a deal?"

Strauss drummed her fingers on the table as she thought over her options.

"Meet me in vun veek," she finally said. "Bring me everysink you know regardink ze relationship betveen Ekaterina und zis... Malal. Ve vill see vhat can be done."

"Sounds like a date. Mind letting your old girl in on the plan?"

"Keeping the cards close to our chest, are we? Well shoot, hun! You really ARE learning!"

The doctor nodded. She slouched over the table, holding her chin in her hand as her golden eyes flicked up to the woman across from her. "Regardless, I doubt it vill be possible viss only two people."

"Honey, please," the snake-eyed woman gave a wink and a smile, sending a shiver down Strauss' spine. "Why don't you let me worry about the details?"

Strauss found herself in a dark room. Or at least, a dark space. She could recall the woman with the green hair handing her a package and leaving the cafe shortly after, then making her way back to the gaudy little turqouise and beige motel that was her current residence. Everything beyond that became something of a blur, which could only mean-

+Hello, Doctor.+

The voice rang out of the darkness, neither masculine nor feminine. In fact, it didn't seem to speak at all; the words simply appeared in Strauss' consciousness, as though she was present for a conversation that had never existed.

"Guten tag," the Doctor replied, bowing her head as a very slight, reserved smile decorated her face. "It has been some time, Herr Erste."

+Ten months and sixteen days by my count,+ the unvoice of the First replied, cool and emotionless. +I assume that have you received this meeting's agenda from Miss Prime?+

"Ve met zis mornink for coffee, ja."

The Doctor swore she heard a slight chuckle from the darkness. +It's funny, you know," the incubator mused. "Of all the awful human... concoctions, or what have you, each and every one tasted like filth. That is, with the exception of coffee."

Strauss nodded, but remained silent. Her expression of mild irritation said everything for her.

"You're a woman of science, Doctor. I expected you, of all people, to understand," the First said. "Regardless, please, have a seat. Do you have any questions or concerns before we begin our discussion?+

A leather sofa chair materialized beside the Doctor, and as she sat down she was delighted to find that it was just as comfortable as it looked. Her words came slowly as she thought out her question, almost hesitating to ask. "Zere is... vun sink. Tell me, Herr Erste, vhat has happened to my city?"

>> ☐ archivalfag 06/14/14(Sat)14:14:57 No.32778917

+Ah. Yes. Varrigan. Quite the commotion you have caused, Doctor,+ despite its unwavering tone, the voice sounded... faintly amused. +The Eighth and Thirteenth have spent quite the sum to hush the masses. Full media blackout, all Officios involved have scrubbed their records of the event. 'The works', as they say.+

"Und ze city itself?"

+The Eighth will be left to do with it as he wishes, however,+ the incubator paused for a moment, and the Doctor could almost hear the smirk in its voice, +in the best interests of our operation, I was obliged to fill my dear brother in on the nature of the city's, ah, newest inhabitants. What happens to it now is entirely in his hands. Though, he did express some interest in constructing a maximum-security penitentiary in the city's place.+

"He vants to," Strauss looked over her glasses at the non-entity, "turn it into a prison?"

+Something of the sort, yes,+ the First replied. +He has always been something of a wildcard, as you know. He always did have his eye on Varrigan after the Thirteenth took control.+

"Und it vould be a fool's errand to invade ze city..."

+Precisely. I could not have my dear brother meet such a dreadful fate,+ she was sure it was amused by now. +Could you imagine, Doctor?+

The Doctor readjusted herself, crossing her legs as she sat back in her chair. "Ja," she muttered, "vell zen. If zat is all, could ve move on to business?"

+Very well, very well. Moving onto the details of the Maerorus Project, there is, ah, good news and bad news," the First stated. +Which would you prefer to hear first, Doctor?+

Strauss hesitated. For the first time, she was staring down the consequences of her miscalculations. Part of her wanted to skip the discussion entirely and carry on living, the fate of her life's work in constant limbo. At least then she would be able to live with the hope of resuming it one day.

After a deep breath to steel herself, the Doctor spoke. "Give me ze bad news first, zen."

+Oh, excellent. For a moment I was worried I would have to find a way to tell you the good news first, and that would be dreadfully awkward,+ the incubator said. +The bad news, quite simply, is that the Maerorus Project will be suspended for the time being.+

"Vhat-"

+My associates and I have deemed it prudent to place the project on hold for a minimum five year waiting period,+ it continued, ignoring the shocked and wide-eyed Doctor. +At the conclusion of this waiting period, assuming you have not expired, we will review the continued necessity of the project.+

"But- My- My vork," Strauss stammered, "You can't-"

+As a matter of fact, I can. Please do not embarass us both with pleas for sympathy. Must I remind you that it was your own arrogance that wasted billions of dollars and a over a decade of work in a single, spectacular display of ineptitude? Do I make myself clear, Doctor?+

The Doctor let her head down and held her face in her hands, nodding silently. She could already feel a knot in her stomach and a pain in her throat.

+Good,+ the incubator said, not a hint of emotion in its voice. +As for the good news, we are prepared to issue you a regular pension as a sign of our gratitude for your past work. It should be sufficient to live off of, though, I doubt you will find yourself in the lap of luxury.+

"A- A pension?!" Strauss shouted. "I am not some obsolete object to be placed in storage!"

+For the next five years, Doctor, that is exactly what you are. Take solace in the fact that we did not choose to scrap the project all together.+

The Doctor's head dropped into her hands once more. All she could do was mutter a quiet, "Schiesse..."

+Miss Prime will deliver your new living arrangements within the week. Barring any emergencies, you are to remain indoors until that time," the First explained. "Assuming you have no further questions or concerns, I believe we have reached the end of our meeting, yes?"

Strauss nodded again, without a word.

+Excellent. Our meeting is adjourned then," the incubator said. With a moment's hesitation, it added, "If it is any consolation, I believe some of my brothers were eager for you to resume work on Project Valhalla. I will put you in contact with them as soon as possible. Good day, Doctor."

The voice faded into the back of her mind as the darkness closed in. It seemed only moments later that Strauss opened her sore and bleary eyes, finding herself tucked into bed, night having long fallen over the city. The Doctor pushed herself out of bed and reached for the bedside lamp, then reconsidering as her hand touched the switch. For now, she was more content to sit in the dark.

Strauss' eyes grew hot and throat sore. For the first time since she was a little girl, Doctor Emma Strauss cried. It was as if a dam had broken. She held nothing back; tears ran in twin streams down her flushed crimson face.

Somehow, she hadn't fully realized everything that had transpired until then. A small part of her had desperately clung to the hope that she would be able to resume her work after a brief hiatus. Now, she finally understood just how much she had lost, and how much she had truly treasured all that she had created.

Sweet, sad Typhus. Cute little Lil and her furry feet. Clair and look on her face every time she got a new toy. Butterfingers, her favourite pet. The ever-loyal Thorne. Ekaterina, the one who had rose the highest above them all. Strauss had never loved them as a mother should have, but they were her family nonetheless. And it was likely that she would never see any of them every again, because of the one they called 'Malal'.

As she wept, Strauss could only muster one clear thought through the haze of loss and regret enveloping her mind.

Malal would pay. There would come a day when Malal would lie beaten and broken, begging forgiveness, with only regret and sorrow left in her heart. Only then, as she watched everything she had built crumble before her eyes, would Malal die.

Only then would Doctor Emma Strauss have her revenge.

Aaaaand that's it for the second chapter of The Exile of Doctor Strauss. Hope you enjoyed it!

Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam versus The Grind Part II

It was late Friday night when the weasel summoned me to his office and informed me that I wasn't needed anymore. Rather than retirement, I was going to be shipped out. From what I've been told, it's so that his brothers wouldn't find out that he fucked me up as bad as he did. I didn't understand it at the time, but I think he was counting on me witching out sometime after I arrived here.

So I had to gather my few worldly possessions for a one-way flight. And I had to be ready in a day.

It didn't take very long to pack, considering how few things I had : The aforementioned crummy soap and toothpaste; a toothbrush with the blue strip nearly worn away; a plastic hairbrush that couldn't straighten my frustratingly curly hair no matter how long I brushed; a couple sets of plain underwear, an old school uniform, and five socks that didn't match (thank you, thrift store); the stuff I wore when I was brought back here; a peppermint candy I was able to sneak out of the bowl in the lobby; one grief seed; all my remaining funds; and a plastic sack to put everything in.

That left me with a lot of free time that I didn't really know how to spend. I tried calling my house with a payphone - there wasn't a phone in my room - and heard my Dad pick up, but he hung up as soon as I started talking. So I just lay on my little mat and tried to sleep through the rest of the day. And when that didn't take, I started pacing around the room. Trying to tell myself that things would pick up out there, really.

At some point, I heard someone knocking at my door and figured it was time to report to the weasel shit. So I threw it open and growled "What?"

First thing I saw was a sack labeled Burger Suplex, same as the food I'd been getting all week. Second thing I saw was a milkshake with a similar label. Then a face partly concealed by a checkerboard scarf. And finally, a set of wide, tired eyes.

We just kind of stood there like that for a minute. I was kind of embarrassed, and a little bit nervous since I felt like I should say something. It took more effort than it should have for me to finally squeak out a "thanks" for the gesture. For really the first vaguely nice thing that'd happened to me in months.

She handed me the goods and murmured "yeah" before walking away. The scarf trailing behind her did look pretty cool.

Thinking about how much better that stuff tasted is making my stomach protest.

There wasn't any fanfare about my leaving the next morning. Just a message from that asshole cat weasel rabbit fucker to get to the black car outside right away. I wasn't planning on sticking around, so I rushed on out to the car in question. Just wanted to get it over with.

There was something wrapped up in soggy plastic paper waiting for me. I did up my seat belt before unwrapping my gift. It was food. An unholy fusion of egg, bacon, and muffin, and absolutely delicious. Especially since I hadn't had anything resembling breakfast in months.

The front and back seats were separated by a partition - I guess to keep the crazies from attacking the driver - so instead of seeing where I was going, I kept myself entertained by looking out the back window and swinging my feet. Watching the city fall behind right up to the airport.

I had the paper crumpled up in one hand and my little bag of things in the other as the car pulled to a stop. I unbuckled myself and got out, waiting for somebody - maybe the driver, maybe a person waiting here - to walk me through this whole "immigrating" thing. I'm pretty sure I'd need a passport or something like that which I didn't already have. And I certainly can't afford my own flight with this pocket change.

The car drove off as soon as I was out, so it's not them. I scan the drop-off area to find some sign of where to go. I thought I may have been stranded there intentionally.

"Hey."

How'd she do that? I could have sworn she wasn't there earlier. But a few feet away, the same lady I met last night beckoned me over. Her other hand was carrying a paper sack.

After tossing my wrapper into the first trash bin I could find, I followed after her like I was on a goddamn leash. Neither of us said much of anything to each other. Again, I didn't really know what to say here, since I already thanked her last night. I must have looked like a star-struck little kid following around her big sister. Really freaking embarrassing.

It wasn't until she reached the point of no return that she spoke, murmuring, "...Hey. ...You got a shitty deal. ...We could have helped, and we just piled more on."

I couldn't deny that, so I just nodded along. But she's the only one who made any effort to make things suck less for me. That counts for something.

She handed me the sack, which had a passport sticking out the top. I took that out and carried the two bags with my other hand.

"Eightball's trying to hush things up," she explained, sounding pretty bitter, "and it's gonna work. ...But we'll see what we can do."

The lady awkwardly waved goodbye to me, and I returned it even more awkwardly, since I had my hands full. After customs confiscated my shampoo for being too big, I had to hurry to join the rest of the passengers before the plane took off.

The lady in the checkered scarf had pulled some strings. That's what I gathered from finding out I was sitting in first class. It was a commercial airliner, so I wasn't alone, but it meant my lunch was paid for. With nobody seated next to me I had plenty of leg room and a window seat, so I was feeling pretty good, all things considered.

I let the plastic bag containing my worldly possessions drop into the empty seat. I wanted to see what was in the gift bag that lady handed me - the one that bore the emblem of the Eighth. Also settled on something less awkward to refer to her as : "Checkers".

I think it was a care package, or something close to one that was thrown together at a moment's notice due to how sudden my departure was. Beneath the hastily added tissue paper were a few small, non-perishable foodstuffs; a lot of chocolate; an extra grief seed; one of those posters with a cat holding on to a branch with the inspiring caption of "hang in there"; and a card with a phone number on it. Curious, but not something I could do anything about right now. The phone in my cabin - I didn't know they even had those - cost more money than I could really afford.

The flight really wasn't as bad as I'd anticipated. Maybe because I slept through most of it. The seat, after the flight attendant gave me a blanket, was comfortable than my bed back at the Officio, so that probably helped.

I wasn't awake at the time the plane touched down, but the stewardess told me it was time to leave. Which is a shame, because having regular meals and a cozy place to sleep was something that I could get used to. I thanked her for waking me, and for the blanket, and the other things that made the trip bearable, and gathered my things.

It was getting dark out when I arrived. I wasn't sure where I was supposed to go at first, since I'd never had to fly on my own before. I had everything on my person, so I didn't need to go to baggage claim. My original intention was to wander aimlessly through the airport for a few hours - maybe if they don't find me, they'll give up and go home - but I was found as soon as I stepped out of the gate. I was enthusiastically greeted by somebody with a toothy smile, who inquired if I was indeed "Eleanor". I guess I could have lied, but I'm almost sure that they could tell I was lying by how I taste or some other bullshit. Hunting you down seems to be one of their specialties.

Fuck, I hope that tea-guzzler doesn't find my office. I don't think I could do anything if she cornered me in here.

>> ☐ Attarou 06/14/14(Sat)14:24:31 No.32779082

After the introductions were over - I didn't bother to remember her name - she drove me out to the Officio and kept trying to make conversation, getting only short mumbles from me. I wasn't used to being awake at... Whatever time it was back home. I just got the spiel about being welcomed to Australia, and the Sixth, and Warmaster Russ and Incubator whatshisface send their regards even if they're too busy to meet with you, and things would mostly be the same. Except that they didn't have an office ready for me yet, so I had to work in a supply closet until then. After that I was given a room key for their on-site residence and had the rest of the day to get set up.

I had something that could be called a room now. It was small, but it was an actual room instead of a glorified storage space. And the landline didn't have a money slot, so I assumed it was complimentary. I fished the card out of Checkers' gift, and then dialed the number. I thought I might have to pay for long distance, but I was patched through just the same.

Turns out I got Checkers' cell phone number. The rest of my night was her asking if everything was okay, and that the presents were from all of them, and apologizing about that weasel, and reassuring me that things would be okay, and giving me all kinds of tips. Like how I had dental now. And how Australia doesn't have some of the candies I really liked back in America. And that if I needed anything I should call or leave a message. And that was all the time she had right now, good night.

Next day I had a map posted to my door that directed me to my new life. I managed to not get lost somehow, but I remember feeling nauseous the first time I stepped into that supply closet. It smelled really fucking awful, and I had a headache around lunchtime.

>> ☐ Attarou 06/14/14(Sat)14:25:34 No.32779099

I got surrounded by curious cats and nosy dogs, trying to ask me personal questions. The name "Crunchberry" was tossed around, and it seems to have stuck. That was my cue to get the fuck away from them, and I was chased all the way back to the "office". Sometimes they still show up and do it again, and I wish they'd just fuck off.

I got better at managing my money while here, and was able to save up enough to buy a video game console and a small television. When that didn't fill the void, I started buying candy every week. Checkers wasn't always available on weekdays, so we decided that specific times on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday night would be the designated "only really good thing I have left to look forward to" period. I don't really consider her a friend even now. More like... I don't know, something else. Somebody to confide in and admire and wish you got to do normal things with.

Back then, I had mixed feelings about moving out here. Now, though... Now I'm really homesick.

Somebody's knocking at the door, so I guess that's enough reminiscing for one day. I hope the tea-guzzling bitch didn't find me.

"May I come in?" a polite voice inquires. I give an affirmative noise, and my afternoon workload is pushed in on a little trolley. I look at it with dread as the door shuts.

The trance kicking in doesn't do anything to cover the pain of writing with burns on your hand. Shit shit shit shit shit that hurts.

This feels like it's gonna be a slow loss of self. So I have to suffer through this fuckawful pain for a bit longer.

To summarize, my options now are to wait for Checkers and her friends to get me out of here, get into a different line of work, or turn into a witch. And Fuckface's antics are pushing me firmly into the third one. I can only hope nobody gets injured too badly when that happens.

Oh... Right, I almost forgot. Should get this out of the way.

Happy Birthday to me,
Happy Birthday to me,
Happy Birthday dear Eleanor...
I wish I had cake.

[7/7]

And that's all for now.

Thanks to Deculture for letting me write and for the adorable pictures
Thanks to Cooldown for letting me bounce ideas off of her and for dialogue suggestions
Thanks to Archival for catching some typos and confirming that I should split it into two pieces
Thanks to Sanguis for looking things over and confirming some stuff

Three Days – Part 2
-artemi-

Part 1: http://pastebin.com/0ZA0NTiE

Turning around to look back at her, the taxi driver glanced her over, then shrugged. “We're here. Are... you sure this is the place, lady? This is a kinda rough part of town, you know? Forgive me for saying, but you look a little young for this kinda work...”

Hino Setsuna gave him a flat stare with her one good eye, wondering just what she looked like in his eyes. A young girl, no more then 16 or 17, her otherwise pretty looks spoiled by her ruined face and hard, no nonsense attitude. Requesting to be dropped off at the docks, well away from where anyone her age had any real reason to be. Yakuza, maybe? Or a street walker, perhaps? “No, this is the place. No need to wait up for me.”

Leaning forward, she noted he looked older then she had first guessed. Did he have a daughter himself, waiting for daddy to get off his shift? Handing him the cash, she pushed the door open with her foot. Pausing, she glanced back, suddenly feeling the need to reassure him. “And thank you for your concern. I shall be fine.”

Stepping out onto the pier, she held her hand up, shielding her eyes from the slowly setting sun, long hair whipping in the cold breeze coming off the bay. Taking a deep breath, she walked toward Warehouse #0069, said to be the home of the Warmaster's personal arms dealer. The building looked the same as every other one on the various docks along the other piers all along the waterfront. Sure, the windows looked boarded up and the door reenforced, but the same could be said for all the other warehouses in the city. It wasn't the nicest place to be, as the driver had pointed out.

She paused a moment to look for a bell or intercom before finally giving up and knocking firmly twice. The sounded boomed into the building, echoing back toward her like the moan of the dead.

She waited for wait felt like an eternity, pondering her options. If this didn't work, she'd have to find a black market dealer. She had some dealers planned outside of town, when she thought she'd be transferring to the Seventh, but now... now she was denied her planned contacts, her squadmates, even her personal equipment stored in her barracks locker. Despite being given the gift of time, she felt like she simply didn't have enough of it.

Normally, she wouldn't even consider going to another arms dealer; her usual girl in the Officio was more then sufficient to her needs. Even special orders and equipment arrived on time, every time, down to the minute quoted in the initial order. It had come up during heavy combat once or twice, even; A sudden supply crate being air dropped into their position, filled to the brim with weapons and fresh ammunition, had often been plenty enough to turn the tide.

She had heard stories, though, about Miss Misaka. A little maverick of a girl who had showed up one day out of the blue, connected with Kharn, the last Warmaster, somehow. Someone who blazed to the top alongside her equally brilliant brother, despite both of them not putting up with or paying much mind to Kyubei's wishes in the least. She was said to even be the Officio's best sniper, without being contracted or getting any real training from the Vindicare. She even-

With a clunk, her train of thought was jolted by the door creaking open on it's heavy hinges. A young girl, much younger then Setsuna herself, peered out, brown hair darkened by grease, eyes covered by a glowing goggle mask. “Who is this? Strange girl better have good reason for disturb Misaka.”

Wat. You honestly think that after the whole debacle everyone would be content to later her keep going? The company would have crumbled, regardless. It's hard to maintain that sort of operation when you suddenly have zero funding.

There's a lot more to Strauss that I think you're not seeing simply because you've convinced yourself that she's nothing but an irredeemable monster. Which is a perfectly valid view point, but try not to be such a cunt about it, alright? I do value the criticism.

I thought Horzine corrupted Varigan so much that they owned the very soil everyone was living on. They must turn a pretty penny with, you know, owning what amounts to their personal city and test subject reservoire. DoD contracts etc. "The officio" funding the op doesn't make much sense either, I thought Horzine WAS the op, where do the officio get their money from if not Horzine / the magic bag that so many writers like to use the words "the officio" for to summon up any plot contrivance they need?

And

Maybe you should try not to write such crap then. If you have to explain the motivations of your damn main character after the fact of telling the story you might have missed a few things too many the first time around.

It just all smacks too much of you having laid down a "this happens, and then that happens" storyline a long time ago and now everything, no matter what, is being bent and twisted to make it possible to nail it down according to the plan, no matter how many tricks and excuses of crazy size have to be pulled out of the checkered top hat.

not >>32780361 here, the whole "entire city disappears off the map with no one finding out" part really does stretch belief the slightest bit. Like, with how much of a hellhole it was, you think it'd be in the news a lot beforehand. Even if the news somehow was totally shut down and didn't say a thing about Varrigan, you know, people would think, "oh, why did they suddenly stop talking about Varrigan?" It'd make more sense to pass it off as a less fantastic disaster, like, maybe a nuclear reactor went wrong, or some radical anarchists somehow got ahold of a nuke, or maybe it was a sudden earthquake, or maybe Ork spies.

I do like the Ballad of the Seventeenth, though.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/16/14(Mon)08:53:30 No.32819697

You are a Magical Girl, and...well, you have no idea how to describe the situation you're currently in.

Well, maybe you do. Certain words come to mind right away, at least about what you're feeling at the moment.

Shock is one. Tension is another. And above all else, a painful clenching, twisting sensation in your gut that tells you how this could all end badly at the drop of a hat.

You're currently in a meeting with the representatives of the Church of the Golden Land - an offshoot sect of the original Blessed Lady religion, or so you've been briefed. Apparently, Oriko had made her move against this particular sect, having one of her goons bomb one of their churches in the neighboring city of Kazamino, during a packed sermon. A hundred Magical Girls killed, twenty-four of them from the Ninth.

Their soul gems blown out moments before a fiery conflagration vaporized their flesh and charred their bones.

Taking out a Magical Girl can make someone resort to excessive means, considering that they're more than able to come back from a lot of mortal wounds thanks to the Soul Gem system. This is a reality that even you accept and recognize. But this is just...absolute overkill. More than that, it's an insult. A message.

A message that said that the sender is not, at any time, fucking around. Not one goddamn bit.

>>32819697

But as distressing as the news of Oriko finally going full terrorist is, it isn't even the most off-putting thing about your situation. Nor is the fact that the meeting itself is taking place in the ungodliest of hours, forcing you to drag your ass out of a very comfortable bed at 3 fucking AM. It isn't even the fact that Mami had a hand in this meeting herself, although that's probably something you should have expected, really.

No, it's the fact that the representative of the Church you're about to talk to is none other than someone from your past. Someone that your amnesia had all but reaved clean from your memory, or buried deep underneath everything else in there, you're not sure which.

Granted, she herself started coming up in your dreams much more often, but you always wondered if she was just a hallucination. A figment of your imagination, more evidence that you've gone off the deep end just like Kharn herself did after Malal died.

But now she's here, in the flesh, looking at you with an expression generally reserved for pensively regarding a pile of rotting, fragrant refuse with. Her entire body language declaring that she'd rather be anywhere else but here.

And she called you Warmaster Matsuda. Not Kong, not Murderface, but Warmaster Matsuda.

Which should be proper, after all. Your rank and last name. If she wants to be formal, then there's nothing wrong with that.

But something inside you twisted up into a hateful spasm of pain inside your chest when you heard her say it.

It felt exactly like how Mami addressed you formally, in the days after you retired Kirika. Complete and utter lack of warmth, of emotion.

Maybe it hurt even worse.

"Warmaster." Mami's voice, soft and warm, the complete tonal opposite of Wendy's, calls your attention, and you turn to look at her. She gives you one of her smiles - the sort that you've always thought that she saved for you and you alone - before bowing to you. "Before anything else, I'd like to apologize for the painfully-short notice. Sayaka-san should have already briefed you, Warmaster, but it bears repeating that this meeting is one of urgent and critical necessity, rather than anyone here wishing to pull anyone else out of bed at such a dreadful time." Your personal blonde goddess of victory smiles again, here, one of her apologetic ones, a smile that could make you forgive her of any sin.

You shake your head immediately. What else could you do? She shouldn't need to apologize for something Oriko did, after all. It's not her fault that Oriko suddenly decided to fast-track her own execution by getting innocent magical girls involved. Besides, well, mailing you body parts and sending assassins after you.

Mami nods at your acknowledgement, her smile fading somewhat into her usual professional look, the look that said that big-girl things were being talked about, now. "You're too kind, Warmaster. Now, please, let me introduce you to the representatives of the Church of the Golden Land joining us today."

She gestures to them one by one, telling you their names and rank in their religious sect. The twins in the Western and traditional maid uniforms are Attendant Jade Nakajima and Apostle Amber Nakajima, respectively. The green-haired one with the blue snake motif kimono - Himiko Shiraki, Priestess of the Mitakihara Chapter. The shivering blonde girl cocooned in her comforter-slash-oversized down jacket in the corner is their Prognosticator, Yulia Bloodysunday.

"And of course, someone you may remember, Warmaster." Mami gestures to Wendy, finally, another smile on her face. "Wendy Cooldown, Apostle of the Church of the Golden Land."

>> ☐ Deculture 06/16/14(Mon)08:55:57 No.32819722

>>32819712

"In turn, Apostle Wendy, please allow me to introduce my Warmaster and her retinue." Mami turns her smile to the group across the room, and you can't help but notice Wendy also looking at the blonde with...something in her eyes. Adoration, maybe? You can't tell.

"Miki Sayaka, Equerry of the Ninth Warmaster, and Eversor Rank Leader. Sakura Kyoko, Aide to the Warmaster, Eversor. Hanegawa Midori, Aide to the Warmaster, Callidus." It's here, then, that Mami steps up beside you and places a hand on your shoulder. "And of course, the Warmaster of the Ninth Officio Assassinorum, Chiaki Matsuda."

Now that felt...nice.

"As for myself, I assume everyone here knows who I am -" This gets her a few giggles from either side, as well as a couple of bright smiles. "But for completeness' sake, I am Tomoe Mami, aide to the Ninth Incubator." She bows to each side in turn. "I am very pleased to have your acquaintance today, as well as the honor to facilitate this meeting between my Officio and a sect dedicated to spreading the belief of the Blessed Lady and her Golden Land."

There's a moment of silence here, before somebody from the Church side applauds. ...It's the Priestess, Shiraki, looking as if she's about to burst into tears of joy at Mami's little speech. You hear Sayaka grumbling behind you, and Kyoko mumbling a reply back, before they join in the applause - late, awkward, but still clapping. The rest follow suit, including Wendy.

Mami blushes here, before covering her mouth with a hand, clearly embarrassed at the applause but nonetheless pleased. "O-oh, I wasn't expecting that. You're much too kind, honestly."

The applause dies after a moment, and Mami speaks once more, again in firm, professional tones. Signifying that it's business time once again.

"Well, in any case, let's begin, shall we?" You feel Mami's warm touch once more, through your Magical Girl costume, as she places one hand on your arm. "Wendy-san, do you want to say anything to start us off?"

Wendy blinks here, with the same kind of surprise that a student may have when being called on out of the blue - before nodding. Clearing her throat briefly before speaking.

"On behalf of the Church of the Golden Land, I, Apostle Wendy Cooldown, thank the Ninth Officio Assassinorum and her Warmaster for granting us audience in the midst of such turbulent times." Her voice is wooden, stiff, as if speaking from rote memory. She probably is. "We pray for the Blessed Lady to look upon your Officio and bestow her grace upon you and those under your command." She finishes with a wince, as if the words themselves physically hurt.

"Thank you, Wendy-san." Wendy-san. Not Apostle Wendy, not Miss Cooldown. Wendy-san. You'll note that as you watch Mami turn towards you once more, the smile still on her face. "How about you, Chiaki-san?"

Yeah, not really. So far as anybody else is aware, we know nothing about Wendy. We're a blank slate. Why would anybody feel compelled to tell Chiaki Matsuda about Wendy Cooldown? It's not like anyone's been forthcoming with anything so trying to make a scene here would just reveal that Chiaki is more aware than people give her credit for.

Personally, I prefer to say only what's needed and keep things close to the chest. It makes people underestimate Chiaki and that element of surprise is what makes her a dangerous Homu.

So long as people keep their big mouth shut, that is

I sorta agree but also disagree.

Mami does seem to view Chiaki and Murderface as different people, and arguably that viewpoint is quiet justified in that Chiaki does act totally different from Murderface.

However, Wendy probably does not feel that way. The proper thing for Mami to do would have been to warn that Wendy and Murderface were together. Even if Chiaki is no longer Murderface, that does not mean Wendy won't be emotionally compromised by all of this.

And thats the kind of thing Mami should have warned us about.

Mami did. Kyouko has said before that she's excited that Chiaki is a lot more personable than Murderface. The only one who has repeatedly treated her the same is Sayaka.

The point I'm trying to make here is that trying to bring personal stuff into a negotiation and putting Mami in a rough position of "Why didn't you tell your superior officer?" in public is just going to weaken the position of the Officio.

Again, it's a negotiation. Treat it like one.

Whether its been on mami's or qb's orders people have gone out of their way to not tell chiaki anything about murderface. Mami went the hell out of her way to intercept Wendy and prevent her from meeting chiaki.

I agree the time to ask Mami about it isn't now.
I would argue the time to tell Chiaki was like weeks or however long ago.
Mami might use the distinction between Murderface and Chiaki as seperate people, but that feels like quite a poor excuse.

That works so far as Wendy and Chiaki don't meet. However Mami knew that Wendy would be a part of this meeting. I can accept Mami not telling Chiaki about her past as Murderface before, but in THIS SITUATION, Mami should have informed Chiaki about the thing with Wendy.

I also agree btw that confronting Mami now would be incredibly stupid. Confronting her in privacy after all this and asking why she did not warn us would be pretty justified.

You decide to play the part of the polite Warmaster for now. As much as you're still shellshocked at seeing Wendy in the flesh, well...you haven't forgotten what you're here for, or what you're supposed to be doing here. The subtle weight of the black leather greatcoat draped on your shoulders and the Warmaster Cap on your lap reminding you.

Clearing your own throat as you feel everyone's eyes on you - Wendy's and Mami's especially - you reply with what you think is apt for the situation at hand. Something just as polite, maybe not as dry, but still in line with what they're expecting you to say.

"On behalf of the Ninth Officio Assassinorum and its Incubator, I, Warmaster Chiaki Matsuda, accept the thanks given by the Church of the Golden Land. In turn, I offer my sincere condolences for the loss of so many lives in this tragedy." You pause here, blinking as you suddenly find more to say, the words suddenly popping up in your head. "We mourn their passing of all lost souls, not just those who wore the emblem of the Ninth as they were taken from us. Rest assured, we suffer the Church's loss as keenly as we do our own."

Silence. Just stark, deafening silence in the room, with Mami and Wendy both looking at you with slightly-widened eyes. As if wondering what had gotten into you, the girl who usually went with a snap-shot to the kneecap as an acceptable reply to any conversation.

+ And that one, as they say, is on the house. + Dildoes' cold, smooth voice whispers in your mind, the Golden Desert Eagle nestled in your shoulder holster pulsing warmth for a moment before growing cold again.

...That was her? That...well. That was convenient. You thank her for the boost.

+ This is child's play, Nameless One. + Despite not being able to see her, you can HEAR her doing that annoying flip move with her hair again. + Summon me when something actually important needs to be done. +

"I...um...I see. Thank you, Chiaki-san." Mami replies, obviously taken aback by you suddenly taking the lead in the Dildo Olympics but rallying magnificently. "I'm sure the Church is grateful for our condolences, and feels the same way. Is that correct, Wendy-san?"

More silence, then a nod from your brown-haired ex. "...Yeah. I-I, I mean, of...of course."

The blonde nods, wearing her calming, placating smile once more. "Now, we all know what this meeting is all about, so let's not waste time retreading that. Let's focus on what new information we've found about the attack. Wendy-san, if you please?"

Wendy nods, before turning to the maid to her left - the redhead twin with the amber eyes and the japanese maid uniform. The maid immediately goes into action, efficient and quick, taking what looks like a file from somewhere behind her and holding it out to Wendy with both hands. Wendy takes this file with a nod, glances through it, before placing it on the table between the both of you and sliding it across.

You find yourself glancing at Mami for approval, and she gives her silent blessing with a nod and a smile. With this, you pick up the file and open it - finding a printed picture of what looks like a very burnt, very charred young woman with blue hair and a chinese dress of the same color. Hugging an equally-charred umbrella close to her, as if life depended on it.

"...Miss Tomoe and I found a kid when we were checking out ground zero, couple hours ago." Wendy begins, sounding a bit more relaxed now, yet still obviously tense. "Aki Minaru, Neophyte from the Seventh; seemed like she'd piss herself any second even after we got her out of there. My best guess is she either came in after - not likely, with the state she was in - or she ducked the Culexus, the fire, AND the cops somehow. ...We set her up with a couple of guards in a cheap hotel a district over."

Hm, well... There's nothing wrong with taking notes in a meeting or negotiation. It might raise some eyebrows, probably, but it's not really a faux pas.

It might even be good if it's unexpected; making them think we're pulling out a gun, only to write something in a notebook and then storing it away immediately.

It's not my course of action of choice, but it doesn't and shouldn't raise any red flags.

There's an important point here: one, there nothing unusual about taking notes in a meeting like this. It requires no explanation. Two, bringing up memory problems isn't polite, it's undermining your position. Three, you're Warmaster.

There's a need to be polite, yes, but there's no need to do more than that. If they ask, yes, give an explanation. Otherwise, there's no need to paint a target.

You glance down at the picture of the girl who survived Oriko's attack on the Church - noting, besides her obvious injuries, the look in her eyes. The look that said, pretty much, that she wasn't ever going to be able to sleep properly for the rest of her life. That no amount of counseling or therapy or even alcohol would be able to make her forget just what she saw, just what she lived through.

The look of someone mere moments away from either putting a bullet through their soul gem or turning into an eldritch horror that eats despair and shits suffering.

It's a look you're very familiar with.

Poor kid. She doesn't deserve it. No one does.

Closing the file cover on the printout and placing it back onto the table, it's here that you ask Wendy the questions that come immediately to mind. Two questions - the first being, did Aki Minaru say anything important after she was found, and the second, if there was anything else of note found in ground zero itself.

Bringing out your journal from your inventory as you do so, flipping to the closest empty page and scrawling 'Church Attack' on the uppermost line.

"Yeah, of course." You hear Wendy reply. "When we found her, she kept saying something over and over. We believe it could be something she heard the Culexus say just before she attacked."

You continue writing as you listen. Underneath 'Church Attack', you write certain details about the attack itself that you remember - '100 casualties', 'Kazamino Branch' and 'Red Culexus' to name a few. You circle the last one in particular, and write 'Culprit' underneath the circled word. Underlining the accusation a couple of times for emphasis.

"What was this, Wendy?" Mami asks for you, and you feel her hand on your shoulder again. "What was Aki-san saying over and over?"

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 06/16/14(Mon)12:29:37 No.32821961

>>32821935

"Two words," Wendy returns curtly, now sounding just the slightest bit irritated. Maybe she's taking offense at your note-taking. "'Ahriman Lives'. We have a few ideas as to what that means, but nothing concrete."

...Ahriman. So that confirms that Ahriman's involved in this, it's not all Oriko's fault. You write down her name, then draw an arrow connecting it to another empty space on the sheet, where you then scribble 'Mikuni Oriko' and give it the 'Being Controlled?' subtitle.

"Updated my journal," You murmur to no one in particular.

"...What about Chiaki-san's second question, Wendy-san?" You look up at Wendy just as Mami breaks the sudden silence by positing your next question once more - and it's here that you blink as you realize that the brown-haired American had been staring at you this entire time.

...No, not at you, not directly. At your journal.

"What?" You find yourself asking indignantly. Taking notes isn't weird. Isn't it a proper dildo thing to take notes during a meeting? It is, isn't it?

"Wendy-san?" Mami herself blinks, looking at you, then back at the silent Apostle sitting in front of you. It takes a whispered word from the kimono maid with the amber eyes to snap her out of her little trance - and it's here that Wendy offers you a small, surprisingly warm smile.

"...You always mumble like a jackass when you write, Murderface?" She turns toward her maids. "Whiskey for me and the Warmaster, please. Cigarettes too, when she's done."

The maids nod in unison, moving in dutiful concert like all maids are professionally-trained to do. In mere moments, two crystal glasses of whiskey are placed on the table in front of you, each one poured with care and precision. The one in the maid kimono passes you a single cigarette - well, it's more of a cigarillo, mostly - and the other one lights it for you. They do the same for Wendy a moment later.

"Didn't find anything else either, other than the words 'FUCK THE BLESSED LADY AND HER SHIELDMAIDEN' permanently scorched into the altar wall." The brown-haired girl takes a long drag from her cigarillo, holding it in for a moment before exhaling the smoke off the side. "...We'll be grilling Aki once we're sure it won't make her witch out. In the meantime, she'll be under the Church's protection."

You take a similarly-long drag off your own, holding the cigarillo between your teeth as you continue writing on your journal.

[x]Present your theory in your trademark analytical murmur.
[x]"Our own Prognosticator look into this case. At first glance that this newly formed terrorist cell is the doing of human girl Mikuni Oriko, however my own suspicions are that the true mastermind behind this is a Magical Girl named Ahriman, formerly known as the Warmaster of the Third before engaged and killed by retired former Warmaster of the 9th Ekaterina Valnikov, Malal and.. myself. It appears that Warmaster Ahriman has no intention of staying dead and somehow, probably through the use of her magical staff, gained control of Mikuni Oriko. These suspicions are further confirmed by most of this terrorist cell being made up by former members of the 3rd Officio that had thus far evaded purging after their Officio fell.
Ahriman was a powerful and dangerous magical girl during her lifetime, how far her powers reach beyond the grave is an unknown variable.
Whether the Magical girls in the terror cell are aware that their former warmaster is guiding them once again into their demise is an unknown variable."

Ahrimans Influence over Mikuni Oriko might be broken if somehow negating her staff, retrieving Mikuni Oriko, dead or alive, and thus removing the head of the Serpent in one decisive act. "...Ahriman's dead, Kharn offed her years ago. Everybody knows that." Wendy considers the burning tip of her cigarillo, before taking another deep pull from it. "She left a lot of followers behind, though. Sects scattered around the world. Anyone from the Third that turned tail and lived. Her signature golden staff resurfaced with the Prophet, though, from what Bloodysunday and her girls have told me."

Your ex takes another deep pull, and it's here that the kimono maid steps forward with an ashtray, deftly catching the ashes as Wendy flicks the filter tip of her cigarillo over the side. "Some civvie bitch all in white, or dark blue. Orko something or other."

"Mikuni Oriko," The western maid interjects with a quiet voice, and the brown-haired Apostle nods.

"...Anyway, those golden things are all kinds of bad mojo. Everyone knows that too." You see Wendy wince slightly at this, before reaching up with one hand to rub a spot on her neck hidden underneath her scarf. "Probably has something to do with that, or Orko marketing herself as the next Ahriman to get more followers. Maybe both. That's my take on it."

Well. So they know about the golden weapon in Oriko's possession, then. More than that, they know that Mikuni Oriko's the Prophet. That's...well, that complicates things, but not by much. She would've found out anyway, if her Prognosticator was anyone halfway decent.

You just have to make sure that you get to Oriko first before she does. Before anyone from her cult does. Or you'd be explaining to the wrathful ghost in your katana that her ex is about to have a closed casket burial, thanks to YOUR ex.

You write down 'Save Oriko' on the very bottom of the page you've been writing on, and circle it a few times. ...Even if you're just writing it, it sounds like a promise you'll never be able to keep. Like all the rest.

Okay, so, I have a point to bring up here.

If Oriko is being straight up mindwhammied, then okay, yeah, we can try to save her. But if this is Ahriman telling her to do things and her agreeing, or if she let Ahriman in out of a lust for vengeance, then do we still have to save her? Because that would mean she consciously, with informed consent, killed a hundred people in a terrorist attack.

I'm just not big on risking shit going fanwards to save a terrorist bitch, you know?

You pull your cigarette off your lips and reach for your whisky glass with the same hand, still keeping your eyes firmly on what you've just written. You drain your entire glass, the alcohol burning your throat the entire way down.

"...You're on her shit list, too. Not exactly a secret, after the shit at the concert." Wendy suddenly says, apropos of nothing. "Heard some nasty stories about body parts made up to look like Miss Tomoe, too. ...Twenty-four of yours, Kong. A whole lot more of ours. ...You gonna take that?"

Kong. She's calling you Kong, now. That's...that's good, isn't it?

How do you react?

Kingdom of Flies: Into the Wolf's Den

One month had passed since Varrigan disappeared from the map. People had always called it Hell on Earth, sometimes worse, depending on who you asked. The city's crime rates had long since eclipsed even those of Santa Destroy, poverty and unemployment were rampant, corruption ran through the police department, and some parts of the city were in ruins even before what was coming to be known as the Varrigan City Massacre.

Existing gangs had snatched up what territory they could, while new groups sprang up to fill in the gaps. The Wolf Pack, the Rising Sons, the Crimson Dragon Clan, even the old VCPD had started staking their claim. Money had become worthless. Stores and clinics were ransacked, hospitals turned into abattoirs and just about every luxury casino and club had been appropriated by one gang or another.

For years, the district known as 'Casino Land' has been the financial heart of Varrigan. Bright neon lights of casinos reflected off the polished white faces of million dollar condos, but beyond the main strip, Casino Land was little more than an old western film set. The glimmering strip worked to conceal yet more run down tenements and long abandoned buildings.

The far end of the strip terminated at a cluster of three of the most infamous structures in the city: the Blood God's Arena, Saint Filth's General Hospital and the Horzine Biotech Tower. Each building seemed to feed off of each other in a kind of morbid symbiosis. The tower supplied the arena with combatants for gangsters looking for a bit quick cash, which in turn fed the hospital patients who would occasionally 'disappear' in the night.

It was in one of the derelict back streets of Casino Land, under an overcast noon sky, that a young girl walked alone. She walked with confident steps, combat boots crunching against the layers of dust and debris that caked the sidewalks. A frayed burlap shawl draped down to her waist, concealing a battered and torn Horzine security uniform and a sawn-off shotgun held in a lazy grip.

Street thugs and bandits had learned very quickly that a girl walking the streets alone was to be left to herself in the new Varrigan. Most moved through the city at night in small groups. People moved quickly, always armed and never along main streets. Working cars were so rare they might as well have been unicorns. In the middle of the day, anyone could have been fooled into thinking the city was deserted. Of course, they would be dead soon after, shot down by a sniper and had their corpse looted by bandits that seemed to crawl out of the shadows.

The girl walked on, passing buildings that looked as though they had stood through nuclear explosions. Cement slabs and broken glass were piled on the ground in heaps as tall as a man. Graffiti coloured the walls, some old and worn, some fresh and new. Every now and then, she would walk by a building tagged with a black, stylized image of a howling wolf's head.

Every now and again she would see the glint of a scope sighting in on her from a far off window, reminding her that she was never entirely alone. Street signs were broken or defaced, some reading 'WOLF'S STREET'. At least she knew she was in the right place, as if the trail of bodies hanging from rusty lamp posts didn't already say enough.

As she came closer to her destination, she started to see figures hovering in doorways and windows. The people never said anything, never ventured out of the shadows, and certainly didn't point any fingers. They simply stood and watched. With any luck, her quarry would know she was coming.

After what felt like an eternity of walking, she spotted a dilapidated two storey building at the corner of a four-way intersection. Without looking or thinking, she crossed diagonally across the street, oblivious of any potential danger. The first floor of the building was walled with painted cement blocks, the windows blocked with sandbags and any signage having long since been removed. The second floor windows were framed by intricate masonry and only half-blocked with sandbags and debris, with a guard visible in every second window, guns trained on the brazen trespasser.

The girl found her way to a metal side door, flanked by a severed head impaled on what might have once been a wall lamp, and gave it three solid knocks. As she waited for an answer, she couldn't help but notice the mound of decaying bodies piled against the wall, presided over by a cloud of swarming flies.

Within a few seconds, a hatch slid open and a gun barrel protruded into her face.

"Who are ya and whaddaya want?" A voice growled from the other side.

The girl didn't so much as flinch. "My name is Eliza Thorne," she answered. "I'm here to see the Wolf."

Typhus groaned. Her tiny arms squeezed a fluffy white pillow, a trickle of drool wetting the corner against her cheek. She slept in a new bedroom, with a queen-sized bed and an entire wall giving way to enormous windows with heavy curtains. The heavy buzzing of insects never ceased in her presence, even whilst she slept. A bloated, thumb-sized fly landed on her bedside clock, jittering about and wiping its eyes with a fuzzy leg.

+AWAKEN, HOST.+

The little Maerorus turned and murmured unintelligibly, burying her bandaged face in her pillow.

+AWAKEN AT ONCE, HOST.+

A single, tired crimson eye peaked open from beneath her wrappings and fixed on the clock. Slowly, yawning and stretching, pulled herself up. Even at night, she wore her black cloak, the hood pulled down to reveal a short mess of pale hair and a pair of thin, pointed bone nobs protruding an inch above each ear.

"Gooddd morrrning, Dessstroyerrr," the Host hissed.

+DAWN HAS WITHERED. NOON HAS COME,+ replied the Destroyer, its deep voice resounding through Typhus' mind. +WE MUST BREAK OUR FAST.+

Typhus rarely spoke to the Destroyer directly. Their consciousness melded into one on most occassions, but in the stillness of her bedroom, even the witch buried inside of her was welcome company. At the edge of her mind, she could feel the many smaller organisms of the Destroyer Hive spread through out the Horzine tower, from the tiniest flies to the servile zombie guards.

With the Host finally awakened, a servant shoved its way through the door and shambled into the room, bringing with it an elegantly plated breakfast on a tray. Typhus reflexively pulled on her hood as it set the tray down on her lap beforing shambling back out. Orange juice, toast, scrambled eggs and a meat that Typhus couldn't quite identify...

+PIGEON FLESH,+ the Destroyer clarified, sensing her confusion.

>> ☐ archivalfag 06/16/14(Mon)14:48:58 No.32824351

Typhus took a drink of the orange juice, careful to tip her head back to keep it from dribbling through her cheeks. She wrinkled her nose as she tasted it murmuring, "It hasss pulppp..."

+WE SHALL GROW STRONGER FOR IT.+

"Buttt weee don'ttt liiike ittt..."

+CONSUME THE LIFE FLUIDS AT ONCE.+

Begrudgingly, Typhus obeyed. As she took a first bite of toast, her eyes lit up.

"Honnneeeyyy!" Her excited squeal came out as more of a strained wheeze, prompting a short fit of coughing.

+EXPRESS JOY IN MODERATION, HOST.+

The Maerorus gleefully wolfed down the honey toast with as much haste as she could muster - which, admittedly, wasn't terribly hasty at all. The scrambled eggs and meat were obliterated next, with destroyer flies flitting out from under her wrappings to bring smaller pieces directly to the hive.

"Wherrre isss sssissssterrrr Thhhornnne?" Typhus asked between forkfuls.

+SHE SEEKS TO COMMUNE WITH ANOTHER OF OUR SISTERS.+

The tiny reaper nodded slowly, not quite understanding, but accepting. She pushed herself to the edge of the bed and stretched out a pale hand. At once, a torrent of hundreds of thousands of flies flowed out from her sleave, propelled outward like a firehose spewing black water. The flies buzzed in circles as they slowly grouped together, forming an indistinct, towering mass of tiny writhing bodies in Typhus' hands. They packed together tighter and tighter until - with a wooshing noise and a flicker of light - the enormous, grime-coated scythe called Manreaper appeared in their place.

Typhus put her weight on the scythe as she pulled herself off of the bed. A handful of stray flies circled through the air before disappearing under her cloak. The reaper walked with unsteady steps, leaning against the gargantuan weapon as though it were a simple walking stick.

+WE ARE FRAIL,+ the Destroyer's voice echoed in her head. +REMAIN HERE.+

The Maerorus paused, her eyes wandering to the floor. "We mussst go to the bathrrroommm..."

The Destroyer was silent for a moment, until Typhus finally sensed an affirmative reaction.

+REMEMBER TO BRUSH OUR TEETH.+

Thorne found herself being led up an old wooden staircase, the steps creaking with every footfall. The halls were much more claustrophobic than she had expected from the outside. The tops and bottoms of the walls bore clean strips where wooden moldings had been torn away, likely for firewood.

The man guiding her wore a haphazard mix of body armour; a helmet from the Arena, a vest from Horzine and pieces of scrap metal duct taped to his arms and legs. He rested a shotgun over one shoulder as he led the way, clearly not sensing much danger from the black-haired girl.

Eventually, the halls opened into the true Wolf's Den. The building had once been a dance hall, some two or three decades previous. Now, the dance floor was converted to a den of filth. Debris and rubble was stilled scattered about the floor, though, a good portion of it had been pushed up against the walls. A gaping hole in ceiling let sunlight in, while candles and torches did the rest of the work.

Tables were scattered about, hosting roughly a dozen men. A game of poker was being played at one, a lap dance at another. A trio of scruffy musicians played a disjointed jazz tune in a corner of the room, instead of on stage.

It was there, on the stage, lounging on a beaten up old couch and gnawing on a severed arm, that Thorne found her quarry. The Wolf locked eyes with the black-haired girl, and flashed a predatory grin.

"EVERYONE OUT!"

The Wolf roared, and the rats obeyed. Very shortly, not a soul was left in the room aside from the two Maerorus. The wolf tore off a strip of flesh from her snack and gulped it down before tossing the arm aside. She pushed herself up, effortlessly yanking a machete the size of a man's arm out of the wooden stage as she made her way down to the dance floor.

"Lizzy," the Wolf laughed, showing off her sharpened canines. "Long time no see."

Her hair was long and wavy, the colour seeming to shimmer between red and violent as the lighting changed. The Wolf wore a black leather jacket - unzipped with absolutely nothing underneath - and a matching pair of pants with the fly undone. What looked like braces were worn over her elbows and knees. Over her ears, she wore a device that looked to be the bastard child of a pair of headphones and an eggtimer, held on with a headband and a chinstrap. Strangest of all were the pair of stitched seams ran horizontally across her face and neck. Thorne would have recognized her anywhere.

"Gavrill," she said, forcing something of a smile to her face.

Thorne wasn't tall to begin with, but the other woman positively dwarfed her as she approached. The former security officer wagered she was at least six and a half feet, maybe closer to seven.

The former security officer stayed relaxed and still as the elder Madaraki circled around her, eyes glancing up and down, nose constantly sniffing at the air. Without warning, Gavrill stepped up behind Thorne and pressed her nose against the girl's ebony hair, groaning with satisfaction as she took a long, deep whiff.

"Damn, Lizzy. You smell gooood," the Wolf sighed, slowly licking her lips.

Thorne turned sharply, but the taller woman spoke again before she could open her mouth.

"You have shampoo," Gavrill muttered, stepping in front of the black-haired girl. "Good quality, too... Strawberry?"

>> ☐ archivalfag 06/16/14(Mon)14:52:36 No.32824410

Thorne stayed silent, her face forming an impassive look teetering on the edge of becoming a scowl.

"I'd kill a man for some good shampoo these days..."

"Or anything else, I'd say."

Gavrill snickered and stepped around her again, this time pulling the stubby shotgun from Thorne's hand as her enormous machete vanished into thin air. She opened the breech, checking to see if it was loaded, then snapped it shut again.

"Funny, Lizzy," she said, turning the weapon over in her hands, "always thought of you as more of a rifle kind of gal."

"I'm adaptable."

The Wolf snorted. "Never been one for guns, but I always liked a good sawed-off. You know what they call these in Italy?"

"What?" Thorne asked, humouring the woman.

"'Lupara'," Gavrill answered. "It means 'for wolves'. As in, 'for HUNTING wolves'."

There was a flurry of movement, and Thorne suddenly found the barrel of the shotgun uncomfortably close to her skull.

"You looking to do some wolf hunting today, Lizzy?"

Without flinching, Thorne replied, "Of a sort."

Gavrill let out a sharp bark of laughter. "That's what I always liked about you, Lizzy!" She said, waving the gun a bit more threateningly than Thorne would have liked. "Show no fear! But... Hnnh. But old Gavrill can smell it on you..."

The Wolf took another long sniff as she paced around Thorne a third time, showing little regard for personal space. Her lips twitched as she did, flashing slivers of pearly white canines. Thorne could hear the sickening sound of Gavrill's tongue running over her teeth. The taller Maerorus shook and groaned as a powerful tingling ran up her spine.

"You're drooling," the black-haired girl remarked.

Gavrill growled and wiped the trickle of saliva with her sleave, her grin fading as she did. "So what can I do for you today? Come to join the pack?"

>> ☐ archivalfag 06/16/14(Mon)14:53:54 No.32824421

"Not quite," Thorne replied. She cocked her head at one of the vacated tables. "Why don't we sit down? I have a proposition to discuss."

"A proposition? Oh boy, haven't had one of those lately," the stitched Maerorus found her way to a recently vacated chair, then leaned back and kicked her feet up on to the table. She still held the gun in a weak grip, letting it clang against the chair leg. "So what do you want?"

The security officer took a seat, unable to keep her eyes from darting to the weapon every now and again. "I've gotten myself into a bit of a," she started, pausing to find her words, "situation. I need your help."

"Go on."

"Have you been to the tower lately?"

"Not personally. I make a point to avoid it, but I've been hearing some mighty strange stories. Boys say it's infested with-"

"Zombies."

Gavrill smiled, making a point to bare her teeth. "You've been there?"

"I live there," Thorne laughed. "Does the name Typhus mean anything to you?"

"The disease?"

"The Maerorus."

"Never heard of her."

"I was afraid of that." The black-haired girl sighed and ran a hand through her hair, showing off her scars and milky right eye. "She was the second most recent attempt. The most successful, too."

"And... what? She makes zombies?"

Thorne nodded. "And alot more, but she's just a kid. She doesn't understand any of this. She- She WORSHIPS the Doctor and thinks I'm some kind of big sister. And," she groaned, "I kind of... promised to help her take care of the city."

"Hnnh," Gavrill grunted as she thought. "And you want my help?"

"You're a Madaraki. You're smart. You know science. Medicine. Things we need."

>> ☐ archivalfag 06/16/14(Mon)14:55:04 No.32824444

"I can take people apart and put them back together, I understand that much," the Wolf said, "but I'm seeing a problem here. What happens when this... 'Typhus' or whatever the fuck her name is suddenly decides she wants the city all to herself. You make it sound like she could kill us like we're ants or somethin'. "

"She's just a kid, Gavrill. We just need to take care of her and help her make the right decisions."

"Kids GROW UP, Lizzy," the larger Maerorus growled, her lips curling into a snarl as her feet dropped to the ground. "I won't make that mistake again. Take it from me. Sure, she calls you 'big sister' today. You try to protect her, take care of her and bring her up right, but sisters just- They- Hnnngh-"

"Gav-"

Gavrill's fists clenched, her knuckles blanching. Muscles in her face twitched and dance as she fought back the searing, singing pain in her skull. "Sisters- Hnh. Sisters get you FUCKED."

"You stand only to gain from this," Thorne said, a dour look on her face. "Don't let old grudges get the better of you. You're letting the Nails put words in your mouth."

The taller Maerorus grunted and rose from her seat, slapping Thorne's shotgun down on the table as she did. A giant machete appeared in either of her hands as she paced around the room. Even from a distance, Thorne could make out minute muscle spasms in the elder Madaraki's face and arms as she fought back the killing urge of the Butcher's Nails.

Gavrill Madaraki had been the first of many to receive the malignant surgical enhancements - and the sole survivor of the operation prior to Ekaterina Valnikov. The Doctor had once explained the procedure to Thorne, but, as usual, the finer details were lost on the primordial Maerorus. The Nails were complex instruments; lodged just above the ears and penetrating six inches into the brain, they controlled any number of functions, all designed to promote and reward violent rage.

However, as the Doctor soon realized, promoting aggression had the unfortunate side-effect of making subjects all the harder to control, especially when said subjects were designed to be capable of single-handedly wiping out entire Officios. The experiments were halted after the Doctor was forced to put down several perfectly good Maerorus. After the tragedy that was Typhus, she rethought the procedure's physical standards and began to formulate a new variant of the Butcher's Nails. Less invasive, less potent, easier to command.

The damage to Gavrill Madaraki, however, had long since been done.

The stitched girl turned her head to face Thorne at long last. As she spoke, Thorne could hear the withheld rage tainting her words. "Two conditions," Gavrill stated. "First, I want the arena. My territory, no strings attached."

"Done. Not like there's much competition. The second?"

"The second. Hrnnh," Gavrill's lip twitched into a snarling grin. "Someday, and I don't know when, I'm going to hunt down that bitch sister of mine. It might be a month from now, it might be years. I don't know. But someday, I'm going to want my revenge and I want you and the rest of this city at my back when I do."

Thorne thought for a moment, getting up and taking her shotgun as she did. "Assuming we haven't killed each other by then," she said, trying to match the Wolf's predatory expression, "I think we have a deal."

And that's all for the second chapter of Kingdom of Flies! I hope you enjoyed it!

I've about had it with this too. It's pretty clear that Mami's playing her own game and has a Hell of a lot of personal power.

And we're mooning on about our "personal blonde victory goddess" when we should have started getting suspicious a long time ago.

Hell, she all but set us up on Kirilia's retirement, by warning her. And we fucking apologized to her. After she told the psycho we were coming.

While I generally agree with your point, this is a pretty poor direction to attack. Sayaka and Mami are friends, with Sayaka admiring Mami and believing her to be a great decision-maker, so listening to Mami's advice on what, to her, must seem mainly a PRIVATE and not officio matter seems entirely reasonable to me.

It's better to think of it as Mami sharing the role of Warmaster with Chiaki, taking the parts of the job - like attending more personally to Coobie and his direction - that she doesn't think Chiaki will have the patience for. Of course, she still thinks of Chiaki as her Warmaster, and will happily defer to her while offering advice.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/20/14(Fri)08:53:03 No.32895699

You shake your head. No. Oriko's not the one Wendy's group - or anyone else, really - should be gunning for. She's being controlled.

You glare down at your empty whiskey glass, wishing faintly that it still had more of the amber liquid in it. Wendy seems to catch on immediately, however, and it's with a nod of her head that the amber-eyed, kimono-clad maid moves forward to give you a refill with a smile.

A murmured thanks and a careful sip later, you continue. It's that golden stick of Oriko's that's responsible for everything, you say. Get it away from Oriko, no more Prophet, no more of this body part-mailing, church-bombing terrorist bullshit.

Without the staff, Oriko becomes just another harmless civilian.

She doesn't need to die.

This is you trying to change. This is you trying to keep a promise.

Somehow, it feels like you're just trying to delay the inevitable.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/20/14(Fri)08:53:37 No.32895708

You watch as Wendy drains her own glass, before motioning for a refill herself. "...So priority one is getting the bitch stick away. Sure, I can buy that. Why not. Plays along with the 'Golden Weapons are bad news' theory." She hunches over in her seat and stares hard at you, a stare that you have no trouble returning if not for the fact that her pose emphasizes her...assets a bit. "You got a plan? Because it sounds to me like you're planning on hanging around a psychopath that wants you dead on the offchance you might be able to save her."

You nod. Yeah, you have a plan, you tell her as you yourself lean forward.

You have your best Prognosticator on the job devoted on pinpointing Oriko's exact location, assisted with the Officio's remaining Culexus - not to mention one of the assassins you've captured have been responding well to interrogation. Once Oriko's exact location is found, you attack. A strike force of you and your best to nip this problem in the bud. Purge her entire group of cultists or whoever puts up a resistance. And then once you have her cornered, then...

"Then?" Wendy prompts you, now having leaned back on her chair, swirling her glass of whiskey around.

Then you try to talk Oriko out of making a fool of herself, you finish a bit lamely.

Silence, before Wendy lets out what sounds like a chuckle. "'I'll just wing it once we get to the bitch with the evil weapon' is the plan. ...So what are you gonna do if she's not possessed and just hates you?"

It's here that Kyoko lets out a small cough from behind you, and you allow yourself a small smirk before taking another sip from your drink.

You'll try harder, you tell her. But if Oriko's really too far gone, then she dies. ...Oh, and the bitch stick ends up in the possession of the Ninth.

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 06/20/14(Fri)08:54:52 No.32895717

>>32895708

The ghost of a smile flickers past Wendy's lips. "You sure you're not an Eversor, Kong? That sounds like an Eversor plan." Smiling around her cigarette, she drains her refilled drink, places it back on the table, and then flicks the half-finished stick into the empty crystal. "Fine. Let's say we're okay with everything and go with what you want. ...What makes you think you can ever talk her down?"

You return her smile with one of your own. This...this feels like talking to the old Wendy you half-remember. It's nostalgic, somehow.

...She'd think you were crazy if you told her, you murmur.

"If you've got any plan at all, kong, I'd think you're fucking crazy. I haven't exactly had a whole lot of luck talking those golden weapon fuckers down myself."

It seems Wendy is asking about your plan to save Oriko.

How do you respond?

[]...Kirika. Kirika's in one of the Golden Weapons I've got locked away. I bring it to her, and maybe...
[]I'm still working on it, but I think it has a good chance of working.

Wendy's small smile suddenly fades, replaced by her usual sullen look. A smoke-tinted sigh leaves her lips, and she shakes her head gently, before reaching up to adjust her scarf again.

"...If you don't have a plan, Kong, just say it." Her voice is even, controlled, but it has the slightest undertone of someone trying to be cautiously optimistic despite seeing evidence to the contrary. "We'll figure something out, but I'm not here so we can play with each others' dicks."

Wendy leans forward again, her brow furrowing. "The Church's interests and the Ninth's line up right now, and we want your support in taking down the Prophet. Conversely, any support we can give, we will, too. But I can't report back to the High Priestess - and shit, I wouldn't go along with it either - if all you'll give me is 'I totally have a plan, no, really, it's such a good plan'."

She pauses here, before adding, "I need to know more. I need to know you're not planning on...Murderfacing your way through this."

How do you respond?

[]You'll just have to take my word for it, as Warmaster of the Ninth Officio.
[]Relent, tell her about Kirika. ...If you're going to trust each other, you might as well tell her what you plan to do.

They sent "heavily stealthed" C-5 Galaxies (never mind that such a thing isn't possible, you'd have to redesign the whole frame and dedicated stealth aircraft themselves with special coatings only prevent their BRAA from being pinpointed, not totally invisible) right on top of the objective for them to get shot down by SAMs with thermobaric explosives. Yeah but you're on the internet in some sort of nerd-cave where autists jerk off over wide-eyed anniemay grills and suffering. Expecting actual military knowledge is, well, in the existance of nerds who are interested in that shit udnerstandable but maybe a bit generous.

Because there's an officio going around killing everyone who disagrees with the status quo and kills them on the bais that "their actions could lead to war", however an Incubator defines that in the first place.

If that isn't the most balls-out straight opression I could think of I don't know what is. The only reason this excuse of a storytelling device works in the first place is because it's used on the Middle East, an area we are all long used to equate with the thinking method "lets kill a load of people and get involved in matters that aren't our business in the slightest with the excuse it will bring peace in the end".

What's the next plot twist, the 16th fakes proof of weapons of mass destruction and instigates an invasion from the World Police Force? This reads like Iraq War: Magic Edition.

...Fine. Sure. You'll tell her about...what you've got that can help with Oriko.

But can you tell her in private? It's not something you'd like to...get out there, as it is. Warmaster stuff and all that.

Wendy stares at you silently for a moment, and it's here that you see her eyes flick towards Mami's direction - and in your peripheral vision, you see the blonde nod once.

"...Yeah." Your brown-haired ex murmurs, surprisingly in almost docile agreement. It's here, then, that her cheeks very slightly turning a shade of pink, despite her expression never even changing the slightest bit. It's...cute, in a way. "You...you wanna use the bedroom, or...?"

You hear someone choke behind you. ...Midori, it sounds like.

...Bedroom? What?

"...Get your mind out of the gutter. Christ." Wendy frowns, despite her blush deepening. "It's that or the bathroom, and it's...I don't know. The bathroom would be weird."

Just talk and nothing else?

"Of course, dammit!"

Where do you want to have the private talk with Wendy?

Asking subordinates to leave while the leaders discuss top-level shit is standard practice. It puts no-one out because THAT IS HOW SHIT WORKS IN HIGH-LEVEL DISCUSSIONS AND THEY KNOW IT.

Bedroom, then. You choose the bedroom to have your private talk with Wendy.

"...Yeah. Okay." Wendy nods, and you see her eyes flicker towards Mami again, before going back to you. A lone drop of sweat trickling down her cheek. "Just...just to have everything squared away security-wise, let's have someone guard the door to the bedroom. ...Amber and Sayaka alright with you, Kong?"

One of her maids and your Equerry? You turn back towards Sayaka, the blue-haired Eversor's face carefully impassive. She nods curtly as you catch her eye, one hand tapping at the handle of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie for emphasis. You give her a nod of your own, before turning back to Wendy.

...Yeah, sure. Why not.

"Right." It's here that Wendy stands up from her seat, making her way towards the bedroom and stepping through the threshold without so much as stopping to look at you. You make to follow suit just as Amber Nakajima, the maid in the kimono, takes up position beside the bedroom entrance - but something tugs at your sleeve. A hand. Midori's.

"S-sempai..."

You turn to look at her, blinking at her quietly-despairing expression.

What? It's nothing to worry about. You're just going to talk with Wendy in private.

"I...I know, but..." Midori seems to be holding back something, but at the same time desperately wants to blurt it out. "It's...she's..."

"She's someone from Chiaki's past, Midori-san," Mami's honeyed voice speaks beside you, and it's here that you see the blonde place a hand on the one your Callidus is using to hold you back. "And yes, they have a history, as you've probably surmised. But they're just going to talk. Both Wendy and Chiaki are being as professional as they can be, and so, any unprofessional behavior is completely out of the question." Mami turns to smile at you, brightly. "Am I right, Chiaki-san?"

...Yeah. Yeah, of course. You nod at Midori, forcing a smile. Exactly. She doesn't need to worry.

A few painfully-long moments later, and it's here that your green-haired Callidus finally lets go of your sleeve. Kyoko, your best friend for ever, seriously, takes this opportunity to swoop in and lead Midori away from you, Mami following close behind. "Haaah, yer gettin' too paranoid yerself, Midorin! They're not going to do anything but frown an' scowl at each other, you'll see!"

"I...I guess..." You hear Midori stammer, and you see her throw you one last glance before allowing Kyoko to shepherd her to a far corner of the room. You make to follow her, but find yourself suddenly being pushed towards the bedroom by none other than Sayaka.

"Bedroom's over here, Murderface, not there," Sayaka chirps brightly, pushing you along by your shoulders. You find yourself unable to protest, or even to stop. You'd probably carve twin furrows into the shag carpet if you dug your heels down.

But what about Midori--

"Midori's a big girl, and Kyoko's on the case. Stop worrying and do your job, okay? You're Warmaster now, act like it." She shoves your hat into your hand. Seems like you've left it in your chair. "Come on. I'll just be outside, so scream bloody murder if you need anything. Or shoot a whole lot. I'll charge in swinging."

Before you could reply, you find yourself shoved into the bedroom proper, the door closing behind you. ...It's a big, comfy bedroom, with a bed big enough to sleep six, most probably. You step forward and press down on the mattress with a hand. ...Memory foam. Swanky.

"...Good for nothing."

Your eyes widen in alarm, feeling your heart immediately skip a beat, a dagger of ice stabbing into your spine - and you whirl to face the direction where the sickeningly-familiar insult came from, expecting bright blue eyes and a cresent slit from a mouth. No, it didn't come from a shadowy corner, but rather from the brown-haired girl leaning on the bedroom wall farthest from you, her arms crossed under her chest, a fresh cigarette lit and held between her lips.

What did she call you? How...?

Something dark and square flies towards you, and you catch it by reflex. ...It's a slightly-squashed pack of Marlboro's.

"...It's hovering around you. Been hearing it since you walked in. ...You, uh...had a rough night, I guess?" Wendy shrugs. "Dreams, remember? I do dream stuff."

...Right. Yeah. You glance at the pack of cigarettes, before nodding at her in thanks.

A flick of your zippo, a puff of smoke, and you toss the pack back to its owner, taking a seat on the bed yourself. ...Comfy, but not as comfy as your chair.

"...Alright." Wendy breaks the silence a moment later, after the both of you had settled down. "So what's your awesome plan you can't tell the crazy cult bitches about?"

How do you start explaining Kirika how she's inside the XX Golden Weapon?

Explain that Ahriman is probably using Kirikas death to manipulate Oriko. Then explain that Kirika actually is still alive and her soul is trapped in the GW, and that Kirika can probably talk Oriko down.

Wendy cannot exactly complain, considering she herself apparently came back from the dead.

She knows about GW so we can tell her we know about them too, and say we know they can comunicate with people, so we tell her Kirika is inside the sword and that she will help us get Oriko stop being a bitch.

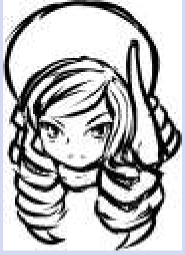
Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam and Magical Assassin Wendy Cooldown

Today is a good day. And not just because it's a lazy Saturday afternoon.



The last couple weeks weren't so great, though. Fuckface kept popping in during my lunch breaks with these weird questions. I only allowed it at first because she brought food, but when I cut my mouth trying to swallow tomato soup with powdered glass in it, I wouldn't touch anything she gave me. Not even cake and ice cream.

It was really annoying, having to answer her retarded inquiries. And she kept shoving her own opinion into them. She'd ask where I came from, then blurt out that she grew up in Japan after moving from the States. Fuckface really loved to talk about herself, and ended up chatting through my break.

So she came back tomorrow with the same question. I said California and she went away.

She barged in again the next day and asked what I liked, then made the same mistake as before. The day after, I told her video games and sweet things, and she yelled something about using money from her giant robot fund. Later that night, I found a big new television in my room that didn't have the right connectors for the game console. The sentiment was nice, but what the fuck am I gonna do with it?

At this point she started keeping her answers brief. When she asked how I'd hope to die - who asks that sort of thing? - Fuckface exclaimed she wanted to explode into hellfire that kills two Walpurgisnachts at the same time. Checkers informed me later that such a thing is beyond impossible, and fucking retarded.

My response : "Painlessly, and soon". Shut her right up.

Last I saw her was Thursday, where she asked what I wanted. Other than her going away, I informed her that what I'd like is for everything to stop sucking. To never have to do any of this secretary bullshit ever again.

Yesterday was a good day, too. And not just because Fuckface didn't bug me.

Because Checkers finally came to visit!

Well, her and some other people as part of goodwill talks or something. I think one of them was the Warmaster? She was kind of loud, but she brought me this really good apple pie.

Checkers volunteered to keep watch over me or something like that. She said she was ducking out of having to take part in the negotiations. Totally understandable.

I'd never had a real slumber party before, and I don't think Checkers had, either, but I imagine it would be something like what we did last night. We had a pizza delivered to my room, and it didn't have any trace of whatever Fuckface put on the stuff she tried to force on me. There was only the cheese. So much goddamn cheese! We skipped pillowfighting due to lack of a good bed for it, and because Checkers said the Eversors around here could probably smell a battle from fifty feet away. "And you don't pillow fight with Eversors, kid," was her sage advice on the matter. "They'll shove their weapons in the damn thing." So none of that, then.

And Checkers brought the adapter for the television like she promised, and a controller to replace the one Fuckface broke, -and- some titles I hadn't played before. That meant not just video games, but two player M-rated video games with Checkers! It was a bloody good time, and the content restricted stuff was everything I'd hoped it would be.

And after that I tried styling her hair while she talked about her assignments and assassinations. It sounded scary, but they sounded like bad people. As it turns out, I'm not very good at styling hair, and after a few swears from Checkers, settled on leaving it undone until she bothered to put it back into pigtails. She assured me she wasn't mad, so everything was okay.

And now we're lazing the day away in bed, because we were up allll night. Which is fine. It's definitely fine. The important thing is that before the day ends I'll be out of here.

Heehee... So long Australia, I'm almost gonna miss you.

My heart almost jumped out of my chest when I heard the knock on the door. Checkers was the first one to respond, growling "It's not locked."

The door was thrown open, and Checkers groaned, "Oh, it's Crazy Cunt."

That can only mean one person. I immediately retreated back beneath the covers and hoped she didn't notice me. Not her. Not here. Not now. Please just go away, you'll ruin everything.

"Cooldowwwwn!" Fuckface cried out, "Why? Why do you cower in the dank darkness while the sun is out and I'm about? Why do you not SEIZE the day and make it YOURS?" WHY is she here? "And I don't believe those are your pajamas." They were new ones from when we went shopping earlier, fuck you.

Checkers grumbles sleepily, "The day's already mine. In here. What do you want?"

"A GIIIIIANT FIGHTING ROBOT, WITH LASERS AND MISSILES AN-" What the hell is she even talking about? "Oh, at this moment? I saw the door was closed and deduced Slam was still sleeping soundly. Why're -you- here?" That doesn't explain anything. I curl into a fetal position and will her to leave.

"Maybe she's dead. Or she left." Checkers continues to distract Fuckface from finding me, stating, "...And I WAS sleeping you crazy whore."

But Fuckface is persistent. "That is simply NOT POSSIBLE, or else the seal I -painstakingly- placed on her door last night would be BROKEN."

What?

"The fuck are you talking about?" mutters Checkers.

Fuckface stomps on over, declaring, "No time! I must find her, and YOU are coming with me!" Wait, don't do that-

I throw off the sheet as I hear them struggling, murmuring, "Leave her alone..."

Checkers looks mad, and whispers, "Dumbshit, I was trying to cover for you."

I whisper right back, "I wouldn't inflict her on anyone." Nobody deserves to be stuck with Fuckface, least of all her.

Grabbing me by the arm, the overeager Fuckface yanks me out of bed, yelling loudly, "COME ON, we're wasting daylight! For we are going on a WITCH HUNT!"

>> ☐ Attarou 06/20/14(Fri)12:58:22 No.32898438

""What? No,"" Checkers and I both deadpan in unison. Fuckface just lost any and all goodwill I might have had towards her. A witch hunt? Going after giant abominations of hate and despair? Fuck this. I don't want any part of it.

"YYYYYESSS!" she exclaims, having none of our objections to her insanity. "The -sheer stress- of a life or death situation will awaken her LATENT POWER, with which she will PULVERIZE the opposition, and earn a FAR BETTER position as an Eversor, and thus a HIGHER STANDARD OF LIVING!" So reasons the asshole hauling us out of the room and off towards certain doom. This is a bad idea that's going to get us all killed. Or at least me; pretty sure Checkers and Fuckface aren't killable. I don't want to be killed. At least I think I don't want to be killed...

"But she's already-stop dragging me," Checkers growls, a kitchen knife manifesting in her hand. I'd be concerned if it was anybody else wielding it, or anybody else on the receiving end. "How the fuck are you so retard strong?!"

And Fuckface... Slows down and comes to a stop? She stopped. She stopped running. She just stopped running.

"Nnnn... FINE!" is our party crasher's response. Her face looks pained, like it contradicts her very nature, but I can feel her grip slack. She's actually letting us go!

Holy crap, Checkers, you're amazing. How did you do that, that was awesome. You got Fuckface to actually listen to you.

"I was told I should attempt to compromise, and so I ACQUIESCE to your demands!" Yes. Yes. Yes! Do that! Acquiesce away! Far, far away from us. Hell, I'll even take you off my shitlist for this, Fuckface. This is turning out to be a good day after-

Nonononononono don't do that! Stop doing that! Don't pick me up! Don't put me on your shoulders! I'm not a child you chicken shit! Let me go! Bad day alert! Code red! Defcon 1! RAISE THE "I'M GONNA FUCKING DIE" ALERT!

"Put me down, put me down, put me down, please put me down now!" I wail, clutching onto her head for dear life. I don't want to fall!

Fuckface, that awful Fuckface, has Checkers in both arms in a princess carry, looking -every bit- the evil villain who is abducting us that she is. Like a goddamn pirate. "And now, it is Crunch Time!" Fuckface declares. "Which to the uninitiated such as yourself means, in this instant, RUNNING AT FULL SPEED AAAAAAHAHAHAHAAA!" FUCK I ALMOST FELL! The bitch runs down the halls and towards a FUCK DON'T YOU DARE DO THAT! DO NOT JUMP OUT THAT WINDOW YOU HORRIBLE FUCKFACE!

Checkers raises her knife and screams, "I SWEAR TO GOD I WILL FIND SOME PART OF YOU I CAN STAB AND I WILL OPEN YOU UP!" She tries to stab at our kidnapper. The knife just dinks against Fuckface's skin without leaving any mark at all. I fucking knew it.

And Captain Fuckface laughs it off, "I CAN'T HEAR YOU OVER MY BLOOD BOILING WITH PASSIOOOOOON!" Your brains are boiling you crazy cunt! Stop and think about this! Or -don't-, since you clearly lack the capacity to do so! Just leave Checkers out of it!

"Put her down pleeeeeease..." I beg, but my plea fails to elicit any response from the crazy bitch.

Checkers looks up at me with indignation and a severe frown, unable to wrench herself free from Fuckface's firm grip on her. "PAPERS," she screeches as Fuckface launches herself through the open window, "HOW IS SHE SO RETARD STRONG?"

"Welcome to my world," I murmur, squeezing my eyes shut as I experience the familiar sensation of hurtling towards the ground.

TODAY WAS SUPPOSED TO BE A -GOOD- DAY!

I can't help but point out that the Mig-21 only has a ferry range of less than 1500 nautical miles unless it wants to carry so much fuel it can't take off. A trip from Singapore to Japan is like 2500nm minimum. So unless they switch planes midflight that's impossible.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/21/14(Sat)09:10:36 No.32917770

You decide to tell it to Wendy straight. No bullshit, no code words, just the plain, honest, direct truth.

"I have Kirika Kure's soul trapped in a sword."

...Well. It sounded a bit better in your head, but there it is. You just told your ex-girlfriend that you have someone else's ex-girlfriend trapped in your golden katana.

Wendy, to her credit, simply gives you the slightest narrowing of her eyes as she continues to burn her cigarette to the filter. "...Okay," she murmurs a moment later, breathing out smoke along with the words. "Okay. So...are you gonna stab her with it, or what? ...Does it talk?"

You shake your head. "It's...it's like a Soul Gem, in a way." You make a cyclical gesture with the hand you're holding your cigarette with, painfully aware how crazy you sound. "You use the sword, you get attached to it. You get attached to it, your soul gets trapped in it when you get taken out."

Yep. All the crazy, all the time.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/21/14(Sat)09:12:01 No.32917777

>>32917770

The brown-haired Apostle nods a moment later, still remarkably lucid despite the conversation you're currently having with her. In fact, it seems like it isn't the strangest shit she'd heard so far. "Yeah. This...uh, the golden one? The one Curry had?"

You nod. It's one of the Golden Weapon things, yeah. Same as the bitch stick making Oriko act like a bat out of hell. "You can talk to the spirit if you let it. ...It can also control you, if you let it. That's why I'm pretty sure Oriko's not herself when she did all that terrorist shit."

And no, you're not going to stab her with it. As much as you can help it. You're going to fight your way through to Oriko, and...force her to talk to Kirika. Something like that.

Wendy's pause before she responds is the longest here, hanging her head low in silence, her hair hiding her face as she continues to smoke her cigarette down to the filter. After what seems like an eternity, she looks up at you, plucking the stick from her lips and tapping the trembling tip of ash onto the carpet. And when she speaks, she does so like every word is costing her dearly to say.

"...Look. I'll go along with this for now, but...you want to save this bitch, right? So you're going to sit and think whatever you need to, that she's not crazy or doesn't want to kill you, or whatever."

She gestures at you with the dying embers of her cigarette. "But people can really go to shit on you, you know? I mean, how well do you even know this Oriko chick?" Another smoke-tinted sigh billows from her lips, and she grinds the spent filter out on the expensively-wallpapered wall behind her. "Because it sounds to me like you retired her girlfriend and she's got a pretty good fucking reason to hate you dead."

How do you respond?

[]Everyone has a pretty good reason to hate me dead. Doesn't mean I shouldn't try.

[]...I promised someone I'd get her back alive, Wendy.
[]What do you think of our chances?

Bringing up promises is a moderately bad idea, which is why I conditioned it with TRY. That might make Wendy more receptive to the idea that Chiaki's a human and allowed to make mistakes and promises she can't keep.

That aside, as the anon I'm quoting mentioned, this is the best opportunity to air that particular issue and come clean.

The crux here is in conditioning the promise line with TRY.

TRY to keep her alive, TRY to make things right.

The problem is everyone playing the quest has a different idea of what the happy end is. My happy end would be saving the world then, shooting NECO in a kneecap and then retiring somewhere quiet with Midori.
But plenty of people aren't playing for that happy end.

Everyone's got a pretty good fucking reason to hate you dead, you tell Wendy with a small shrug of your shoulders. Doesn't mean you shouldn't try.

Wendy stares at you in stone-cold silence, before sighing and letting out what might be a laugh. "...Still so fucking dramatic, Kong." She chuckles again, the sound more a hurried breathing than something of mirth. "Save it for Hanegawa. I bet that shit melts her panties off."

Before you could respond, however, the brown-haired girl that you previously thought a hallucination dreamed up by whatever's left of your jagged, ragged subconscious quirks the corners of her lips up at you. The ghost of a smile flashed at you for a bare fraction of a second. "...Anyway, you got me with 'I can shoot that guy in the head from here'. Not with any of that dramatic superhero stuff." Another pause. "Although...that means Hanegawa's pretty innocent, then, huh? Pure?"

You blink at Wendy again, puzzled and slightly off-guard at the change of subject. ...Midori? You murmur your Callidus' name as you glance towards the bedroom door leading to the outside.

Well, she's...yeah, she's pretty innocent, you agree with a nod. All things considered, she hasn't gone through most of the stuff Magical Girls do at this point of her career. Probably hasn't even killed someone with her bare hands yet. Or tore their face off with her teeth.

You of course don't mention Midori's work as a doujin artist, of course. Or the fact that you just had sex with her last night. Even you know better than to bring that kind of shit up during this kind of meeting.

You shrug again, and humor Wendy like she asked, telling her about how you met Midori. You don't give her the full details, of course, but the main points of it in brief.

"Got hired as idol security." It's...it's a bit strange recounting a memory that seems so long ago. A memoryt that should, by rights, have been forgotten already. Consigned to oblivion. "She was working for the Tenth, hired to help the idol get raped by distracting me with Callidus bullshit. She nearly got me, I shot her kneecaps off. ...Rest's history."

You were waiting for her to laugh again, or chuckle. Maybe even a smirk. She does neither of these things, her eyes merely going wide by the smallest bit, her cheeks getting that pink tinge again.

"...You shot her in the knees and then you hooked up? That's..." She shakes her head. "...That's kinda hot. Seems like you've got a knack for picking up broken goods, Kong. ...Matsuda."

Back to Matsuda, huh?

"Thanks for indulging me, anyway." Wendy pushes off of the wall she'd been leaning on. "...Anything else you need to go over in private? I need to take a few minutes and contact the High Priestess about what we've talked about here. Just to update her on the situation." She sees you looking at her, and her lips settle in her usual frown. "Just broad strokes of what you plan to do. Nothing about...crazy ex-girlfriends in swords, I promise."

How do you respond?

[]...Nothing that we can't talk about later.
[]Wendy? All this time you weren't dead...why didn't you try to reach me? Personally, I mean, not just in my dreams. No one's told me. Not Mami, not Sayaka, not Kyoko.

Heck, that would probably just inspire idiots to vote for the option that instantly kills everyone.

However if we choose a stupid path and keep following that path, I suspect death would happen. Obvious total death immunity and clearly having no negative consequences to repeated stupidity would piss off lots of players too.

Nothing the both of you can't talk about later, after...all this, you tell her after a moment's thought. ...Is she doing anything by then?

Wendy blinks at you, seemingly surprised by your sudden forwardness, before nodding. "After the meeting?...Nothing I can't put off."

Alright. That's good. Maybe...maybe after this, you can get coffee, or something. Something to talk over in private.

"Yeah. That's..." Your brown-haired ex starts, before lapsing into another of her pauses. "...Yeah."

With that settled, you stand up and move over to the door leading out of the bedroom. Rapping your knuckles smartly on the teak as you call out to Sayaka, tellling the Eversor outside that you're stepping out along with Wendy.

Your ex-girlfriend calls out something similar to Nakajima a few moments later, about how the both of you've managed to keep yourselves from killing each other long enough to talk about your 'awesome plan'. Just enough sarcasm in her voice to let you know she's kidding. Somewhat.

The door opens here, and you see that the living room's just as you left it, earlier - with the exception of Kyoko cheerfully chatting with an equally-cheerful Shiraki, the both of them raiding what looks like an open box of sugar-glazed donuts between them. Midori is...well, she'd been sitting on one of the couches set far back across the room, and had immediately stood up when you emerged from the door with Wendy.

...It could just be your imagination, here, but you could swear you saw her eyes narrow at Wendy as they flickered towards her. Just a brief flash of it, before they refocused back onto you.

"How'd it go?" Sayaka is the first to ask you, and you shrug. ...Not too bad, you consider. You haven't tried to kill each other yet.

You hear Nakajima ask the same thing of Wendy, who only continues walking towards the suite's exit. "...Alright, so far. Need to let the High Priestess know."

It's here that your ex barks for the Priestess and her Prognosticator - and both break away from their respective positions to bustle after the brown-haired Apostle. "Ten minutes, Matsuda, and then I'll be right back. ...Grab a bite to eat, or something." Wendy calls, before leaving the suite, closing the door behind her. Leaving your retinue alone inside the room with the twin maids.

Yeah. Sure.

"What did I tell you, Midori-san?" Mami smiles, standing up from her seat as well, following Midori as your Callidus rushes over to you. "Professional, just as I knew they'd be. They don't even look like they've tried to kill each other, either."

"Y-yeah." Midori nods. "But, um...Sempai, she didn't try to hurt you or anything, did she...?"

How do you respond?

When will we tell about the GW soul thing to Midori and Kyoko. Sayaka already knows, but these two need to know about Ahriman and Kirika, and I am pretty sure we never told these two right?

And I really want to see the scene where Kyoko learns that Kirika is stuck as a sword.

This is the type of information a friend would know should be told.

Ofcourse Mami will probably just say that Chiaki did not remember and she did not want to cause Chiaki pain and look miserable and Chiaki will instantly forgive.

Midori is a Callidus and has magically enhanced information analysis abilities.
All she needed was how Wendy and Chiaki looked at each other, slight changes in body language, and she could have gotten that Chiaki and Wendy knew each other, likely in a romantic way.
In no way did Midori act as if she knew Wendy should be dead, only to the apparent fact that Wendy and Chiaki have lingering feelings for each other.

Just because the reasons aren't explicitly stated doesn't mean it's a plot hole.

You blink at Midori, before shaking your head. No, Wendy didn't try to do anything. The both of you just needed to talk in private, and that's all the both of you did. No euphemisms or code words or anything like that, you just talked. Period.

Well, maybe you shared some smokes, but other than that, things were relatively civil.

"...Alright." Midori nods, seemingly relieved, but at the same time it feels like she's not entirely convinced. "I'll...I'll just step out for a bit, then, Sempai. Get some fresh air by the balcony." She gives your hand a squeeze, before leaning in and pressing her lips to your cheek. She immediately bolts after that, leaving you speechless, just as all three of your friends laugh and clap and smile at your embarrassment.

Even the two maids, who seem to be busying themselves with making coffee and putting out new boxes of donuts, seem to be smiling in your behalf as well.

"Well, at least you don't have to worry about that spreading around Chirpee, eh?" Kyoko cackles, half-muffled from a mouth full of donut. You shake your head here, forcing your cheeks to stop burning, before turning to Mami.

...Why couldn't she have told you about Wendy sooner? That she wasn't dead at all? Or better yet, about her? And how come Sayaka or Kyoko never felt telling you either?

The three members of your very small social circle turn to look at each other - well, mostly Kyoko and Sayaka turning to look at Mami - and it's here that the two Eversors speak in unison. "Witch watch."

...Witch watch? What the hell is that?

"Like a suicide watch, Chiaki-san, but...well, concerning more about certain at-risk individuals witching out than committing suicide." Mami explains gently, her expression somber.

Mami explains gently, her expression somber. "After Wendy died and you found out somehow, you...well, you changed. You stopped talking to people. You started forgetting things once more. Worse, your Soul Gem kept darkening at a disturbing rate, something we couldn't stem even with multiple grief seeds." She shakes her head, blonde curles bouncing slightly at the movement. "We were all positive you were going to witch out and take half of the Officio with you in those times."

"You just sat there in your room, Murderface," Sayaka says, crossing her arms under her chest. "Days on end, you just sat there, facing the wall, looking at your shield and cranking it back all the way. Again and again and again. Murmuring Wendy's name." She shakes her head. "Every time you cranked your shield, you looked at it as if it'd bring her back. Never did, but you kept doing it all the same."

"...We didn't really want to have to stick you back into a Silent Room 24/7 after...well, after everything," Kyoko murmurs, looking down at a half-eaten chocolate donut on her lap. "Even Kyuubey was spooked, and said that it probably wouldn't help. Either we...put a bullet in your Soul Gem, or try to get you back up on your feet on our own."

"Witch watch." Mami continues, nodding at Kyoko. "It's a crude term, but describes what we tried to do succinctly. The link between your mental state and Wendy's death was undeniable. So we did our best to get you back out of that shell you've locked yourself into again, while trying to make sure anything that could trigger Chiaki-san witching out is kept out of the picture."

She gestures towards Kyoko and Sayaka. "Don't hold it against them. They didn't keep Wendy from you because of spite, but because they just wanted to help. If you must blame someone..." She takes a deep breath, and then lets it out in a sigh. "...Place the blame squarely on me, Chiaki-san."

"We were actually going to tell you about Wendy, honestly," Sayaka pipes up, having moved next to Kyoko, and was now massaging the red-haired Eversor's bared shoulders.. "After your official ratification. Something to celebrate with. Remember when you asked me about Wendy? On the plane ride back here?" You nod. "That's when we realized that it's probably okay to tell you about her again, since you're remembering her, and...well, you're not something out of a bad acid trip yet. But...well, this happened."

"I realize I should've notified you ahead of time, too, at least...before this meeting." Mami starts again after a moment. "But...I also wanted to show Wendy that you're different, now. How much you've changed for the better." She smiles here, a small, bittersweet one. "I believe she understands now."

How do you respond?

[]I don't...I trusted everyone here. How could you do this to me?
[]...I understand. I'm still a bit...taken aback, but I understand. Is there anything else you're keeping from me?

A few hours before the meeting with Matsuda and her goon squad, I was dealing with the biggest pain in the ass I'd run into since I got back into Mitakihara. Shiraki had called me at fuck you in the morning – hadn't even gone to bed yet – about a crisis that apparently only I could deal with. According to one of the Prognosticators that came with me from the main branch, we'd been attacked during a black mass. A firebombing in Kazamino, apparently, one that nobody walked out of. Powerful shit, something that'd turn anyone else she could think of into a smear.

After the third time she called, I reluctantly agreed to look into it. That's why I was standing outside a police line at fuck-off in the morning, staring down the last embers of what used to be a church. Cops. The fire department. Actual mundy officials cracking down on stuff. Wasn't something we had to deal with much, back home; the cops were there, but not usually until things were definitely all clear.

I wasn't used to worrying about it, though it was probably inevitable; any puella of any importance has a card they can flash that tells the normals 'this is sparkle business, fuck off', and I'd lost my privileges when I died. Or when Annie dragged me into her cult.

…Maybe it'd still work, but I didn't especially want to risk trying. Even more because I wasn't totally sure where I stood with the real Officios around here – Miss Tomoe had a way of keeping you guessing, if she wanted to, and the Tenth would have sold my ass out in a second just to jerk off to the sheer misery it'd cause me and the Eighth. No, instead I was rubbernecking, wondering if it was worth it to be here at all.

…Could have snuck in, but they had personnel inside already, and it was a pain holding onto my ghost effect without falling through the ground or something, and I already knew what I'd find. Maybe some lucky girls would just be bacon with lightly scorched soul gems, but I had a feeling nobody there got that lucky.

I was about ready to suck it up and head inside anyway when I heard a passing motorcycle slow, then wheel into lot. …A Hayabusa. Flawless black with golden highlights, polished to a mirror sheen. Its rider was a curvy woman in pure ebony, and a playful yellow helmet. …It was the first and last person I wanted to see, depending on things.

“Wendy-san!” Miss Tomoe cooed at me as she slid her helmet off, shaking her curled locks out. “I was hoping you might still be here.”

…I didn’t know how much she was involved with the Church, but I figured Kazamino was probably in Ninth territory, too, approximately. Should have guessed it’d be her. I wondered distantly if Matsuda’d show up, too. If she did, I was gone.

…Man, that bike suit had to take like twenty minutes to put on, the way it stuck to her.

“…Wendy-san?” She frowned in her gentle, pouty way. Not the frown you had to look out for. …Well, it was definitely dangerous, but in a different kind of way.

“…Zoned out for a second.” I cleared my throat to try and make my voice something other than a croak.

“I see that.” Her lips tilted into a wry smile. “I know it’s late, but do try not to forget where my face is. I’m sure we’d both be sad if I lost it.”

“…Yeah.” It was hard not to grin. She made me relax a little just by being there. Well, by being there and not half a second from putting me in the ground. …Not that I’d have minded that either, exactly. …It’s complicated.

She turned smoothly, gracefully, and strode toward the officer in charge. She didn’t need to tell me to follow, or maybe she didn’t care. I did anyway – we both needed to see the same thing, and…well. …This was easier. In a lot of ways. It was a matter of a smile and a flash of ID to get her in, and the cops waved me through along with her.

We bumped shoulders with the search team on the way in – they were pulled out when Mami played the sparkly card. All the better; it’d just be forcing us to work around them while we tried to figure out just what the flying fuck happened. Which…as far as I could tell, was all hell.

The place was…well, wet now, but still smoldering. Burnt all to fuck, nothing but charcoal and debris. Firebomb wasn’t the right word for it, a firebomb wasn’t this…intense, and it wouldn’t have…well. It wouldn’t have left a bunch of charred corpses in the pews. It was probably beyond surreal and just as horrifying for those poor rescue motherfuckers in here.

At a glance, most of them probably didn’t realize what had even happened. Just about all of the corpses were still sitting down, some of them were holding hands. Some still had empty soul gem frames pinned or clipped on in places, some had the remains of rings on their fingers. The floor was littered with broken fragments, and they crunched under our boots.

…It wasn’t a sound you’d think about much as a human, but after a while as a puella maga, it only took a broken window or something to hit you in a deep, visceral place. Even Miss Tomoe looked uncomfortable as we eased our way through the chapel.

The big exception seemed to be the preacher. I wracked my brain, trying to remember who aside from Shiraki spoke at these things. Probably somebody in the crowd from…the other day, nobody I’d even recognize offhand. …And I couldn’t recognize her now, poor fucker. She was more ripped apart than anything, scattered around in chunks and grilled.

…Shit. This was making me a little hungry. Should have eaten a bigger dinner or…something. Maybe I could take Miss Tomoe out to a pancake place. I wondered for a second if they had those little diners, like truck stops. I hadn't seen one in Japan, but I figured they probably had trucks here, too, so there had to be like, truck stops. But it was a smaller country…

"Wendy-san? There seems to be a security camera set up." …In a chapel? Something about that struck me as odd, but it wasn't like I'd been to any churches since I was, like, five. "I'm going to see if I can salvage anything, if you wouldn't mind looking around a bit more…?"

"…Sure." No reason not to, and even if there were, she hadn't asked thinking for even a second that I'd say no. …She still gave me that same cool smile with just a hint of sweetness at the edges, despite that. I don't think I thought for a second I'd say no to her, either. She could have told me to stick a chunk of Bacon Burger over there in my mouth and I'd have agreed to it.

Shit dammit shit don't think about food. And don't stare at her ass when she walks away.

…There wasn't a whole lot I could do with the corpses. Nakajima could probably squeeze more information out of 'em – at least an Officio body count, see how pissed off everyone else would be. And that was if Miss Tomoe hadn't called someone in already, though I kinda hoped she hadn't. For a lot of reasons.

…A noise. A flicker of movement among the debris. My knife was in my hand in an instant, and for a second, I half-expected some barbecued corpse to lunge out of the shadows, like some shitty horror film. Instead…

"…Apostle Cooldown…?" A tiny voice, familiar in a nagging way, squeaked out at me through the darkness. …Blue. One of the girls from the Seventh, I think. Somethingko, the one with the umbrella. A pretty aqua blue pretty much all over, the one that seemed to spend half her time shaking like one of those little dogs that piss everywhere and yip all the time. This was no exception. This was the opposite of an exception, she looked like she could barely stand, and I didn't exactly blame her. I tucked my knife away and…

…Well, I hugged the poor kid. …She just…needed it. Even I could tell. She started to bawl, snotted into my shoulder and wet my neck with tears. She might have been trying to tell me a story, but I couldn't make out what she was trying to say. I couldn't figure out how the hell she was still alive. All I could do was pat her back. Stroke her hair. Tell her it was gonna be okay. …Mami could have done it better. I shot a message to Nakajima to get her ass down here and play with some corpses, and that she'd be picking somebody up. And to bring a candy bar for the kid.

Blue could stay with us for now. Jade was good at taking care of people; hell, it was basically what she did all the time. We could get something coherent out of her later, if we could keep her from witching out.

Crunch, crunch, crunch. Miss Tomoe was on her way back already. That was either really good news or really bad news. The noise was enough to startle Blue, and she quietly slipped behind me just as Miss Tomoe came into view.

"Wendy-san? Did you find someone here?" Blue gripped the back of my jacket, right up by my shoulder blades, and I half-glanced back at her.

"Yeah. I don't think she's in any state to talk, though. Already arranged for pickup; we need a Venenum here to check these corpses out anyway, and Nakajima's pretty close." …Thinking about it, Nakajima wasn't someone I wanted to leave anybody alone with. I took a second to send Jade a message, too, to make sure her sister didn't take Blue to her magic torture lab or something.

"…Mm, as long as we can get an accurate number fairly quickly. I need to know what to tell Kyuubey and the Warmaster." Miss Tomoe and Nakajima didn't really care for each other, and it showed just a twinge in Mami's expression. But Amber was the best the Eighth had to offer in…whatever her field was. A quick, accurate number would be easy enough for her.

"Good. I was able to pull together a recording of the events leading up to the fire. Ah, Miss, I'd like to show the Apostle something you may not want to see again, so if you wouldn't mind standing aside…?" Mami smiled her kind, disarming smile, and Blue let me go in an instant, shuffling a few steps away and turning, then turning again, looking for a direction that was a little less corpsey.

…I didn’t like what Mami showed me. I didn’t like it at all. No sound, but it was some Culexus cunt. She just showed up and wiped the place out, all at once, then torched it. Had a message to send. A Culexus that shat fire instead of making people puke, that was all too familiar. The Prophet. The fucking Prophet.

We put off dealing with her and we got fucked for it. I growled out a few choice swears and whirled away from Miss Tomoe, half-prepared to stomp a fucking mudhole in some asses right there. We didn’t have as much intel as we would have liked, but we had enough. We had prognosticators. We had girls – we had better than just girls, we had fanatics. We had people that’d charge in and die trying to rip these fuckers apart without blinking. It was the best revenge force a girl could ask for. All this cult shit had been nothing but a pain up until that moment, but all of a sudden, it was like crazy blood Christmas.

She’d finally, finally fucked with us a little too much. Fucked with me. Fucked with my people. I decided right then and there that I was going to carve her a Glasgow fucking smile, and I was gonna do it today. …Culexus would be tough, but I wasn’t sure my soul gem could even pop like that anymore. Not with Pinkbitch sitting on my shoulder all the time. Prophet herself was just a prop, right? A puppet everyone else masturbated to. That was what I heard. Dead bitches. All of them.

I almost swung at Mami as she placed a hand on my shoulder.

“I know. We’re all upset right now, but we shouldn’t act too rashly. Weren’t you already going to call on the Ninth for help…?” I couldn’t hold it, not completely. Couldn’t keep a firm grip on that burning rage, not with Miss Tomoe there. “I’d like to arrange a meeting - sooner rather than later - and we can discuss it with the Warmaster.”

…I deflated a little and just…nodded. …Yeah. Sure. We’d…talk to Matsuda. …Fucking fantastic. Just what I wanted to do today.

I caught a ride with Miss Tomoe back to the hotel where we’d planned to hold the meeting. It almost reminded me of riding bitch on Schpeltiger back when…well, nevermind. Mami was shorter, wore her helmet, and was…softer to hang onto. …Made it a little hard to feel feminine, y’know? She just…had that effect, made everyone else feel like a clumsy asshole. Even doing stuff like this. Didn’t matter, though, it was nice. The ride back to Mitakihara wasn’t nearly long enough.

She practically pushed me into the shower when we arrived, and I didn’t blame her – we both smelled like bad barbecue. She had a meeting to set up, and I had a few calls I wanted to make, too. Shiraki wanted to be there for the Shieldmaiden, and she was the local branch head. Called up the prognosticators and asked them to send someone, just in case. Nakajima and Jade, too, I…well, I needed somebody I trusted there, aside from Miss Tomoe. Had to make a good impression. Had to put up a good front for the Church’s image, same as dealing with other Officios. Had to show we were strong and united and pissed beyond belief.

…Maybe I just wanted backup, in case things went south.

It didn’t hit me how tired I was until I felt hot water on my skin, and my brain just about shut itself down on the spot. I fell against the tile on the wall and just…rested, for a moment. …Hadn’t slept well, not for a while now. Not that that was new. I still had a handful of sleep aids from…the Christmas before last, but I couldn’t bring myself to use the bottle all the way up. Or maybe I didn’t want to sleep. Fuck if I knew. But the shower, that felt better than anything I could imagine, right then.

…I guess I did fall asleep, because I was jolted awake a few minutes later – I think just a few minutes – by the sound of the shower curtain being pushed aside. My knife was in my hand (which for a split second was kind of ironic), and then it was gone as I caught a glance at flowing, golden hair, curling gently down Miss Tomoe’s shoulders. She gave me a sweet smile, as if this wasn’t strange at all.

…She had a towel wrapped around her body, and it kinda pissed me off.

“I’m sorry for waking you, Wendy-san.” She giggled, and my face burned hot. “We’ll be meeting with the Warmaster in a little over an hour, and I’d like to help you relax. You need to be at your best, after all.” ..Yeah. It was my first time meeting Chiaki Matsuda. First time really meeting her. No bullshit, no…no weird, complicated stuff because I was kind of afraid to see her.

She noticed I was worried immediately, and pressed up against my back, wrapping her arms around my waist. …I felt vulnerable, right then, in…in that way only Miss Tomoe could make you feel vulnerable. In this warm, numbing way that made you want to feel helpless. My dignity and will to resist were sitting out there with my panties. …Still tried to cover up a little, though, and when she noticed, she just giggled.

My hand rested on hers for just a moment before she pulled them both away and slipped her fingers into my hair, running them through wavy, copper-red locks.

“You really need to brush it more often, Wendy-san.” She tut-tutted at me and began to…to do it herself. It was…that was all it took. She didn’t have to do anything dirty, didn't have to speak. Barely had to touch me at all. I could feel her fingers and the brush in my hair, and the fatigue, the tension, the worry…they all melted away.

I had to fight not to laugh as she lathered up my scalp a few minutes later, humming that song she seemed to like so much.
“C’mon, I’m twenty years old, Mami. I can do this. Really…” I didn’t want her to stop. I leaned back against her, and she paused for a second.

“My. I’m only nineteen, you know. Maybe you should be taking care of me by now, Wendy. Or do you always want to be tended to by a younger woman…?” Yeah. I absolutely, totally did. …Guess she’d been doing this kind of thing for me for a long time, though. Not usually in the shower. The swell of her chest squeezed against me as she reached over me to redirect the showerhead, and soap and water flowed over my tired eyes.

…Fucking towel.

“…Hey. If you want to be taken care of…I mean, I’ll do you anytime. …Too. …Do you too. …Anytime.” That went from zero to fuckup in no time. I just snapped my jaw shut and let her rub conditioner into my scalp. She was smiling again, I knew it. Well, she was usually smiling, but this was the ‘Got you on my hook’ smile.

“If you mean you’d like to help me wash my hair, then yes, please. Do me, Wendy Cooldown…~”

Ffffuck.

Fifteen minutes later, we were out and blowdried, and I hadn’t stopped blushing yet. Hairstyling was…fun, actually. When we had time for it. But today, we didn’t. With a gentle golden glow, her hair curled into its trademark drills, and with my own harsh pinpricks of light, mine whipped itself into tight pigtails, tied tight with…little yellow ribbons. I stared for a second, then my eyes flicked over to Miss Tomoe, who’d gone back to humming. She sent me a sidelong glance, and what may have been a smirk.

“There was one other thing…I know you’ll do your best not to make a scene, but I’m still a bit worried about you and Chiaki-san, since she still doesn’t have the best self-control.” Two fingers pointed at me like a little pistol, and a ribbon snaked out from between them and coiled around my neck, tying itself into a small bow in the back. …It was a little tight. It was always a little tight.

“This is just a bit of a reminder. I need you to be as pleasant as you can, Wendy, and I think with a gentle reminder like this, that won’t be a problem for you. Will it…?” She turned back to the mirror without even waiting for an answer.

“No, Miss Tomoe.” I gave one anyway, without even thinking. “…Civil and pleasant. Sure. Even if she pulls a gun on me.” Did she still do that? “Does she still do that?”

Mami paused for a moment, then let out a soft sigh.

“Yes, despite our best efforts. She’s…well, she’s gotten much better, Wendy-san. I’m sorry I have to phrase it like that, I truly am. But she’s still…a bit rough around the edges. You’re still quite a lot alike.” The look she gave me was just shy of pitying. “But I can at least say that the resemblances are in somewhat less…difficult areas, now. For both of you.”

…Great. I had no idea what that meant. Was it…was it about fucking fat girls?

We were all tense as we waited for the Warmaster and her goon squad to show up. I had the prognosticator – Yulia, apparently, but I’d just been calling her Stutters – keep tabs on what she was doing. How many she was bringing. I couldn’t shake the feeling that she was going to walk in itching for a fight, despite Miss Tomoe’s best attempts at calming me down.

“She’s fucking with me. She brought like, everybody that matters but Karasawa, and I wouldn’t be able to detect Karasawa even if she brought her. She’s fucking with me.” I downed my second cup of hot tea, I guess in the past ten minutes or so.

“Isn’t that what you would do, Wendy?” Mami answered coolly, like she always did. “And please, be a bit more gentle with your tea.”

“I’d figure between you, Mickey, and me, we’d probably be good.” My leg kept twitching, and I hunched over in my seat. …Shouldn’t have gone with the red leather jacket. It felt really tight. Between that and the…the ribbon.

“You’d establish an overwatch, or rig the building with explosives.” A gentle suggestion, but a good point. …Bravado was one thing, but it wasn’t usually worth sacrificing prudence. You had to balance them. Shit. We should have rigged the building with explosives. We should have… …Ah. No. This was diplomacy. Just like any other diplomatic mission. Jesus, I was wound tight.

“…Sorry. Been a long night. I mean…you were there,” I mumbled, feeling every bit like a complete asshole.

“Well, we DID take a long shower.” Mami shot me a little smirk, and Nakajima burst into a fit of giggles behind me. Jade just cleared her throat and refilled my teacup.

“Lewd, Wendy. Super lewd,” Amber chirped.

“Terribly lewd,” Jade quietly chimed in. I felt like my face was going to catch on fire. Like all those girls today. …Fuck. I was mad all over again. But I had to suck it up – she was almost here. I heard voices out in the hall, annnd…Showtime.

They absolutely can change, in the event that the new wielder has a stronger...I'd say will than the last one. Since their memories and sense of self erode over time while they're in there, it's not all that difficult for a spirit to get overwritten if a new wielder dies.

Not really a robot.

More like a weapons platform (for the souls of the golden weapons).

> About Aquarion

> The Unification or "Merging" process also combines the souls of the Elements to some degree, as each supplies one of the supposed three aspects of their soul into one when Aquarion is formed.

So if/once she gets strong enough to carry multiple golden weapons [such as deagle + katana w/ bangles equipped] she could combine their abilities/sync all the possessions up?

With the deagle alone she's already on her way to this.

~~Essentially, the body is a robot, Chiaki is a pilot and the golden weapon packs add sub-pilots?~~

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 06/27/14(Fri)10:35:59 No.33040710

You look at Mami, Sayaka and Kyoko each in turn. Three key members of your very small and very exclusive social circle. They'd just admitted that they've been keeping news of your ex being alive from you. ...Actually, no, not even that, they've avoided talking to you about her completely, letting her remain forgotten from your amnesia-wracked memory. The reason? Because...well, because they were worried you'd witch out. Or kill half the Officio. Or both. Probably both.

And while you can't help but feel...taken aback by the deception, you also can't help but see the logic behind it. What the hell were they supposed to do, anyway? Wendy's death obviously affected you to the point of uselessness, your Soul Gem was compromised to the point that purification with Grief Seeds was no longer working. Anyone else - including you - would've gone for the quicker, cleaner, and easier solution of just putting a bullet through your Soul Gem. Or crushing it underfoot.

No more Murderface, no more problem.

>> ☐ Deculture 06/27/14(Fri)10:36:47 No.33040717

>>33040710

But they stuck with you instead. Expended time and energy and resources to get you back into...who you are, now. Ignoring all common sense that you could have snapped at any time and Witched Out without so much as a warning. Mami even got Sayaka into it, the one person you believe wouldn't hesitate for one second to shove a meter of steel into your neck if she thought you were about to explode into a despair-shitting monster.

They stuck with you and hoped for the best, even if they had the chance to go back to their normal lives with just a pull of a trigger.

There's not a lot of people who'd do that for just anyone. Much less for you.

So it's with a bit of a guilty flush, then, that you tell them that you understand. You understand that they did what they had to do, and even if you're still trying to wrap your mind around it - you understand. It's...you're not that upset about it, is what you're trying to get at.

There's a clear, collective sigh of relief from all three of them, Kyoko especially. "See? Told you she'd get it." Sayaka grumbles, patting Kyoko's shoulder. "Murderface's an idiot and a dumbass, but she's not stupid."

...Yeah. Well, even then, you still have to ask. Are they keeping anything else from you, then? Anything else from your past that they're afraid might turn you into something out of a bad LSD trip?

The blonde, the blueberry and the redhead glance at each other. It's Mami who responds. "Of course not, Chiaki-san. It was really just Wendy. She really had an effect on you." She shakes her head, curls bobbing gently with the motion. "Just as you left one on her."

You nod. She...Wendy, how did she feel about...you forgetting, then? About them not telling you about her?

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 06/27/14(Fri)10:37:49 No.33040726

>>33040717

"Anger? Rage? Disbelief? Mostly aimed at me, of course." Mami's smile is a sad one as she turns to look at the door where Wendy had exited the suite from. "Wendy thought I was keeping you from her because I thought she wasn't good enough for you, Chiaki-san. She hated me for it. But she didn't hate you. She understood, but she still wanted to help. Most probably, that's why it made what we did all the more painful."

Mami turns back towards you. "I did my best to help her through it, though. Not by finding her anyone else or anything like that, but...just by being there for her. Making sure she wasn't alone to her thoughts for too long. Letting her know that I was there for her to rely on, just as Chiaki-san has me to rely on if she needs me." Another smile, this one spiced with a tiny bit of mischievousness. "You can also say I tried to...prepare her for the time when I'd introduce you to her again."

...And did it work?

"Well, besides a few teensy rough spots here and there, your reunion went through smoothly, didn't it?" Mami's smile widens. "Nobody's stabbed anybody, at least. Or shot anybody's kneecaps off."

At the other side of the room, one of the maids politely coughs. You have a feeling it's the one called Amber, the one you've spotted making eyes at Sayaka for a while, too.

"Well, what about you then, Chiaki-san?" Mami gestures to you. "What did you think of Wendy, after spending some time with her in private?"

"Yeah, what did you two talk about?" Sayaka asks. "Or...is that like, super confidential or something like that? In which case, forget it."

How do you respond?

That's what Mami probably told them. The real reason is that Mami needed to re-establish herself as Chiaki's god, onee-chan, and 10/10 best girl.

Midori better watch her back.

Ahahaha... Yeah, that was kind of my cynical first thought, but then I decided it was actually a pretty good argument. That aside, it also stuck closer to Midori's casual clothes design so I felt it was the right decision.

Also, someone, I think it was NECO, requested a Chiaki/Wendy fusion which I've been tossing around in my mind, but haven't put to canvas yet.

However, eh... I'm not really too enthusiastic about fusions as a whole, although there were some nifty ones on danbo a few months back

You shake your head. Wendy...well, you're still not sure yet about what to think of her. She seemed competent enough from what little time you got to spend with her.

She got right to business, engaged you in minimal banter, and seemed to genuinely want to work with you in resolving the Oriko problem without too many civilian casualties.

Wendy was also pretty amenable to the plan of action you had in mind - which, of course, will remain confidential until you feel it's the right time to share.

"Warmaster stuff, then?" Sayaka asks, and you nod. Warmaster stuff. The blueberry grunts and shrugs.

You turn back to Mami. Anyway, you didn't get to say all the things you wanted to say to Wendy. You hope there'll still be time for that. You have a feeling she had more to say to you, too, but just didn't get to say it.

"There'll be more than ample time for you and Wendy to reconnect, Chiaki-san, I'm sure of it." Mami nods with yet another smile, this one quite similar to the smile she flashed you just before revealing that she'd discovered the way to infuse pancakes with whiskey (and immediately serving you up a batch). "...She really does miss you, you know. Even if she tries her best not to show it."

...Yeah. You had an idea she did.

You find yourself uneasily clearing your throat here, before asking about...well, Midori. How...how was she, after you stepped into the bedroom with Wendy? Should you go after her? You're a bit worried...

The three share looks again, before Kyoko speaks up. "She wasn't exactly pissed, Murderface? But she wasn't all that happy, either. We, uh, we told her a bit about Wendy, an' what we did."

It's here that your red-haired best friend grins weakly. "She chewed us all out for it, too. Like she was bein' angry for the both of you, rather than just her."

"She calmed down a bit after that, but when you stepped back out, I guess seeing you an' Wendy bein' in the same room again..." Kyoko shrugs her bare shoulders.

"Oh, she'll get over it, Murderface, seriously." Your blue-haired Equerrysnaps. "Midorin's a big girl, she can handle something like that. Just let her have her fresh air. You're on Warmaster duty now, and when you're on duty, you have no girlfriends." She pauses here. "Well, except Kharn, but you know how she is. Or was."

"Hmm." Mami frowns here. "Well, there is a bit of a lull in the meeting here, and while I don't doubt Midori-san's capability of understanding the situation..." She turns to you. "Chiaki-san, why not take a bit of a break and check on Midori for a while? See that she understands from your point of view, too." A moment's pause. "Try not to take too long, though. Wendy may come back, and it's generally not a good idea to keep the other party waiting when they're ready to continue."

It barely takes you a moment to decide on your next course of action. Yeah, you'll check up on Midori personally. You'll try not to take too long with it, but you have to do this yourself. She has to understand--

"Jesus Christ, Murderface." Sayaka groans. "I know you're worried about Midori, but come the fuck on. You can't coddle her the every single time SOMETHING happens to her! She's a Magical Girl, just like the rest of us, but now you're treating her like some sort of precious waif that'll break into pieces the moment someone even looks at her funny!"

What? You frown at Sayaka. No, no that's not what you're doing. You just want to make sure there's no misunderstandings, and--

"Yes you are! You're doing the whole overprotective boyfriend thing - even though you're a girl - and you're doing it while you're supposed to be dealing with work!" It's here that Sayaka turns to Mami. "Mami, please, talk some sense into Murderface, she listens to you--"

Mami only smiles here, before shooing you off. "Our Warmaster does what she wants, Sayaka-san. ...Ah, remember, Chiaki-san, don't take too long! You want to get back before Wendy returns from her call!"

You smile gratefully at the blonde before leaving the same way Wendy did. Just as you close the door behind you, though, you hear Sayaka growling at Mami, and then at your retreating back. "--FUCKING bullshit," is the tail end of the sentence you hear your Equerry sigh.

Man. Sayaka can get really bitchy sometimes. You've grown closer a bit, sure, but even so.

You find the balcony easily enough - a left turn and a jog down a corridor gets you to the one overlooking the still-sleeping, sun-deprived city of Mitakihara. It's also there that you see Midori, leaning against the solid steel safety railing, chin in her arms as she gazes out into nothing. ...The light's a bit poor, but it looks like she'd been crying.

You step forward, as quietly as you could - but you've only made it two steps before the green-haired girl whirls towards you with a sniff. "Who's there--" She starts to snap, her voice somewhat scratchy, but her tone softens when she sees you. "O-oh! Chiaki-sempai...!"

Yeah, it's you. ...Is it alright if you join her?

"O-oh, of course! Of course, sempai! Please, there's a lot of room!" She gestures to the space beside her, and it's as she turns away from you that you see her discreetly wiping at her eyes and nose with a handkerchief. ...She's pretty good, you nearly didn't see her palm the folded cloth away into her jacket. Sleight-of-hand. Callidus trick, probably. Handy at palming a knife, sure, but not to trick a Vindicare. A Vindicare Warmaster.

You walk up beside her, at the spot she indicated, leaning forward to look down at Mitakihara from the safety of the railing. ...Well, you're pretty high up. Nice sniping spot, you could probably pick off a few early-morning joggers with a rifle at this height.

...Silence. Not that awkward, considering what happened to the both of you earlier, but...it's still there.

"S-sorry about...earlier, Sempai." Midori murmurs after a moment. "I...I just really needed to breathe. That room felt a bit...too intense for me."

How do you respond?

[]Are you jealous? You don't need to be.
[]Wendy's someone from my past, but I don't know if she still wants to be part of my future. Right now, this is just a professional relationship.

This is one of those situations where I want to say a lot, but a little could say far more than a shittonne of words ever can.

If this was a movie, it'd mostly involve close shots, sweeping views of Mitikihara and very little dialogue.

We want to keep Midori safe. That's why she's here right now.
We apparently have a bad reaction to not being able to keep the people we care about safe.
We feel for Wendy. And we feel ABOUT Wendy's situation. But we don't remember her, and ...

well, Midori knows more about what that;s like than we do. We'd forgotten her after the procedure, after all.

I imagine she's got some empathy for Wendy right about now. And more than a little anger on her behalf because... well, what if we memory relapse again and they were to decide to do that to her?

Good point. I could see Midori being afraid that Chiaki will eventually just forget her. In some ways thats worse than the relationship ending or whatever. From Chiakis POV, the relationship with Wendy never even existed. That must really sting.

And if so, having a former girlfriend of Chiakis that Chiaki does not really remember would serve as an example of what it would be like for her.

Can you imagine having to live with the constant fear that one day when you come home, your loved one just looks at you with a blank look and says "Who are you?". Thats something Sayaka does not have to worry about but Midori does.

Don't we already get complaints that Chiaki isn't allowed to mess up in this quest?

Back to the point, The one time Chiaki had to fill out paperwork and manage her officio Mother Base style seems to be what you're looking for?

It'd be neat if we had carthatic periods of warmasterly duties instead of being shipped to dangerous mission after dangerous mission, but that would slow down the plot even further.

No, the problem I have was how Deculture really tried to drill it in that we're a crackshot killer in the last post when I feel that this isn't really being reflected in our playstyle. We never do a clean assassination from a kilometer away; we don't even use rifles anymore, just melee from golden weapons. Why are we a vindicare again?

If anything, this can play as a good point of commonality between Wendy and Midori. Midori got just a day of being forgotten, while Wendy's dealt with months of the same treatment, even worse in fact. I just hope everybody can be cool-headed and not get into some sort of fight. We just need to end this Prophet business and start building our Social Links.

You realize that a majority of our killing throughout the quest involved guns right? There are plenty of moments where we used melee, but guns are literally our go-to weapon. It turns out, if you use ranged weapons a lot, you can become more accurate with them. Hence, crackshot Murderface.

Point and fact,Chiaki is one of the few magical girls that can go face to face with eversors and the mook army in close range using only guns,it just so happens that our normal opponents are actually really strong in their own right,the other vindicare is Tomoe mami and previously Kharn(tough she was always more of an eversor anyway).

Right, but that's on nameless mooks that Decu spends a single sentence discribing. When it comes to "bosses" or things that actually matter we don't exactly have much choice when we have 4 golden weapons and 3 of them are melee. That kind of limits our range to close since it's a pistol.

We really need to improve our combat style. Instead of charging headfirst into everything then standing in the middle of it all, stationary, then dodging at the last moment when they charge is not sufficient. We're a Magical girl, learn to strafe and jump while shooting a la Quake and maneuver so we always have stuff between us and melee users.

You shake your head silently, before reaching up to grasp her hand with your own and give it a squeeze. Acknowledging her apology and allowing her to continue in the same motion.

"It's...it's just...a lot of things, at the same time, and all of a sudden!" Midori bursts out. "I-I mean, the one night we were able to spend together, with...with no missions for Sempai or anything like that, and...and then something bad happened over at Kazamino, and now this meeting, and you and Miss Kuru--Coolio--Cooldown...! Nngh!" She gnashes her teeth in frustration at the difficulty of the foreign last name, but manages it at the end with a triumphant grunt.

You squeeze her hand again. Just letting her continue, keeping your silence for now.

"...Of course I'm happy that Sempai gets to meet someone from her past again, I...I think no matter what, no one should be made to forget someone in their lives, no matter how much remembering them would hurt..." It's here that Midori turns towards you, eyes wet with unshed tears. "...What Miss Mami, Miss Sayaka and Kyoko-san did to you, I...I don't know how they could do that to you, Sempai!"

You let yourself smile here, a small one.

"It's not funny, Sempai!"

You shake your head as you finally break your silence, still holding onto Midori's hand. No, it's not funny at all. But you know that what Mami and the others did, they did it for a good reason. ...Of course, you're not sure what the reason is yet, but you're just thankful that they didn't take the most obvious and logical route with you, at least.

"...The most obvious route...?" Midori frowns as she sniffs again, wiping at her eyes with her sleeves, now. "Sempai, I don't--"

You shake your head again, and give her hand another squeeze. It doesn't matter now. Yes, you understand how she feels. Being deliberately made to forget someone isn't exactly something peachy, but they were just looking out for you, and that's more than what you deserved. Besides, it's not like they were doing it to be dicks or anything. When had Kyoko steered you wrong? Or Sayaka? Or hell, even Mami?

Well, there was one time with Kirika, but that was just because she was trying to help Kirika too. ...You don't tell Midori that, of course.

"Y-yeah. Yeah, I guess..." Midori lowers her head. A moment later, and she squeezes your hand, now.

...Good. That's progress. She's doing better.

How do you continue?

Sniper rifles are overrated, barrel length is not linearly proportional to muzzle velocity which directly affects accuracy. Rate of fire and mobility is what is important in an assault. What we need is to get a M2 BMG, chop the barrel down to carbine length, make it feed from as large a magazine as possible and/or directly from the shield and learn to kill things before they get close by kiting. Handloaded subsonic rounds with single shots for medium range so you don't blind/deafen yourself every time you fire and follow up shots are easier, and normal rounds for close range where it will double as a flamethrower.

You give Midori another moment to herself before speaking again. Telling her that the both of you will talk about Wendy back at the apartment, later. You know that the green-haired Callidus has a lot of questions about your ex, and you'll answer them in time. But not right now. Not when there's a meeting to conclude. And you want her to be there in the same room with you until it's done.

Midori nods in silence, before looking up at you, giving your hand another squeeze of her own. "I'll...I'll hold you to that, Chiaki-sempai. You promised, so you have to do it." She smiles here, finally, a giggle escaping her lips. "Alright?"

Of course you will. You did say, after all, you reply with a smile of your own. Does she want you to write it down on your journal, too? You make to pull the leather-bound notebook from your inventory. It'll just take a second--

"O-oh, no! No! It's okay, Sempai!" Midori shakes her head, eyes widening. "I-I was just kidding! I know you'll do it, there's no need to write it down! P-please, save your journal for more important things!"

What makes her think it's not important? You frown at Midori, just as you open your journal to its last marked page and scribble your promise to her in the space between the notes ORIKO, CONTROLLED? and SAYAKA BITCHMASTER SUPREME.

"Updated my journal," You murmur to yourself, just as you shove the leatherbound volume back into your Inventory. Looking back up to a blushing Midori a moment later.

She ready to get back to the meeting, then?

She couldn't have nodded fast enough after you asked, and followed you back to the suite with one hand gripping your greatcoat's sleeve. Silent as a mouse the entire way through.

You make it back to the suite without any interruptions - and thankfully, THANKFULLY, before Wendy could return from wherever she went. You let out a sigh of relief here just as both Kyoko and Mami welcome you back - Sayaka obviously still pissed, but inclining her head in a nod towards your direction as you glance towards her. Perhaps a grudging acknowledgement from your Equerry that you're doing the right thing, even if it's a bit stupid? Well, whatever.

You return to your seat, and just as you're about to get settled in does Wendy finally re-enter the suite. "High Priestess says okay," is the first words out of her lips. "...But on some conditions. She didn't tell me what they were, though, but apparently she already gave them to you, Miss Tomoe? I--" Wendy freezes as you hear something move behind you, and you turn to look over your shoul--

After what seems like an eternity, Midori releases you from the unexpectedly warm, and unexpectedly soft pair of lips that had closed over your own the moment you saw a flicker of green at the edge of your vision. The Callidus giggling, her cheeks blushing furiously, while the maids giggle to themselves and Kyoko choking down a guffaw.

"Midori-san!" Mami's chiding whisper cuts through the uneasy silence, waving Midori back to her. The green-haired girl bows apologetically at you, then at Wendy, before rushing back towards Sayaka and Kyoko, standing to attention there with a mischievous smile on her face. Like a child that's done something naughty but knows she isn't going to be punished for it. "Um, yes, Wendy-san? You were saying something about conditions...?"

Midori...what was she thinking? She...she did that to you while Wendy was...just when things were going smoothly--

You shake your head furiously, feeling your cheeks burning, and quickly ask Mami what...what the High Priestess' conditions were. You say this with speed, even when you can still taste Midori's melon-flavored lip gloss on your tongue. Wendy, meanwhile, is still stunned at the sight she'd seen, standing ramrod straight, absolutely pale - and her staff unable to approach her for some reason. ...Maybe it's the fact that she's slightly trembling all over? or something.

"Y-yes, um! Well! The conditions are, um, I--" Mami squeaks as she drops what sounds like a very thick folder full of papers from her hand. "A-ahh! Please excuse me, I, let me just--um--"

You resist the urge to sigh, and it's here that you turn in your seat to glare at Midori. That was...that wasn't really what you were hoping she'd do. That was irresponsible, completely inappropriate, out of line - and many other watch-wearing dildo terms. Anyway, you're going to have to give her a piece of your mind later, and--

"WARMASTER!"

The door to the suite slams open, and this awkward tableau inside the suite freezes for just a split second - before it resumes with a flurry of activity, the combatants of either side drawing their weapons and leveling them at the newcomer. The party-crasher immediately freezes as well, and it's here that you shove your Golden Desert Eagle back into your shoulder holster as you recognize it. ...Kumatora?

"Sorry! Please, sorry! Don't shoot! I've got an emergency call for the Warmaster!" Kumatora raises both her gloved hands, one of them gripping an active smartphone. "It's really urgent! I know this is a neutral space, and I come untransformed and unarmed! Please, don't shoot!"

"What the hell is this?" Wendy growls, seemingly going back into more familiar territory now that you've given her no reason to trust you ever. "Kong, for fuck's sake, this was supposed to be--"

"Wait." Mami raises a hand, just as the ivory-white musket in her hands dissolves into ribbons, then nothing. "Kumatora knows Chiaki-san's instructions, and mine, as well. She wouldn't interrupt this meeting if it wasn't important. Stand down, Wendy, everyone. Please."

The room relaxes her, albeit reluctantly - and now without a dozen or so weapons trained at her, Kumatora quickly moves to your side, thrusting the phone in your hands. "It's from Miss Omegon! Please, Warmaster!"

Alright, alright. Fine. You grab the phone and hold it up to your ear - and immediately pull it away. There's...screaming on the other line. Horrible, blood-curling screaming. A girl, probably getting murdered.

"Warmaster!" Omegon's voice comes through the phone's earpiece, shouting over the screams. "I'm sorry to interrupt your tea part but this is important!"

Yeah, you figured, you reply, wincing at the screaming, as well as the fact that you have the entire room looking at you. What is it, anyway?

"I need you to think! Someone's in danger! Who retired Kirika?"

What? That's...you, of course. You did the job. It's even in the mission records.

"No, no! The one who shot her! The one who...who ended her life! The one who pulled the trigger! Think!"

Wait, why is she asking, anyway? Who's screaming over there? Where is she calling you from?

Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam versus The Witch

I spent the last few hours tuning out everything happening around me and trying to find my Happy Place. I don't think I have one at this point. Goddamn Fuckface. I'm not opening my eyes if -you- tell me it's safe to do so. Safe for you isn't safe for me, I'll take blissful ignorance over-

"May as well, kid," Checkers reassures me. So I guess it's fine now. It takes a bit for everything to come back into focus, but when it does...

What the hell am I looking at?

All around me are desks. School desks, work desks, desks that usually go by a name I can't remember off the top of my head. They're freaking everywhere. Most of the ground is composed of them packed together really tightly, and the terrain is really uneven. There's desks forming little barriers, desks strewn around...

There's desks piling up to the pitch black sky. That is a lot of desks.

Wait, the sky's black and starless. How can I see anything? Is that... Is it snowing?

I get a better look around and freeze up when I catch sight of a sheet of paper with writing on it. What does this have to do with witches?

...Why's my trance not triggering? What the fuck-

Fuckface forcibly lowers me to the ground before I can muse any further. She's released her grip on me, which means I could run... But I don't want to leave Checkers stranded with her. What does she want?

Throwing her arms wide, Fuckface announces, "BEHOLD, the witch's barrier!" while Checkers shoots her a dirty look. She goes into some spiel about how this place is the mental landscape of a magical girl before she became a witch. It's... It's very depressing to hear. I mean, I'd heard about it before. That witches are magical girls who used too much magic or lost all hope, but actually being here, in the lair of what used to be a girl like me...

"But first," Fuckface's voice rings clear, "you MUST get into costume!" I guess even Checkers is in uniform now, but...

"But I -like- my cozy new pa-" I realize halfway through that Fuckface really won't take "no" for an answer, and sigh in resignation. "...Fine." A little flash of light later and I'm suited up in this ridiculous getup - Weasel shit ought to be in jail for how much this thing exposes. Then Fuckface hands me some kind of spear; I thought she wanted me to summon my own weapon or something?

"This is an EMERGENCY MEASURE!" she yells, making my ears ring. I guess I don't have to ask anymore, and it feels... Okay-ish in my grip. I dunno, I'm not an expert on weapons. It does feel reassuring to hold something, though, and I don't want to look like a scared little kid by clutching Checkers' hand the entire way.

Fuckface leads us on, with Checkers bringing up the rear. Maybe she was considering breaking me out of here... No, she looks every bit as defeated as me. Goddammit, Fuckface, you're gonna FOR FUCK'S SAKE PUT ME DOWN YOU-

Something loudly crashes to the ground behind me, followed by the sound of metal grinding on metal a ways up. I turn to look, and find that the way back is blocked by a landslide of desks. If I'd still been standing there...

"...Checkers?" I call out, realizing that she's not with us anymore. If you let her be crushed under that pile, Fuckface, I will NEVER-

"Not dead," she calls back. "Gimme a minute, not leaving you alone with-" There's a shift in the wreckage before another landslide (deskslide?) triggers, and Checkers screams profanities as her voice gets closer and closer. I try to wrench out of Fuckface's grip, but it's pointless - both struggling against her and trying to help Checkers get over here. Fuckface insists, "She'll be fine, trust me!"

The pile gives one last violent shudder before its peak topples toward me. Fuckface pulls me out of the way again as Checkers rides down the debris.

She stomps on ahead of us and growls, "Let's get this over with." Fuckface laughs and lets me go, taking the lead again.

I'd swear we were lost at several points. Captain Fuckface kept leading us on, and the path all around us kept falling over and trying to crush us. It was scary the first few times, but after the fifth time it started to feel like something of a farce. At least Checkers didn't get separated from us again.

Speaking of, she apparently had the same idea as me. She'd stopped our guide to chew her out for getting us lost. I took the opportunity to look around at this bleak hellscape. Other than the desks, there were some weird, spiny projections that crowned the top of the towering piles. They were covered in tar or something like that. I can't get a very good view of it, though; it gets blurry from this distance and I have to squint.

Either there's another tower falling, or Fuckface is really goddamn handsy today, because she just grabbed me by the waist. And has Checkers scooped up in her other arm? And there's some kind of thick line of something like tape that's-

Out of freaking NOWHERE, there's a strong lurch as though I'm on a goddamn roller coaster, and I can't feel the ground beneath my feet anymore. The wind just blew my ridiculous hat off. What the hell-

Are we flying? I can see that we're soaring above the ground, so we're airborne. So how- Wait, we're tethered to that... Sword?

JESUS FUCKING CHRIST I CAN'T STOP SCREAMING WHY THE FUCK ARE YOU DOING THIS YOU STUPID FUCKFACE HOLY FUCKING SHIT WE'RE GOING TO FUCKING DIE ON IMPACT YOU RETARD I AM GOING TO THROW UP ON YOU SO FUCKING HARD IF I SURVIVE THIS STOP LAUGHING RIGHT NOW YOU CRAZY CUNT!

FUCK! I don't care if you stuck the landing, I'm feeling dizzy from the sudden adrenaline rush and... FUCKING HELL! Just... FUCK, you didn't even warn me!

Fuckface isn't even acknowledging my scowl, and set me on the ground like a goddamn garden gnome. There's a big crater where that sword landed, and I don't know how we avoided falling into that hole. All the dust in the air makes me sneeze.

Checkers seems to be alright; less shaken than me, but she's not really paying attention to that shithead.

We're surrounded by... Things. Flat outlines of creatures in blocks of green, more of them slipping out of the tiny spaces between the desks that made up the landscape. Some of them look like people, menacing us with swords and axes, but the majority are very beastly in appearance. Freaking wolves and spiders and shit. All of them move as though they were skipping through time, like something out of an old video game.

I realize now that I was no longer holding the spear. I... I think I dropped it when Fuckface catapulted us over here. "Checkers..." I murmur, clutching her sweater sleeve as I try to hide behind her. I don't want to look helpless in front of her, but I really am right now. Dammit, I can't do anything to help...

"...Hey Crazy Cunt," Checkers growls again, some kind of kitchen knife in her hand, "You just gonna stand here?"

"Indeed!" Fuckface yells right back, sword somehow back in her hand, "The POINT of this exercise is-"

"The POINT," Checkers interrupts, waving her knife angrily at the things that are closing in, "was to have her kill a witch, right? This shit is your problem."

Fuckface just... Stands then and scratches her head - how come she still has her hat? "You're being awfully demanding today, Cooldown... But FINE!" she barks, hefting that stupidly large sword. "Now OBSERVE, Slam, what it is that you should STRIVE to be : an Eversor of INCREDIBLE MIGHT!"

Fuckface charges away and cries out like some kind of wild animal. The... familiars, I think the word is, start dying in droves as she hacks them into pieces. If there's something she's good at, it's drawing attention; everything seemed to be trying to swarm her, with limited success. There's no blood, though. They seem to be full of large candy sprinkles. Weird.

Checkers leads me away from the carnage, whispering, "Don't eat that stuff, kid. It'll mess you up." It's hard to tell where we came from, but I think Checkers was herding me back that way. Now was as good a time as any to try and escape from Fuckface.

Suddenly everything goes dark. A scrap of paper just frigging hit me in the face. Why the fuck... No, this isn't the time to explode. This is nothing. I just remove it from my face and toss it away... After reading it. I'm a little curious as to what kind of stuff would be on a page that doesn't trigger my trance.

The writing's pretty... Jagged, I guess. Like hasty, angry scribbles. Really hard to make out...

...What the fuck.

What the flying fuck is this? What the fuck? What the fuck? What the fuck? What the fuck? WHAT THE FUCK?

"Move it, Papers!" Checkers hisses at me, "That fuckwad's gonna finish up her murder spree real soon..."

I didn't even realize I'd stopped moving. But fuck. What the fuck? How the fuck? What is this?

"Papers!"

I hold up the note for her to see, my voice trembling a little as I spoke. "This... rant," I try to explain, "it's... It's something I said the other day, but... Angrier. More... Murderous."

"...'Fuck the Sixth! Fuck the Eighth! Fuck Incubators! Fuck magical girls! Fuck all of this! I'll kill them! They're all gonna fucking die like the dogs they are!'" Checkers puts the note down and sighs, rubbing the bridge of her nose while explaining, "Christ, kid, that doesn't mean any-"

"HEY!" Fuckface interrupts, covered in candy confetti a short distance from us. "That's the WRONG WAY! We've got witches to waste! Come ON Slam, a better life awaits you just up ahead!"

Better life would be one without you in it.

...Fuck, what does it mean? It doesn't seem like something remotely possible, but... Fuck. This is really starting to creep me the fuck out...

We traverse back through the spot where the fight erupted earlier, taking the long route around the crater. The remains of those sprite-monsters litter the ground, along with any candy sprinkles didn't fall into the crevices.

Turns out we'd landed in a valley, so that means hiking out through the only area that was remotely climbable : a steep incline made of stacked chairs and desks. Fuckface tests it by going first, and the whole thing collapses on her, stopping a few feet from Checkers and myself. I don't find it as funny as Checkers, though I put on a little smile to keep up appearances.

Fuckface emerges after forcing her way out, and doesn't look any worse for wear. I guess I could have indulged myself earlier, but it's too late now.

We don't have a way forward anymore, but we also don't have a way back. And I really don't want to get hurled through the air like that again. I don't know what, if anything, Fuckface is thinking, but she's staring at Checkers expectantly. I look to her as well, wondering if she has something.

"Oh, for--" Checkers groans in irritation, before she pulls out a broom - did she always have that with her - and holds it out. "Get on." Fuckface gets on in front, I get on in back, Checkers sit in the middle. I didn't question why, I just assume she knows what she's doing.

As soon as I feel my feet leave the ground again, I clutch onto Checkers like a friggin' albatross, which made her yelp. I murmur an apology without moving at all - because I don't want to fall. We're flying, we're actually freaking flying. Though I've got my eyes shut again, because I don't want to throw up while Checkers is watching.

"Good thinking," Fuckface praises - of course it's good thinking! Even a moron like you could see that. There's some shift in movement before pirate bitch girl announces, "As I suspected, our destination is right THERE!" My stomach lurches as we quickly descend.

I hope this ends soon.

I don't let go until I feel firm ground beneath my feet again. I pull myself off of Checkers and open my eyes again.

We're surrounded by high walls on all sides, covered in something brown. Looks like the floor is made of the same material. It feels... Spongy as I walk on it, like a giant cake. Checkers and I are following behind Fuckface, who just used that ribbon-tape-whatever from earlier to pull some familiars away from a giant, spiny ball. It looked like they were attacking it for whatever reason, but now they're a twinkle in the dark, dark sky.

"Eleanor Abbot Slam, step forward!" Fuckface barks out. I look at Checkers, who responds with a shrug, before timidly walking forward. "Your task now is to engage the witch," Fuckface explains, pacing in front of us with her stupid sword resting against her shoulder. "Though it WILL be perilous, know that WE, BOTH Cooldown and myself, are RIGHT BEHIND YOU, ready to STEP IN at a moment's notice if things go pear-shaped." Then you do it, Fuckface. I'm not even armed.

Still, it's reassuring to have two people here that are strong enough to bail me out. Even if this whole thing is a stupid idea. I might actually survive this.

My legs are trembling as I approach the spiky mass. As I get closer, I can almost make out some details on it. The spikes, for instance, are flat, rather than conical, and have little holes near the top. The points are silvery in color, while the rest is a copper. Or bronze. I don't have much experience with different metals.

It's about twenty to thirty feet from the thing that I start to smell something familiar. Or rather, I become aware of something I've smelled all along since I got here. It was there before, but I didn't really notice because I was used to the scent. Now, though, now the scent is strong, strong enough that it makes me dizzy.

It's ink. Leaking out of those spines... No, nibs. Those are pen nibs. Those are freaking pen nibs.

The mass shivers, then lazily uncurls itself like a pillbug. The entire thing reveals itself to be a giant head, the nub spine things everywhere but its face and hair. The nubs look much... Spikier, somehow. Like they're being extended. The witch's dull amber eyes swivel in their sockets to focus on me. Its lips curl into a confused pout.

Its face is mine. Right down to being framed by wiry lavender curls.

I'm looking at me.

We just... Stare at each other. I'm... I don't know what to do. I can't kill another me. I just can't.

And all this time, the thing has been completely silent. Not a sound coming from it, not even from its movement. And I haven't heard anything from Fuckface or Checkers. It's so quiet I can hear myself breathing.

The witch breaks the silence first, by opening wide and crying out. Its wail of rage and sadness sounding exactly like me. At first. Then it... Everything erupts in ink. It cries tears of ink, its maw drips with ink, its spines... So much ink it makes me nauseous just-

Fuck. FUCK!

It shouldn't have been able to clear the distance as fast as it just did, but one moment I had plenty of room, next it's just inches from my face! How the fuck-

My entire body shudders with fear, and my legs give out on me. I can vaguely hear shouting over the sound of my heart pounding, as I bring my arms up to... That's not going to do a damn thing to stop it. I don't feel any better at conjuring a weapon than I did yesterday, I just want to run and forget this ever happened.

But I can't. I can't move my legs at all. And as it opens wide to take a bite out of my head with its ink-stained teeth, I realize... I'm going to die here.

...This isn't fair. I'm going to die by my own witch. None of this is fair at all.

There's a weird pressure of something wrapping around my left arm, and I feel myself yanked away as the witch snaps its mouth shut. I feel off-balance after that.

...I can't feel my other arm.

"Jesus, Papers..."

I think that's Checkers talking. I don't know. There's a loud buzzing in my head as I'm looking at the stump where my arm was, which feels... Warm.

I'm too panicked to panic any more. Now I just feel... Really numb. And tired.

"This was a mistake... This was a HUGE mistake."

So tired. So fucking tired.

"Well no shit!"

It's... It's not bleeding too much anymore. I got some of it on Checkers, though.

"Look at her soul gem! Did -you- bring any grief seeds?"

I guess... It doesn't really hurt too much, either. I've had stuff that hurt worse.

"...Oh fuck! Don't you witch out on me, kid."

I slowly turn to look up at Checkers, my vision growing misty. Past her, the witch-me rests in two separate, burning halves, its insides gushing out like a fountain. Fuckface's sword looks house-sized from here.

Deep breaths. Deep, wheezing breaths. It's over.

My voice croaks as I speak, but I have to know, "That was... Me, wasn't it?"

Checkers can't look me in the eye when she murmurs into her scarf, "...Yeah. "

...Fuck. I think I'm crying. I'm crying and sobbing when I ask, "Isn't this too much?" before coughing up snot all over her sweater. Things are so fucking bad and now they're gonna get worse because I'm crying. They always get worse when I cry. For me, for whatever I care about. It always gets worse when I cry. Every time.

"I-I know I'm... I'm not good," I confess. "I've been a-a-a terrible person. I'm, I'm really bad and... And I deserve bad things."

And now Checkers and Fuckface are... Bad things are gonna happen to us all. Because I'm weak, and I'm crying.

"Papers..." Checkers tries to console me, and I -want- to be consoled. I -want- everything to be okay.

But I... I just can't fucking stop. I can't fucking stop myself from crying.

"Do... Do I really deserve all this?"

I can't fucking take it. I... I just can't fucking take this.

...And then, mercifully, everything goes black...

Do we have any realistic ideas on how to get to Misaka as quickly as possible?

We can't call Tiny Pete, both because we don't have the beacon with us, and because Tiny Pete could be protecting Misaka right now.
Our Timestop is limited to only a few minutes, not the hours that it was originally capable of doing, and Pinky will only let us use it once a day.

As stupid as it sounds, using a MiG may be the fastest. We will have to ask Braids to use her telekinesis and Dildoes her piloting skills, and that would let us get to the warehouse the fastest.

Of course, there's the possibility that Pinky will figure out that we're talking with the Three Stooges and go on another temper tantrum, and we can only bring 2 other people with us.

Can we actually use a MiG in a city? And I don't mean legally speaking. I mean theres presumably no place to land, and won't flying be hard due to all the high buildings tha (I presume) are there.

Braids and Dildoes might have other ideas. Braids for example has, according to Decu, the ability to control what comes out of the shield. Odds are there is atleast 1 helicopter there, and no doubt Dildoes can fly those too, and that would probably be better/faster.

Though there is no question Pinky would learn of this considering we would be doing it infront of the cult.

Since Braids was able to keep a MiG floating in air at the Big Shell with the engines running for a no-runway liftoff, I assumed that she could do the same in reverse, using a telekinetic field to let us perform a vertical landing in front of the warehouse.
And that Dildoes' skills with piloting are good enough to let us navigate a cityscape.

A helicopter is still significantly slower than a jet (unless we have Airwolf somewhere in our Shield).

>“There was one other thing…I know you’ll do your best not to make a scene, but I’m still a bit worried about you and Chiaki-san, since she still doesn’t have the best self-control.” Two fingers pointed at me like a little pistol, and a ribbon snaked out from between them and coiled around my neck, tying itself into a small bow in the back. …It was a little tight. It was always a little tight.

>“This is just a bit of a reminder. I need you to be as pleasant as you can, Wendy, and I think with a gentle reminder like this, that won’t be a problem for you. Will it…?” She turned back to the mirror without even waiting for an answer.

No cig kisses. No getting shitfaced because Midori couldn't drink her way out of a cabin. No interplay of knifing and kissing.

Not that it's a bad thing, but it's definitely different ~~I think Wendy lost because she didn't get much characterization past Ameriburger flavored Chiaki until later, whereas Midori had a chance to be characterized by the players during Siberia~~

Annie May x ~~Midori again~~

MINORS
Dorothy x Viola/V (they both need more screen time, too)
Lily x Mittens (loli squad, Mittens hasn't been properly introduced yet but someday we'll get Green Green Magica)

Oh no, don't get me wrong. I think Chiaki and Wendy has its own virtues, like you just extolled. In that case, however, I prefer Midori paired with Chiaki because I have so much fun with it.

I was, however, saying that Wendy and Midori functions really similarly to Chiaki and Midori (without adorable height hijinks) which is one reason why I never really got behind it.

On the other hand, I've already done a few Mami and Wendy pics and the more I see of them on-screen, the more I could get behind that.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 07/04/14(Fri)09:48:04 No.33182127

You are a Magical Girl, and your past is coming back to haunt you. Again.

It's nothing new. Pinky, the Golden Weapons...all the shit you've been going through could be traced back to you and your bad decisions. The thing is, though, you don't remember making those decisions at the time, giving you that tissue-thin veneer of solace that whoever made those decisions weren't really YOU, and...you might have done things differently in their stead. So there's that.

This time, though, you do. You remember with painful clarity that it was you who asked Misaka to help you retire Kirika. You remember that it was you who put the cute, brown-haired Russian behind the sights of the rifle that reduced the blood-crazed, Golden Weapon-wielding bitch to hamburger - a split second after you stuck her in the chest with a combat knife.

It never occured to you that something like this would happen.

It never occured to you that the girl whose entire face lit up in joy whenever you remembered her name could ever be identified by yet another Golden Weapon-wielding bitch as Kirika's murderer and thus get marked for murder herself. All because some white-haired bitch couldn't stomach the fact that her ex went fucking insane and needed to be put down like the rabid dog she became.

...No. No time for that now. You've got no time to waste on regrets, or thinking about what you should've done instead. You did what you could. You made the decision with what you had at the time. Pissing and moaning about it isn't going to do anything. It isn't going to save Misaka from dying in witchfire - a death that Haruka, one of the last remaining Prognosticators of the Ninth, had woken up screaming about.

You just hope that this isn't the start of some sort of fucking trend.

>> ☐ Deculture 07/04/14(Fri)09:49:24 No.33182136

>>33182127

The room you're in is deathly silent as you lower Kumatora's smartphone from your ear, after Yuma's call abruptly ended in the middle of one of Haruka's more bloodcurdling screams. Everyone else looking to you to say something, to say anything, their faces showing expressions that range from skeptical curiosity to pale alarm. You don't notice them at the moment - you're too willing yourself to think clearly amid the panic rising in your chest and the anger coloring your vision red.

"...Chiaki-san?" Mami is the first to speak, her own face pale with concern. "What is it? What's going on? What did Yuma call about?"

"Murderface?" Sayaka asks, almost at the same time. "...No. It's not...she's not going after Misaka, is she?"

"...Kong?" Even Wendy seems to be perturbed, her dull copper eyes widening just the slightest bit.

How do you react?

Unless they have better idea, we're pulling a MiG, so 2 people can go with us. I'd vote for Wendy (the red Culexus is her prey as well) and either Kyouko or Sayaka.

>> ☐ Anonymous 07/04/14(Fri)09:57:20 No.33182228

We can't ignore that this may be a distraction. Doubtful, but it's a possibility. I'd say Kumatora and Rhea escort Mami & Hanegawa back to the officio; there Mami can lockdown the office, organize reinforcements to pull our ass out of the fire, and can help Haruka down in the silent room. Hanegawa can take notes on professionalism.

Sayaka and Kyoko are with us, unless one of them goes back to lead the rescue team. Wendy and co. are welcome to come along if they're still interested, but regardless we're going in head first and gutting everything in our way. Motorcycle are our best bet I think; not even sure how we'd even land a MiG in the city.

As an aside, the best way to deal with what Midori did is call her Hanegawa for right now. That'll get her attention and let her know that that shit does not fly. Personally, I'd say her offense warrants her only being called Midori at home, and her losing public displays of affection rights, but that's just me.

That wouldn't be an issue. Misaka is ranked higher than us according to Petes AI, so he wouldn't abandon her to come to us without her say-so.

And obviously she's not going to send him to us if she actively requires his presence.

Since we have enough shit at our hands as it is, we might not want to take any risks in that direction, never-mind that Midori needs a good paddling for the shit she pulled.
That said, Chiaki and Sayaka as MUSCLE and DIVERSION and Midori to slip in, get Misaka, get out. Since we know that she managed to do exactly that in Siberia with Kharn and ourselves.

That I do not trust Wendy is beside the point, its because we know WHAT Midori and Sayaka can do.

You nod at Sayaka, while handing Kumatora her smartphone back. Oriko's gone and fucked herself, yeah.

The confirmation sends a ripple of shock throughout the room, one that's much more clearly felt by your retinue - your best friend, especially. "N-no, Oriko wouldn't...! Murderface!" Kyoko stammers, her one eye widening in panic. In fear. "M-Murderface, Oriko knows Misaka, she loves that little kid, there's no way she'd go after her just because--"

"She would," Sayaka says hollowly, coldly. "Anyone who wants payback would. It makes perfect sense - you don't just go after the one responsible, you go after everyone else involved." She shakes her head. "Misaka was the triggerman. Logical target. We just didn't think she'd...actually go through with it. Don't think you did either, Murderface."

No. No you didn't, and that admission alone makes you want to murder something in the face. Not just because THIS is happening, but because it had the ability to happen in the first place. You should've immediately gone and secured everyone involved in Kirika's murder, not just the targets you thought Oriko would go after just to mess with your head.

A small part of you wonders if you could've avoided this by killing Oriko too, right after she slapped you. Iori would've seen you murder someone in front of her in cold blood, and you'd probably would've made an enemy of Kyoko for life, but...

Christ, quit it with this bullshit! You don't much time! You grit your teeth, before addressing the entire room - telling them about what you need: a way to get to Misaka, as fast as humanly possible. ...No, even faster than that.

The room is silent for just a few moments, before Wendy steps forward. "...Schpeltiger's right outside. It's fast enough to break the land speed record if we punch it." She pauses for a moment, seemingly hesitating. "...Can only take one passenger, though. Maybe two, but that's already pushing it."

Schpeltiger? That's...wait, that's the bike Malal used, right? Back at Varrigan. Yeah. You remember it.

You glance at Mami for approval, and she nods. "Wendy is a capable biker, and Schpeltiger's faster than anything we have at the Officio. I daresay she'd be able to get you to Misaka quickly enough, barring teleportation, and even that's unreliable."

...Right. Okay. That's good. That may just be what you need.

What do you do?

[]Take the Schpeltiger with Wendy and another passenger.
[]Kindly pass on the offer. You have other ideas. (Write-in)

Planes are shit at avoiding anything, that's why stealth is important. Oriko is way more dangerous to aircraft than any missile.

A road ambush is a fight we can at least win.

Going by plane, if Oriko is -anywhere- in the city, is suicide. There's no way to avoid or block those beams. The damage is way too high to be tanked either, if I'm remembering Ahriman correctly.

focussed fire.

If we take the mig, they can all just stay in one place and mass fire on us.

If we take the bike and they don't know for sure which road we'll take, they have to cover both roads - they can only fire on us with a fraction of their full firepower at any time.

You nod. You'll be taking Schpeltiger with Wendy, and another passenger. You pondered about just taking one of your MiGs and blasting towards Misaka's warehouse at full speed, but you have a sickening feeling that Oriko's foreseen you doing that, too. And her blasting you out of the sky would just be a foregone conclusion by then.

...Not that taking a bike's any safer, really, but at least you'll have the terrain to duck and swerve behind for cover.

"...Fine." Wendy nods, before standing up and making for the door that she'd just burst through only moments earlier. "I'll go ahead, get Schpeltiger warmed up and ready for us. Pick whoever's coming with, but don't take too fucking long." She narrows her eyes at Midori on her way out, with your Callidus shooting back a glare of her own.

Right. Yeah. Okay.

You take a deep breath - a mostly futile effort to slow your racing heartbeat - and look at your retinue.

Who do you take with you on Schpeltiger? You can only take one with you, the rest will most likely catch up while you're wading knee-deep in crazy Prophet worshiper blood.

[]Midori
[]Sayaka
[]Kyoko
[]Rea
[]Kumatora

Well, better that happen now than in the middle of some massive crisis, and best that someone else draw the anger of the world upon themselves.

I'm convinced she's going to need to die, potentially by our hand after a betrayal she can't talk us out of noticing, because that would be HIGH DRAMA, and Dec's into that.

That's not what I want. I want this dealt with efficiently and cleanly, without our grubby fingerprints all over it.

Also, for what it's worth, Max Payne 2: The Fall of Max Payne features the betrayal of the main character by an arms dealer. Someone with lots of guns.

You make your decision quickly, easily. You'll be taking Sayaka with you. Mami can prep the others for immediately-deployable reinforcements and evac the moment you ask for it.

"Warmaster." Both Eversor and Vindicare salute you at the same time, professionally, perfectly in unison. Kyoko awkwardly follows suit a moment later, seemingly still poleaxed at this turn of events. You don't blame her - Oriko was one of her best friends, after all. It must've been pure torture to be in a room where the fate of your best friend is being discussed by people who have due reason to kill her.

At the corner of your eye, you see Midori's hopeful, expectant face fall in disappointment at your decision. Her head hanging low, her gaze locking onto her shoes, as if sulking about not being picked.

...What's gotten into her? You shake your head here, making a mental note to talk to her in private later. What she did while Wendy was talking earlier...

"Wait!" Kyoko bursts forward, one hand grabbing your arm as you make for the door that Wendy had just gone through moments ago. "I..I know Misaka's in danger, a-and there's nothing worse than that, but what about...everything, earlier? What you guys talked about?" Her one good eye looks at you and then at Sayaka in turn. "That stuff about tryin' to get through to Oriko? About her bein' brainwashed with the Golden Weapon?"

Sayaka frowns. "Kyoko, this isn't the time--"

"I-I know! I'm sorry! But I gotta ask!"

You nod at Sayaka, who simply shrugs, before leaning forward and placing a quick, chaste kiss on Kyoko's cheek. Your Equerry murmuring something to the red-haired Eversor underneath her breath, something you don't hear, before she herself goes on ahead without you. Cape billowing out behind her as she strides through the door.

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 07/04/14(Fri)13:39:22 No.33184995

>>33184980

You turn back to Kyoko. It's...well, you're still going to try to get through to Oriko, you tell her. That's still your plan, and you're going to go ahead with it. You did promise, and so that's what you'll do. But...well, that was before you found out she's actually capable of going after someone like Misaka. ...Even you, with your own skewed brand of morality, doubt that you're capable of the same thing.

You're going to do your best, but if it comes to it, you'll do what needs to be done.

What would Kyoko herself do in your stead, anyway? If she was Warmaster?

"..." Your best friend is silent, her one crimson eye staring hard and deep into yours - and it's here that she lets out a sigh, her shoulders drooping. "...I'd, I'd do...what needs to be done, too."

You nod, and give your best friend a hug of your own. It'll be fine, you promise her. One way or another, you're going to get Oriko out of this mess.

"...Thanks, Murderface." Kyoko sniffs. "I'll...make sure to watch over Midorin for ya, while you're gone. In case Oriko to pull anything with her, too. Um..." She glances towards the door Sayaka just left from, as if making sure her girlfriend is well out of earshot. "Could you, um..."

You give her a smile. Yeah, of course. You'll keep an eye out for her girlfriend too, but it's probably going to be the other way around.

"Hah!" Kyoko guffaws for what seems like the first time today, giving you a slap on the back that feels like it just jostled your kidneys loose. "Stop sellin' yourself short, you're our Warmaster now! Act the bit!"

Yeah, yeah.

You finally make to leave, when--

"Chiaki-sempai!"

You turn to look at Midori, your hand already on the doorknob. The green-haired Callidus still looking a bit sulky, a bit out-of-sorts, with her cheeks nearly as red as her eyes.

"Please take care! And I'm...I'm sorry about earlier...!"

How do you respond?

[]Leave without a word.

Holy shit, that would actually make sense.
A witch was in Mami's apartment with no indication on how she got here
Then we get sent on an escort mission with Kilgore who conveniently has a golden weapon while Mami is second-in-command
Then Mami successfully turns us into a ~~watch-wearing dildo~~ Warmaster and we get shipped off to Siberia, and stuff of various intensity happens
~~Keep in mind that we don't know what Mami was doing or where she was going most of the time, hell, she could have made us Warmaster just so that she could have more free time~~

Then we get two warnings about her, from Malal ~~who just happens to me a medukameguca of this timeline~~ and our resident punmaster who has a 400 thousand points bounty on Mumi ~~explicitly tells us that her scores are based on a number of factors, not just on her whim~~
Last, but not least, Whisky pancakes. Truly worse than Hitler.
I say Mami's either dating Ahriman or she's a Mumi from one of these timelines of suffering who wants to slap Faust a couple of ~~hundreds~~ times.

Honestly, I've been extremely suspicious of her ever since she warned Kirika we were going to retire her.

That could easily have gotten us killed, and it almost did.

Considering that Malal warned us about her in the diary, and how dangerous our axe lady thinks she is, we have plenty of reasons in character to be suspicious, but she makes pancakes and smiles, and suddenly we don't care.
She's also in a position to control all the info going through our Officio.

Fuck. She's drugging us with pancakes and the smiles are a vector for magical mind control.

(If we count OOC information, Kyuubey may also be being drugged with the pancakes, and Mami quest suggests she has a golden weapon, which raises the question of why she hasn't turned it over to the vault yet.)

TL:DR - Be suspicious of Mami. Those who act 'for the greater good' are capable of the most inhuman acts of all.

...You don't want to make what could be your last words to Midori a veiled reprimand, but you have to at least make her know that you're not exactly pleased with what she did earlier. So while you accept her farewell with a nod, you return it with three words that makes her freeze right where she stands. A look of shocked dismay on her face.

"We'll talk later," you murmur, before closing the door behind you as you exit the suite. Immediately breaking into a run for the elevator, just as it heralds the arrival of an empty car with a 'ding'.

It's as you wait for the elevator to deliver you to the ground floor that your thoughts stray back to the matter at hand - Oriko. It's...you were convinced that she was possessed, or being manipulated by Ahriman somehow. Wendy bought it, the High Priestess seemed to buy into it enough to agree with what you've got planned...and you did promise Kirika and Kyoko that you'd try.

But...Misaka? To go after someone like her? Sure, the little Russian girl probably has enough guns and explosives inside her warehouse to start a war with another continent - Tiny Pete is practically a walking war crime on his own - but she's still just a kid.

Just like other kids, she hated eating vegetables, she loved chocolate, and she liked being praised while getting patted on the head. She cries, she throws tantrums, and she wants nothing more than you, her surrogate big sister, to always remember her name.

Going after children, even if you were that hell-bent on retribution, just isn't done.

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 07/04/14(Fri)15:22:21 No.33186307

>>33186292

Sayaka's assessment earlier sounded good enough to be true. Maybe Oriko was that driven for revenge, for payback, that killing children wasn't something she'd balk at doing, if it meant crossing all the Ts and dotting all the i's. It's not like that's unheard of. That would also mean that she's well and beyond saving - because someone that consumed for revenge won't stop until they got what they wanted. Either they win, or they die trying to. It's as simple as that.

But then again, she does have a Golden Weapon with her. And your first hand experience with them tells you that whoever ends up getting one for any amount of time is bound to become a bit...loopy, especially with the spirits inside of them. Your memories of Ahriman is still a bit spotty, but from what Kharn told you, she seems like the type to manipulate and bully to get her way. There's still a good chance that this is the case here, which means that you can still rescue Oriko.

There's just the fact, then, that gradual corruption and possession is the worst that a contracted folk would have. Uncontracted folk seems to be a wholly different thing entirely. The last time you fought an uncontracted person wielding a Golden Weapon, they had to burn down the entire wing of the mansion you killed him in - because apparently the walls that you painted with the Golden Weapon user's brains and guts wouldn't stop turning into flesh no matter how many times the owners tried to replace them.

...You'll try. You promised, so you'll try. That's the end of it. At the very least, you can say you tried your best, and no one would call you liar again. Or good-for-nothing. Something like that.

A few moments later, and the elevator doors open to let you out. Ground Floor, main lobby. Stepping out, you see Sayaka and Wendy already sitting astride the white, rocket booster-infested hulk of steel and wheels that is Schpeltiger.

Your ex is revving the engines, and it's roaring loud enough to rattle the building's solid plate glass door. ...Jesus, what kind of fuel does it run on? How many fucking miles to the gallon does it get? Because every rev sounds like it's burning away enough for three cars' worth, it's that loud.

Both Wendy and Sayaka look up at you as you approach. "...And here I thought you'd catch a quickie before you left," Wendy remarks, just the slightest bit of venom in her eyes and in her voice. She doesn't give you a chance to reply, however. "Hop on, quick. With luck we'd be there before the rush hour starts." She scoots back on the seat along with your Equerry, revealing a substantial amount of the leather seat built for the biker themselves.

...Wait. Why are you at the front? Why can't you ride from behind, like a normal jackoff? Why does Sayaka get to ride bitch while you can't, even though it's more fitting for her?

Sayaka and Wendy glance at each other, before Sayaka pipes up. "Sorry, Murderface. You're too noodly to ride bitch. You might fall off of something, 'specially when we get up to speed."

Ah. Right. Well, if she puts it that way...

"Stop being so fucking picky. It's just a seat." Wendy snaps again. "Come on! I thought you wanted to save your friend, Kong? Why are you delaying a fucking rescue mission, then?"

You're just thinking, you return, and it's here that you insinuate yourself between Wendy and the bike proper, planting your ass on the already-warm seat. Your ex's chin resting gently against yours as she reaches past you, her arms on either side of you to grip the handlebars. It's almost comfortable, and it is, especially with the cold morning air.

...Oh, and her breasts. Her breasts are pressing against your back. Twin globes of soft, heavy warmth wrapped in thick cotton, squashing themselves against your shoulder blades with every breath you take.

"Hold on to the handlebars too, Kong, just don't try to steer. Leave that to me." Wendy murmurs into your ear, her position more of forced necessity than anything else but sounding less and less reluctant about it. "...Mickey, hold on tight, alright?"

And with that, Wendy mans the massive, ivory-white hulk of Schpeltiger away from its parking spot - away from the hotel, away from the business area of Mitakihara.

Once in the highway itself - the roads still sort of devoid of passengers to the early hour, with only a few stragglers and early birds here and there - it's here that Wendy seems to open the taps on Schpeltiger, the bike roaring and then rocketing forward. Pressing you back harder against your ex's frame. Making the scenery whip past in a seamless, color-smeared blur.

It's fast, but...it's not fast enough. Not nearly fast enough.

The Shield clamped on your arm slowly, carefully, begins to tick again.

Hey, time stop just means it's frozen for everybody else. If Pinky is mad enough at Sayaka, then she /will/ delay us before we can even move or cancel it outright before we do.

My main concern here are Sayaka and Pinky, and getting knocked out of time stop before any real amount of distance is covered

I wonder if it would have been possible to tell Sayaka to lean back so she would not touch Chiaki and then trigger the timestop. That way Sayaka would not have been pulled into it.

Ahwell.

Actually, the events of Rebellion took place hundreds of millions of years ago.

Madoka broke out of the barrier, and Homura was sealed away as punishment.

Madoka has been attempting to "reform" Homura. From our perspective, it could have been only a few loops ago. But in reality it's been been hundreds of millions of loops, or more.

Our past selves are all hopelessly out of date. There's a war brewing with forces beyond our comprehension and Madoka has been forced to enroll us, dumb and blind, practically against her will, which she hates doing because we're chaotic as fuck and almost invariably wind up turning a situation on it's head just out of sheer stubborness.

Magical Assassin Wendy Cooldown vs. The Great Sage of the Outback Leman Russ

After the fucking debacle Crazy Cunt put her through, I was astonished Papers was still with us. Still…all there. Mostly there, anyway. More there than most people'd be, facing down their own witch. Let alone on their first witch hunt. She'd be a hero, in a better Officio. …Not ours, but not this outback hell on the asshole of the world, either. They were treating this like it was nothing. A brief stop in medical, enough to get her patched up and a few extra seeds as a precaution, then…

Well, I brought her back to her room. She didn't need to be badgered and questioned after that. I knew Mary'd use it as a springboard for our negotiation; we'd all agreed this was neglect of the highest order – sending a fresh-faced noncombatant rookie into a barrier without so much as a real support team was practically murdering her. She was damn lucky Crunch could take that witch out as fast as she did, because I sure as shit couldn't, and luckier that the grief seed was enough to get her back to the Officio.

…Someone had to look after her, though, and I volunteered instantly. I wanted to make sure Crunch didn't fucking touch her after that stunt. Well, that, and I was sure I'd shove my knife through Leman Russ's smug fucking face if she tried to handwave this. Last I talked with Annie, she looked like she was pretty close, too, and she LIKED Russ.

Does Homura not move people (Sayaka for example) in timestop. That implies that people are pulled into the timestop world only if they are touching Homura at the moment the timestop activates.

We see this in the anime when Homura interferes in the fight between Sayaka and Kyoko and "teleports" Sayaka to safety just before Kyoko would have hit her.

So if Chiaki were to activate timestop, and THEN grab onto Sayaka, Sayaka would be pulled along but not be part of the timestop.

Well... The effects of the time stop don't occur immediately when an object stops being in contact with Chiaki. Bullets will fly a short distance, lobbed grenades will arc when thrown, etc. One could assume that if Sayaka's in contact with the bike and not Chiaki, that she'd get dragged along without actually being pulled into it, ie: she would remain outside and she'd just experience being transported immediately.

Well, at this point, it depends on how Decu chooses to write things. I can never really dislike Pinky time, I just hope it doesn't result in Misaka dying over Pinky throwing a tantrum Elly'd been up for a few minutes now, looking all the world like death on two pudgy legs. Didn't have an ounce of color in her anymore, and every time she'd open her mouth to try and talk, she couldn't manage anything but a hiccup. Good thing I kept candy stashed away in my inventory (usually for Lily, sometimes for Annie or Nakajima) to take the edge off with; I got up a couple of minutes ago for just long enough to move to the other side of her bed, where she still had a hand to hold, and she made this terrified little noise, like a cat choking on a hairball.

It'd be cute on any other day.

Her hand squeezed mine again. It was…tiny, way too small, and it felt so frail right then. She kept glancing down to the stump where her arm used to be. Kid didn't deserve this – any of this, not what we did to her, not what the Sixth did to her. Not what that crazy sword bitch did to her especially. Fuck. Just thinking about it made me want to stab a fucking lovehole in everybody in Australia. I was smarter than that, but shit. It might have been worth it.

…Footsteps in the hall. Soft ones, but there was no hesitation in them. I think the kid heard them too; she bit down on the sucker I'd given her, and her nails dug into my hand. Just as I expected, they stopped outside the door. Papers shot me a look, as if she were begging me to stop whatever was coming next.

"Fuck off!" I hissed at…yeah. I was pretty sure I knew who it was already. Wasn't Vagina Spiders, she was louder, when she didn't need to sneak around. Wasn't Crunch or the door would be off its hinges already. Her Majesty had no reason to visit Papers, and since we'd made this incident into the lynchpin of our proposal…

"I'll never quite understand you Americans. People call us a lot of nasty things, but even we typically start with 'Please, come in', or at very least 'How you goin'?'" She knocked (as if it made a fucking difference) and let herself in, smoothly closing the door behind her, and gave me a small, mischievous smile that made my heart skip a beat (entirely against my will).

The Great Sage of the Outback Leman Russ was small and slender, almost frail. Silky red-brown hair fanned out behind her as she walked, and settled evenly around her as she sat next to me on the bed. I didn't leave much room for her; I wanted to stay between the kid and these sheepfuckers for as long as I could. The air filled with an indescribable sent, a wild, fresh smell that I'd been told reminded Mary of her and Annie's hometown, minus some cow shit. Elly wrinkled her nose and turned away a bit. Seemed to be bugging her, too.

…It was hard to put into words the significance Russ seemed to give a room, but I'd been told before that that was, like, the most basic trait of a good Warmaster. It was a damn accomplishment, when you're half-dog or…whatever the hell she was. …Her dress looked like it cost half my monthly salary, too. Five digits easy.

"How are you feeling, Eleanor?" The kid peeked out at her Warmaster and her lips parted. …There was a second of hesitation, then her nails dug into my hand all over again.. …She tried to take the sucker out with the hand that wasn't there anymore, if I had to guess. I shot Russ a look.

"Your fucking retard rank leader almost killed her, almost definitely crippled her. Permanently. Does she look alright to you?" I growled, and Russ just nodded, as if she'd barely heard what I said. Smug fuck.

“She’ll need a new arm, then, and her leg…did she injure it in the barrier? The medical team mentioned she’d cracked her shin. It’s going to be hard for her to run until it’s healed properly.” …Running really wasn’t something Papers did. Except...away. She was pretty good at running away.

“One of your girls fucked up her leg. And we’ve already got plans to deal with it. All of it. Back in Santa Destroy.” I emphasized that last bit, in case she didn’t get the fucking message.

“I’m sure you do.” Again with that condescending tone. “And do you have a Culexus?”

“…Why do we need a Culexus?” I had to fight to keep my knife out of my hand already.

“For Eleanor’s sake, we’d like to wipe her memory of that…incident. You understand the severity of coming into contact with one’s own witch, of course.” Aaand I lost it. Lost the fight, felt one hand curled around an old, wooden handle as Papers squeaked and clutched the other. As if she wasn’t shaking enough already.

“You’re gonna scramble her fucking brain? No, this conversation is fucking over. We’re taking her. Now. “ I started to stand, and Elly followed suit, leaning on me.

Russ’s eyes flicked to my knife, but only for a moment. She just sighed.

“You may be willing to start a war over this, Miss Cooldown, but I’m not. I will not, however, allow you to just walk away with her.” I looked down at Elly. …Don’t even think she knew what was going on. She just wanted to be out of here. She never asked for any of this. She winced as she shifted her weight again, and I eased her back down onto the bed.

>> ☐ Attarou and Wendy 07/04/14(Fri)15:52:53 No.33186848

“If there are no further complications – and that’s still an ‘if’ at this point – we’re willing to offer her a memory wipe, if she chooses. Is that more acceptable? Giving her the choice?” Her eyes narrowed just slightly, and I felt a chill in the air. That much, at least, Elly didn’t seem to pick up. I sunk down on the bed next to her.

“…Yeah. But she’s…” I squeezed my knife, then dismissed it. ...She was a kid. Would she even know if she could live with that kind of memory? …I’d met a handful of people that had dealt with their own witches, and you had to be made of some pretty strong shit to walk away intact.

“She’s a member of the Sixth, Miss Cooldown.” Her tone shifted. It was colder, now. Commanding. It matched her new expression flawlessly. …It sounded better coming from her than the distant kindness she’d been showing, though. At least it wasn’t vaguely insulting. “It hasn’t escaped my notice that you’ve been doing nothing but coddle her since you got here.” The Warmaster’s tail swished behind her, and for a moment, I was a rabbit in front of a wolf. I glared back as steady as I could.

…I’d split her fucking stomach if she gave me a reason. She knew it, too. Not sure if I could have taken her in a fight, but I was already making a plan. Don’t doubt for a second that she was, too.

“Do you really think she’ll be better off rotting in the Eighth, Miss Cooldown?” Her eyes were a deep red, more natural than Annie’s or Miss Marigold’s. Staring down Leman Russ was like staring down nature itself.

“We’re not gonna let that happen again. What happened before was…disgusting, and we’re not letting our little shitcubator pull that ever again.” It was all too easy to get pulled into her rhythm. I found my own tone evening out, even as every muscle in my body was coiled, ready to rip her throat out.

With the way it was implied that the bike was not fast enough, I would speculate that it was a hint from Decu that not using timestop would result in Misaka dying.

As such, I would think the one in greatest danger is not Misaka, but rather Sayaka or Chiaki (if Pinky knows we broke our promise to her).

“That isn’t what I mean. Do you really think a pretty cage full of sweets and video games is going to be any better for her?” I couldn’t read her. Not at all, and it made me edgy. She didn’t seem angry. Didn’t seem upset. Just…steely. Entirely sure of herself. Like she walked in and owned the both of us.

“Better than Crazy Cunt. You know. The reason she doesn’t have a goddamn arm right now.” Least it was easy to stay pissed.

“This isn’t about Crunch, this is about Slam. The reason I’m hesitant to let her go with you isn’t that I’m worried she’ll end up overworked and broken, it’s that I’m worried you won’t push her at all. For an Officio that claims to be full of cold-blooded assassins-”

“Oh fuck off, the kid’s traumatized.” If Papers hadn’t been clinging to me like a baby bear cub I would have leapt right there. I could practically feel my knife on that haughty bitch’s throat. “Warmaster Springfield has been working her ASS off to get rid of the image that our girls are all bugfuck crazy monsters. You’re just shitting on us when we’re trying to do something nice for somebody we fucked over!” Her tone wasn’t changing at all even now, and it was really starting to piss me off. Elly shrunk away from me as I all but yelled at Russ.

“She can’t sit in a room and do nothing forever.” She raised her voice slightly, just slightly, and that was all it took to make the whole world quiet. “And you have no place encouraging it. She is in my Officio. You are not. And if you were, you would damn well not be allowed to continue treating her like a helpless kitten. You of all people should know better, Assassin.” She hissed the word out, like she didn’t believe it. She was mocking me.

…Maybe I’d gone soft. Maybe she was right.

“…Eleanor. Do you have anything you’d like out of life?” Russ spoke again, her tone gentler now, and she turned her liquid steel gaze on Papers.

“Just leave her alone-“

“I wasn’t talking to you, Miss Cooldown. I was never talking to you. I didn’t even realize you were in here until I smelled car exhaust and processed beef, and I wouldn’t let you stay here if I weren’t completely sure you and your American friends would throw a fit. Let her answer, please.” I opened my mouth, then shut it and looked to the kid.

“…candy shop…” she mumbled, numbly. At the Warmaster’s urging, she repeated herself, louder. “…I wanted to open a candy shop.” The kid’s faced burned red, and I couldn’t help but smile a little. …Never would have guessed.

“…I want to keep you with us forever.” Russ beamed at her, the first genuinely pleasant expression I think I’d ever seen on her. With just a few words, Elly broke the tension in the room in half. “But we’ve got a lot of work to do first.”

…She’d be alright. I’d heard a rumor once or twice that Russ had a family – a husband and a couple of puppies - and I’d believe it, with that expression. It was almost nurturing, and a little tiny part of me was kinda jealous. I tugged my hand away from Elly and moved to her other side, placing my hand on her shoulder instead, urging her toward Russ.

“…C’mon, kid,” I murmured to her. “It’s okay. I’m still here.”

“We’re going to keep you here at very least until you can defend yourself properly. Heather was clearly not the best choice for easing you into an Eversor’s lifestyle, and you clearly have a ways to go before you’re ready to attempt her level of…training.” …Even her own Warmaster had to force it out when it came to Crazy Cunt.

“You’ll be expected to train on your own, or find your own trainer at a more suitable level. In the interests of allowing you to focus more on your goals and your training, you will no longer be required to do paperwork for the Officio.” Russ nodded again, mostly to herself. I think. Papers gave me a look, apparently entirely bewildered. Confused. …I don’t think she ever expected someone to say she got to stop doing fucking paperwork, and I especially doubt she ever expected anybody to take her dream seriously.

“You will, however, be expected to continue contributing to the Officio’s operation. To that effect, you’ll be working under my younger sister, Jael, in managing one of our side-businesses, Sundry Offerings. Ideally, you can also get a bit of experience behind the counter this way.” I was starting to feel like an asshole. Seemed like she’d really come up with a plan that…actually gave the kid what she needed to get going. Didn’t even occur to any of the rest of us.

“You’re going to need to show a little more backbone, but you have a goal now, don’t you? And we’ll be happy to help you work toward it as you train to become an Eversor.” Yeah. She was definitely a mother. Looking at Elly now, it seemed like she might have been thinking more about her than even her parents ever had, let alone us. “Of course, to do that, you’ll need to kill a witch on your own OR defeat one of our Eversors in single combat.” Papers gave me another look. She needed somebody to back Russ up before she’d believe it. …Poor kid couldn’t even do that much. Fuck.

‘Don’t fuck this up for her,’ the wolf glared at me over Elly’s shoulder. She all but mouthed it. My eyes snapped to her, then down to the kid’s, and I ruffled her hair.

“…Seems like Crunch is out of the picture, kid. And you’re off the hook for bitch duty. Why don’t you, uh…You think you’ll be okay sticking it out here until you’ve gotten your footing? We can talk about taking you back into the Eighth once Miss Russ is satisfied.” The Warmaster gave me an approving smile, and my cheeks burned a little. …Papers looked a little hurt, but gave me a nod.

“We’ll be testing you again as soon as your leg’s healed, so get to training as hard as you can before then.” Russ and I relaxed in near-unison, but Elly went as stiff as a board.

“What.” Elly squeaked the word out in her small, choked voice. “I can barely even walk, how am I-“

“You’ll manage. And Jael and I’ll be delighted to help you along the road to your own candy shop while you train.” Was that…excitement? She was really into that fucking candy shop. Maybe she just liked seeing the kid grow a purpose; I sure was.

“…What about Crazy Cu… …Crunch?” Her shoulders slumped. She’d given in, like she…kind of always did, I guess, since I’d known her.

“Heather’s taken a forcible leave of absence for the next…month.” The Warmaster’d barely betrayed her emotions so far, but the way she said it made me think it wasn’t exactly the punishment she had in mind. “You don’t need to worry about her for now.”

Papers twirled the little red sucker in her hand and nodded slowly.

“Maybe she’ll die,” I offered. Russ let out a small sigh, but it made the kid smile awkwardly up at me. Maybe she forgave me a little.

“I don’t want her to die. …I just…want her to leave. Forever. But a month is…okay. I guess.”

“A month will be plenty of time. I’m sure she’ll be a changed woman when she returns.” Russ reached out to pat Elly’s other shoulder, and the two of them exchanged awkward almost-smiles. “She shouted as much herself. Repeatedly. While she insisted she be allowed to pay for the ‘most magnificent robot arm’ we can have designed for you.” Another self-satisfied nod. “We’ve already begun making arrangements with the Second’s Mechanicus division."

"She…what." Elly opened her mouth, then shut it. …She didn't want a MAGNIFICENT ROBOT ARM or whatever Crunch wanted for her. She wanted a regular arm, so she could do regular things. …That's how she was. But she kept quiet and nodded. A dark look crossed Russ's face; she probably understood, but…

…Well, we'd have done the same thing. 'Regular things' aren't always an option for us anymore. Maybe she'd be able to get an extra, something more ordinary, and swap them back and forth, once she was bringing more of a paycheck in.

Russ stood and stretched, her ears twitching just a little, but I called out to her before she could leave. …One thing was bugging me.

"…It was restricted, wasn't it? …The place she took us. Only way I can see to explain the…the witch. And she just gets a month off and an apology check?" Elly's witch. There were only a handful of places in the world where that could happen. …Kid didn't need to know even that much, though.

"It isn't your place to question our Officio's policies, Miss Cooldown." Russ smiled coolly at me. Seemed like that was all she did. "But Heather was entirely within her rights as a Rank Leader. We do understand that her judgment was…subpar, but we're all hoping a month of training with the warrior-nuns in the Seventh will do her some good, in more ways than one. Is there anything else?"

I started to shake my head, but paused halfway through.

Because, y'know... predestination is a tricksy thing.

What if rushing off to "save" Misaka is the very thing that causes her death?

Pinky's...complicated. She can't say she likes her, but she owes her a lot. But she wouldn't say she likes Amber, either, and they're best friends.

Mickey's alright. Good people, got her head on straight. Manages to be a potent Eversor without being bugfuck crazy, good on her. They don't exactly hang out, Mickey's more one of Amber's friends. Or Sab's, somewhat more awkwardly.

I will say Sayaka actually didn't have confirmation on whether Wendy was alive until this meeting; she was going by what Amber had said, and was still somewhat skeptical.

Torture is an art.

Though honestly, its a matter of boundaries. Really it was sweet and in just about any other situation it would have been welcome.

Its a matter of hats. We were both literally and metaphorically wearing the warmasters hat.

Honestly, just saying "we'll talk" is probably sufficient.

Unless she does it again.

So, what we're looking for is something that acts as a deterrent against that behavior.

We should probably start by asking her why she thinks we didnt take her on the Misaka rescue and correcting any misinterpretations

Nah, well... Midori has already implied that while she likes helping her family, she doesn't want to be a "ramen chef" for the rest of her life.

I'm all for punishing her and letting her know that she did something dumb. Telling her "we'll talk later", while it wasn't my choice, will give her some time to reflect on her actions. After that, well, some light punishment and that might embarrass her without hurting her feelings is what I had in mind.

Ramen chef is a tricky subject that I'd rather avoid, considering our previous conversations with her. Sticking her in a maid costume? Comedy gold.

Also an excuse to draw Meidori

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 07/05/14(Sat)10:47:58 No.33204505

You have no idea how fast the Schpeltiger is going, or how hard Wendy is pushing the beastly white motorcycle. All you know is it's not going fast enough for your liking. Not even close.

And that in itself is unacceptable.

You promised, you murmur to yourself.

Two timestops. You need one of them now.

Just one, to save someone important to you.

Please.

>> ☐ Deculture 07/05/14(Sat)10:49:40 No.33204523

>>33204505

Kong?" You hear Wendy shout at you over the Schpeltiger's deafening roar as you take one hand off the handlebars, placing it on your Shield. Fingers gripping the dented rim. "KONG! The hell are you doing?! Hold on to the fucking handlebars! I'm not going to stop if you fall off, goddammit--"

"We're not going fast enough!" You yell back. "We need to go faster! And I know how to make us go faster!"

"WHAT?" Both Wendy and Sayaka shout at you at the same time. "Murderface, are you fucking blind? Look at US!" Your Equerry all but snarls at you from behind your ex.

"We are setting the fucking road on fire! There are four rocket engines on this fucking thing, and they're all running so fucking hot my cape is catching fire just being near them! At this speed we'll reach the docks in three, four minutes - any faster and we're going to melt our faces off breaking the fucking sound barrier! This is FAST ENOUGH!"

"Nowhere near fast enough," You repeat. "Not even fucking close."

There's a moment of silence - at least, what passes for silence with the Schpeltiger's roaring engine drowning out all else - before Wendy intones something right into your ear. "..You're going to do something stupid again, aren't you?"

You turn to regard her, before nodding. Yes. Yes, you are going to do something stupid.

"...Right." Wendy shakes her head, before calling out to Sayaka. "Mickey?"

"Yeah?"

"Hold on tighter, alright?" It's here that your ex seems to whimper in pain as Sayaka's arms cinch around her. "...No, wait, tighter than that, I can still feel some organs left intact. Not THAT fucking tight, for fuck's sake!"

"S-sorry! But why? What's Murderface going to do now?"

"What she does best," Wendy breathes. "Another one of her bad ideas."

Despite everything, this makes you smile. You suppose that's why you liked Wendy so understood you in a way that no one else - not even Mami - could.

"It's going to be real fucking weird real fucking fast!" You shout at the both of them. "Whatever you see, whatever you hear, just hold on and focus on where we're going! If anyone calls you by name, or tries to get you to stop or let go, just ignore it! Don't look, don't listen, and don't believe their lies!"

"...Wait, shit." Sayaka's eyes go wide as realization dawns on her. "Murderface, NO! You stupid fuck, don't--"

You crank your Shield all the way to the right. The gears inside gnashing together loudly, creating horrible grinding noises as you brute-force it to work. To do what it's always been supposed to do, and what nothing else could ever hope to.

The world around you slows, stops, and then freezes absolutely still. The colors draining from everything in an ever-widening flood of gray, black and faded white. Nothing you didn't expect, and nothing you're not accustomed to.

What you didn't expect was the landscape suddenly being turned into a post-apocalyptic nightmare, with ruins and corpses instead of houses and its inhabitants. You also didn't expect the clear sky, still painted in the dark colors of pre-sunrise morning, turned into a bloody shade of pink - the color of a goddess' bloodstained dress.

You also didn't expect the screaming. The screaming of a thousand souls in the distance, screaming in rage and anger and in suffering. Each voice sounding just like...well, your own.

And somewhere from the sky, feathers begin to fall.

Black feathers. Raven's feathers.

What the fucking shit?

"Is...is this what's it's like for you, Murderface?" Sayaka's voice suddenly cuts through the silence - the time stop seemingly muffling everything else, including the roar of the Schpeltiger's engines, into near-inaudibility. "Is...is this what it's like whenever you stop time?"

How do you respond?

[]...No. It's...it's never been like this.

Maybe Pinky kept Homucifer out before, but now that Pinky gave us a free timestop, she is not there and thats given Homucifer access to the timestop-world.

You know, I wonder if maybe we should be consulting the three stooges at this point? If the screaming voices sound like our voices, the three stooges might know whats happening.

That's on my to-do list, but I haven't had much chance to get around to it yet.

My original idea was, since the newer banners are clearly of much better quality than the older ones, to remake the Chiaki banner and then use that as a template to make a Homucifer banner.

Which might have to wait a bit longer.

Didn't you just tell her not to fucking look?! You crane your neck to snarl at Sayaka, the Blueberry's face utterly pale as she continues to blatantly disobey a direct order. "Just keep your fucking head down and focus!"

"...It's like everything's gone to shit," the blue-haired Eversor murmurs, seemingly not hearing a word you'd just spat at her. "Like one of those Western movies, with the meteors and stuff. Except no one was around to stop the damn things, and they hit, and...everything just died. Everything just fucking died." You hear her take a deep, shuddering breath. "I...I didn't know, Murderface. I thought...I thought things just stopped for you, not like this--"

"Mickey, shut the fuck up and do what your Warmaster says, alright?" It's Wendy who speaks this time, after being completely silent since you triggered your Time Stop. "You're her Equerry, so fucking act like it." It's here that her voice becomes a bit less harsh, a bit more gentle. "...Like Kong says, focus. We only need to be here for a couple of minutes."

"Y-yeah. Yeah, alright." Sayaka takes another shaky breath, letting it out in a helpless laugh. "I just...I just didn't know. Holy shit. I thought you just liked to get drunk because you were naturally just a shitty person with shitty vices. But this..." Her voice trails off into the unnatural silence of your Time Stop, with the ambient screaming itself subsiding into nothing more than faint yet constant shrieking in the distance. Joining the rest of the sounds muffled by your ability to fuck with reality.

"Sky didn't look so gay either. ...I gotta admit, it is kinda creepy. Really. And I know about creepy."

"...Kong." Wendy says your...well, HER nickname for you, and for the first time, concern colors it rather than contempt or anger.

"What the fuck did they do to you?"

Mm, well... Chiaki I guess it goes back to when I first asked Decu if Chiaki had any scars.

She had never been described as having any before, but I had just finished drawing a picture of her in a bikini and it felt a bit plain. So, it seemed reasonable to me to ask, at that point, if Chiaki had any scars. Decu considered it and answered that, yes, I should do a version with scars.

But since she'd never been described with scars BEFORE, I only drew them on her body, reasoning that her costume covered them all.

That's it, really.

Random question. Was it ever confirmed that it actually IS Oriko thats going after Misaka?

I mean the whole feathery landscape and the recent Clara Doll dream suggest that Homucifer is out to get us now.
According to the three stooges she cannot attack us directly. That leaves going after loved ones.

And Misaka is basically the closest person to us that was not close to us or otherwise surrounded by multiple girls.

It's related to Kirika's death so it's highly likely.

The feathery landscape and the Clara Dolls are, so far as we know, unrelated to anything else except Homucifer's vendetta towards killing her other selves.

The feather covered landscape is thus a direct result of engaging timestop and voluntarily coming into the place where crazy godlike concepts dwell.

Homucifer is searching for Chiaki.

And Chiaki decides to drop by for a visit.

You shake your head. Maybe it's a good idea for the both of you to take Wendy's advice too. You just want to get through this and to Misaka. It's not like this is a picnic for you either, anyway.

"...Yeah. Sure, Kong. Whatever you say." And with that, your American ex-girlfriend sinks into the same silence that your own Equerry is doing her utmost best to keep. The blue-haired Eversor now simply holding onto Wendy and burying her face into the other girl's scarf, blocking out all sight.

Huh. Well. That's one way of dealing with it, you guess.

With you having stopped time in its tracks, the road turns into nothing more than a sparsely-populated parking lot to blaze right through, one that Wendy navigates without any difficulty at all. In fact, it's nothing short of impressive - her not only being able to look past the morbid scenery and unnatural sky to keep her sense of direction and speed, but also doing it with such a brutish, oversized hulk like the Schpeltiger. As if she'd been born to drive the thing all her life, and did so, even in her dreams. Even in her nightmares.

Soon enough, the docks - where the warehouses are situated, and where Warehouse 69, Misaka's home and gun storage, is - looms into view. Unlike the rest of the ruined city, the docks seem to be relatively untouched, still in the frozen present rather than in the corpse-filled, decaying future that your Shield keeps showing you.

"We're here," Wendy calls out. "Mickey, get your face out of my fucking scarf and get ready. We're here, now we just gotta look for Misaka's warehouse, right? ...What number was it again?"

"69," You repeat from memory. "Take a left at the third junction and then go straight, hers is at the very end--"

As soon as you give Wendy the directions, it's here that your Time Stop finally ceases - the gears and springs in your Shield seemingly wound up to the point that the entire metal disc springs back forcibly into its former position with a jarring crash of metal. Color and sound immediately floods - no, blasts - back into reality, along with the natural progression of time and how the sky used to look like.

Just in time too, as the dock entrance that you're approaching at speed seems to be barricaded by what appears to be a group of Magical Girls. Seven of them, an entire squad, each one wearing a blue-and-gold band on their upper right arm. Ahriman's colors. Oriko's colors.

All of them doing their best to recover from the abject shock of seeing a big-ass rocket with wheels appear out of fucking nowhere and now barreling towards them like a bat out of hell.

You could hear them shouting, calling for reinforcements, and one of them breaking away to run deeper into the maze of warehouses. Valiantly fighting down the obvious fear and panic rising in their chests as the bike gets closer, allowing them to see just who is riding the damn thing.

"Let me take care of these dildos," Sayaka shouts, equal amounts of relief and eagerness coloring her voice. Relief, most probably, from finally being let out of your Time Stop, and eagerness to get back to normalcy by killing things. "Get to Misaka, I'll catch up! Less of these crazies we have to deal with there the easier this'll be!"

[]Let your Equerry loose as you and Wendy continue to Warehouse 69.
[]Refuse, have Wendy crash through the barricade. You'll need Sayaka close by when shit hits the fan.
